WILL PROSECUTE MELLEN

Attorney General to Proceed In Conspiracy Case Indictment.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The attorney general is preparing to proceed against Charles S. Mellen under the indictment returned against him in 1912 for conspiracy under the antitrust act in the so called Grand Trunk case. This indictment was obtained under the Taft administration. Mr. McReynolds always has expressed to push it, but he has been waiting on a settlement of the dissolution proceedings before undertaking any criminal action. It is believed the attorney general will also try to move against some of the New Haven directors.

Mr Mellen and his attorney have contended that he has gained immunity through testifying before the interstate commerce commission, but the attorney general is likely to try that question out in the courts if necessary.

SEEING BENTLEY OFF

An Interruption That Was Not Resented.

By ETHEL SEVERO.

Amy Sheldon, leaning idly over the steamer's rail, watched the crowd on the pier and wished just for a moment that there had been an opportunity to get word to some of the people she could trust.

This was all so different from her last sailing, and it brought more sharply to her memory the scene of two days before when she had given Dick Nesbit his ring and had declared that she hated the very sight of his face.

She had last sailed in June, and the pier had been crowded, but until the very last she had seen Dick's smiling face framed in an indistinct blur of other faces. Now she would look in vain, if indeed she looked at all.

She had about decided to go to her stateroom until the boat should swing into the stream.

She half turned to suggest to her aunt that course of action when she caught sight of Dick making his way through the crowd about the gangway, and presently he came on board with a heavy suit case that seemed to argue his determination to take passage on the Aurania.

Amy half turned back to the rail; then she turned again and made her way to the lower deck, where she knew that the purser's office was located.

Passing rapidly through the gangway, she saw that it really was Dick, though he was in earnest conversation with a man in blue and brass, and he did not see her.

He had his pocketbook in his hand, and with flashing eyes Amy made her way back to the upper deck, where her aunt still sat in the winter sunshine enjoying the bustle that preceded the departure.

One of the most admirable things about Aunt Molly was her willingness to do what her tempestuous little niece wished to do, but even the usually placid Aunt Molly demurred when Amy stormed up and demanded that they leave the ship at once.

"But I've said goodby to the Brookes, and Mrs. Brooke is going to send all our mail in care of the London agent," protested the little old lady. "We can't go back home after telling the Brookes that we were to be gone until fall. She will tell all her friends and"—

"And that's just the trouble," interrupted Amy, with a stamp of her little foot. "Mrs. Brooke has been talking—already. She must have gone to the telephone the moment we left last night and told everybody she ever knew."

"But what will Dick think if you start and then turn back?" reminded Aunt Molly, determined not to give up a spring in the south of France without exhausting every argument.

"That's just the trouble," explained Amy. "That horrid Mrs. Brooke must have called him up last night after promising that she would not tell a soul. He's on board. I just saw him in the purser's office buying his ticket."

"I thought that they bought them at the dock," objected Aunt Molly, but Amy shook her head.

"You can buy tickets on board at the last moment. I suppose that Dick—I mean Mr. Nesbit—had to wait until he could settle about his practice being looked after—not that there is so much to the practice," she added spitefully. "I don't believe that he's been in court this month."

"Is he altogether to blame for that?" asked Aunt Molly, fencing for time in which to marshal other arguments.

"And suppose that I did let him waste a lot of time with me!" retorted Amy. "I've been telling him for the last month that I was tired of seeing him about and that our engagement was all a mistake."

"Then I don't think that he is following you," advanced Aunt Molly. "Dick is not the sort of man to follow when he is not wanted. If he is on board it is because he has to reach Europe by the first steamer, and he won't bother us in the least."

"Because I shan't give him a chance," explained Amy promptly. "I am going down to the stateroom to have the steward take our steamer trunks back to the dock. It is lucky that we arranged to have our other baggage follow."

"But what will people say?" demanded Aunt Molly as she rose and prepared to follow her energetic niece. It was plainly to be seen that the trip was off or at least postponed, and Aunt Molly knew the signs well enough to realize when resistance was useless.

Amy by dint of liberal tipping managed to collect her things on the dock just as the final warning sounded. For the moment it was useless to try to leave the dock.

The port captain stood beside the remaining gangway ready to superintend the lowering of the last connection between ship and shore, and a line was stretched to keep back those who had not gone to the end of the pier to wave a last farewell.

The sides of the ship were lined with eager faces, some smiling, some bedewed with tears. Aunt Molly stood guard over their belongings and looked wistfully at the fortunate ones on the decks.

Just as the signal was given to hoist Dick Nesbit appeared at the head of the gangplank and dashed down, his feet not touching the dock before the upper end of the plank was hoisted clear of the ship's side.

He sprang lightly aside to escape the swaying edge of the chute and in doing so he almost bumped into Aunt Molly, who was making a brave endeavor not to look disappointed.

The black bulk moved slowly past the open section of the shed, but Aunt Molly did not see it now. She was busy watching Amy and Dick.

Nesbit, after a single glance at the frowning girl, devoted his conversation to Aunt Molly, with whom he was a favorite.

"Did you get afraid of seasickness at the last moment?" he demanded gayly. "I didn't even know that you were thinking of going abroad or I should have sent some flowers."

Aunt Molly glanced triumphantly at Amy, but that crimson cheeked young woman gave no sign that she had heard the disclaimer.

"I came precious close to taking the trip myself," continued Dick. "You know what a pest Fred Bentley always is when there is a wedding. He always wants to decorate the trunk and do all those things that tease the bridal pair.

"When it came to getting married himself he was scared stiff, for he knew of a dozen chaps who had it in for him. He married Belle very quietly last night and came aboard this morning before daylight. Some reporter asked Ben Houghton about it, and we found that Fred was locked in his stateroom.

"Trimmins, the purser of this ship is a jolly sort of chap. I've crossed with him three times, and I know him very well. The boys got me to hustle down here with a lot of junk in a suit case. I gave Trimmins some money to tip Fred's cabin and saloon stewards, and Fred's going to get a daily hint from his victims. I was so busy explaining that Trimmins had fairly to fire me down the gangplank."

"And you were not sailing yourself?" asked Aunt Molly.

"I only wish that I could—to see the fun," declared Dick, with twinkling eyes. "If it hadn't been that I caught a big case last night I think I should have done so. I bet Fred's sorry by this time tomorrow that he ever heard of white ribbons and old shoes as decoration for honeymoon trunks and wedding cars."

Amy was watching the steamer swinging into midstream with the aid of two bustling little tugs, but from the corner of her eye Aunt Molly saw that the girl heard.

"And, speaking of cars," ran on Dick, "shall I get you one?"

Without waiting for an answer he tore off up the dock to retain one of the few waiting autos, then hurried back to escort Aunt Molly and the trunks.

It was not until he had helped Aunt Molly into the car and had turned to show a similar courtesy to Amy that she spoke.

"I thought that Mrs. Brooke told you we were leaving on this steamer and that you were following me," she said hurriedly. "I am sorry that I was so silly, and yet I am glad, because I know now that it was just because I was tired and silly that I broke the engagement. Will you come over tonight, Dick—and bring back the ring?"

"Will I?" he echoed jubilantly. "I should say that I would. And, do you know, I am almost sorry that I put up that job on Fred."

"Don't be afraid," reassured Amy smilingly. "That case will be over and we'll be on our own honeymoon before he gets back to play tricks on us. If you had not played the trick I should have sailed, and you"—

"Would not be the happiest man in town," completed Dick. "I guess Fred was of some use, after all."

CRIMINAL IS LIKE A JEKYLL-HYDE

WOULD GET IN SOCIAL SWIM

Boston, June 22.—A remarkable Jekyl and Hyde career, involving murders and thievery at one time, and playing the lion as a tango dancer at social gatherings at other times, was uncovered when the police made further investigations of the past of Lawrence, "Chippy" Robinson, who shot and killed Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton here while trying to avoid capture for three murders in the Thompson Jewelry store holdup at Grand Rapids, Mich., last September.

He has been living at the Commonwealth hotel for many days under the name of George Spencer. Search of his room showed that he wore the costliest clothing and linen. His wardrobe was faultless, even to his canes. He told friends at the dancing academy of Mrs. Helen Sweney that he intended to spend the summer at the fashionable Mount Kineo house in Maine.

Spencer went to motor runs for a good time. He traveled in automobiles. While attending the dancing academy he met Eva Mundy of Revere. She thought he was a fine young man. He called at her home and during that period E. E. Gray, who lives in the same hotel, lost a watch.

Insists on "Refined" Company.

One of Robinson's plans was to get well acquainted with a few people in dance halls and then ply his art as a pickpocket among the dancers.

During his visits to the Sweney dance academy Robinson is said to have sold the proprietor diamonds worth $300 or more. He claimed he was expert in estimating the value of building materials. Another time he claimed he was a proprietor of a western railroad.

The clerk at the Commonwealth hotel said Robinson frequently asked him what places he might go to get in touch with "refined people." He told the clerk something to the effect that he did not wish to associate with "roughnecks."

Born in Washington Court House, O., Robinson has a record in every large city. Besides the daylight robbery in Grand Rapids another at Washington, W. Va., is charged to him. He operates at Saratoga, and frisked the revelers at the New Orleans Mardi Gras. According to a chum of his here with the Barnum & Bailey circus, "Chippy" started with Buffalo Bill when the picking was good. Later he was a barker with Forepaugh.

Pinkerton Men Warned.

Recently while the Barnum circus was in Philadelphia, the Pinkertons, on his trail for the Grand Rapids murders, came to the circus. Mysteriously tipped, he had just gone, and a circus crony of Robinson's told the detective to beware of him, for he packed a gun and would pull it on sight.

HOME TOWN IS TORN BY RAE KRAUSS CASE

Petitions Against Pardon Seem to Have Majority.

Hartford City, Ind., June 22.—If Mrs. Rae Krauss, serving a life sentence for murdering her stepdaughter, Crystal Krauss, is released from prison by the state board of pardons it will be over the protest of at least 1,000 citizens of this city. Petitions against her pardon now contain more than 500 names. Prominent society women carrying petitions have sworn Attorney Burns not to divulge their names. The same secrecy conceals those circulating petitions for Mrs. Krauss. The only one known is Harry Colhower, a blacksmith, who has obtained 200 signers. There are five other petitions, most of which, it is said, are being carried by relatives of the imprisoned woman.

Colhower says Mrs. Krauss' petition will have at least 500 signatures and possibly more. E. M. Hudson, sheriff at the time Mrs. Krauss was in jail here; Nathan Krauss, the aged grandfather of the murdered girl; Justice Clark Croninger, Arthur Stewart, Deputy Sheriff Albert Sutton and Frank Frash are carrying petitions against Rae Krauss.

The Rev. M. F. Dawson, pastor of the United Brethren church, delivered a sermon Sunday on "Justice and Mercy." His sermon was against the wholesale pardoning of criminals and had special reference to the Krauss case.

ENVOYS START ALL OVER AGAIN

First Full Conference in Week Is in Progress.

REBELS TO TAKE PART, RUMOR

No Official Statement Forthcoming Regarding What Is Going on Behind Doors of Mediation Meeting—Many Believe Way Out of Carranza Complication Can Be Found.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22.—The first full conference held by the Mexican and American delegates and the three South American mediators in more than a week took place today. At this conference Dr. Naon, the Argentine minister, explained to the delegates the new suggestion which in his mind would justify them in continuing their negotiations. No further official statements will be forthcoming from either side until some tangible step has been taken or some decisive agreement arrived at.

Would Admit Rebels.

The report that Dr. Naon's plan is to permit the constitutionalists to come to the mediation conference and discuss the international phases of the Mexican problem aroused much interest on all sides here. Although there still are many here who believe that the mediators are as determined as ever to make the participation of Carranza conditional upon the declaration of armistice, there are others in the immediate entourage of the three South American diplomats who believe that a way out of this difficulty can easily be found.

Whatever else may be embodied in Dr. Naon's plan is known to no one here except the Argentine minister himself and his two colleagues. One thing is certain, and that is that the conference practically started all over again this morning.

HOT WAVE HITS WHEAT BELT

Harvest Hand Killed, Another Stricken and Rest Flee Kansas.

Kansas City, Mo., June 22.—At Salina, Kas., today George E. Mulvane, a tailor of Detroit, Mich., collapsed in a wheat field while working as a harvest hand and died from heat prostration. Warren Sheldon of Flora, Ill., who was working near Pawnee Rock, Kas., succumbed, suffering violent convulsions, and was taken to a hospital.

Immediately twenty-five men working in the vicinity quit their jobs and left the state on the first train. Offers of more wages failed to tempt them to stay.

TORSO MYSTERY BAFFLES POLICE

Girl Thought to Be Victim Is Found Still Alive.

DOUBT STORY OF FISHERMAN

Startling Information Given Authorities that Young Man Carrying Sack and Stone Sinker Like One Found with Part of Body Is not Credited—Motive Mystery.

Schenectady, N. Y., June 22.—With the discovery that Katherine Collins, the Rotterdam Junction girl thought to be the victim of the Mohawk river mystery, was still alive and had written her parents but two days ago from Cranesville, where she is employed, the local police are now practically just where they were when the torso was found Friday by fishermen. District Attorney Blessing and Chief of Police Ryan both admit that their many clews were now practically at an end and unless there are some new developments they do not know just which way to move next.

Doubt Fisherman's Story.

The startling information supplied by Claude Hanlon, the fisherman, that he had rented a boat about a month ago to a man who acted nervous and carried a sack similar to the one in which the torso was found and a heavy concrete sinker like the one attached is doubted by the police.

Men under the direction of the district attorney are still busy dragging the river in hopes of finding some of the other parts of the body.

The motive for the crime is still a mystery. Revenge is now the only theory.

It is reported here that Chase will endeavor to elude process servers Monday and probably will not again be seen in Buffalo uniform here during the present series.

Chase covered himself with glory in his first appearance in a Buffalo uniform today by getting two of the five hits registered against the pitching of Lange by his new team mates.

CUTOFF MAY LESSEN LOSS BY STRANDING

Thousands of Dollars Will Be Saved by Work.

Houghton, Mich., June 22.—The building of the Princess point cutoff in the Portage lake waterways system, between Keweenaw bay on the east and the Portage ship canals on the west, cutting the Keweenaw peninsula off the northern peninsula of Michigan, for which $20,000 has been appropriated, is expected to prevent loss of thousands of dollars annually, due to vessels stranding on the point.

Big freighters and even the larger passenger boats bring up on Princess point, causing delays of hours and sometimes days. All this will be avoided, vesselmen believe, the cutoff doing away with several short turns in Portage river.

It is probable, too, that the construction of the cutoff will result in many of the big ore and grain carriers using the Portage lake waterways, both up and downbound, during the stormy fall weather, rather than incur the risks of rounding Keweenaw point. Credit for securing the appropriation is given the Copper Country Commercial club.

HENRY LYONS

Henry Wilbur Lyons was born Oct. 23, 1880 near Hudson and died June 14, 1914 in Tecumseh. He was married to Miss Bessie Winfield Nov. 23, 1902. Two children and the widow are left to mourn his departure. At the age of sixteen years he united with the Methodist church of which he was a consistent member until he died. The church showed her confidence by giving a local preaching license in which office he was a faithful preacher and exponent of the truth. Brother Lyons possessed heroic elements of character. His patient and manly bearing in the face of deprivation, suffering and death won the sympathy of many friends. In time of great suffering he would say. "The Cross is not Greater than the Crown" His faith in his master was steadfast to the last. He said, I would not give up my hope in God for all the world. The old gospel is efficacious yet and with the saints of old death loses its sting and the grave its victory in the triumph of a loving faith in Jesus Christ. A loving husband, a devoted father a good citizen a loyal servant of God has passed into the skys.

"Servant of God well done;
Thy glorious warefare's past;
The Battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

A short service was held at the home in Tecumseh by the pastor and on Wednesday the 17th, in the M. E. Church at Moshierville, Mich. The funeral sermon was preached to a large concourse of friends and neighbors and in the beautiful little cemetery of this village is the grave of our brother.

PANAMA CANAL TAKES ON WARLIKE APPEARANCE

Reported Mexican Threat Cause of Preparations to Meet Hostile Army.

Sixteen miles of trenches for riflemen, with as many miles more of approach and maneuvering trails, suitable for cavalry and mountain, even field, artillery, have been completed along the Panama canal.

The trenches are capable of accommodating, if necessary, 25,000 men. They have been so plotted that in many places they will make possible not only frontal but flank fire upon any attacking party.

Soldiers of the Tenth infantry are on duty at the locks and at every other part of the canal where a crank and dynamite might do damage or where a hostile army might strike.

Work on the fortifications at either entrance to the canal has so far progressed that there are several pieces of high power ordnance in readiness to do effective work at any moment.

Officers of the submarine fleet on duty at Panama have "plotted ranges" over the entire field of this ordnance.

Members of the zone police have been put on "plain clothes" duty, and attend every party of tourists, ready at once to note any suspicious action by any one who might try to see too much.

Work on the trenches has been under way for some time. The other activities followed the circulation of hand bills in Panama City announcing that the Mexicans would "never allow the Panama canal to be finished."

Visitors have lately been surprised by the appearance at every station along the way of soldiers on their trains. Guarding bridges and culverts, the blowing up of which might interrupt traffic across the isthmus, as well as guarding the approaches to the locks of the canal themselves, these soldiers have missed their accustomed ice water. Every train that stops in their neighborhood, therefore, is boarded by the thirsty men, to the amazement of the passengers, and while good natured conductors look the other way, the soldiers drink deep.

BAD TEETH MAKE BAD BOYS

Charles D. Hilles Thinks Dentistry Can Cure Much Degeneracy.

NEW YORK. — Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee and president of the New York Juvenile association, says he believes that much of the so-called badness in boys is primarily due to decayed teeth and their consequent inability to properly masticate their food.

He bases his conclusions on observance of boys sent as delinquents to the Children's Village at Dobbs Ferry, where an average of 550 youngsters are getting a chance to become decent and self-respecting citizens. He declares that ninety-one per cent of the boys received suffer from bad teeth and that after two years of care with a dentist, together with practice in the art of using teeth brush and paste, the boys are turned out 90 per cent good instead of 90 per cent bad.

TOLLS BILL TO BE AMENDED

Compromise Has Been Agreed to by Norris and Simmons.

WASHINGTON. — A compromise amendment to the tolls repeal bill, drawn by Senator Simmons for the administration forces and Senator Norris for Republican senators, will be offered when the bill comes to a vote in the senate.

The new amendment embodies all of the original Simmons amendment, recommended by the senate interoceanic canal committee, as well as the more emphatic reservation in the amendment proposed by Senator Norris several days ago as a substitute for the committee amendment. The resolution of Senator Sutherland to arbitrate the tolls exemption question with Great Britain may come up before the vote on the bill.

HISTORY

Early History of the Schools of Tecumseh.

BRIEF SKETCH DATING FROM 1824 TO 1857.

Telling of the Branch of the State University that was located Here.

(In looking over the leaves of an old scrap book we find the following written by Mrs. Geo. N. Stacy which will of interest to our readers of today.)

In writing a History of our schools, one has necessarily to dip into our early village history, and of how much interest this is to each one of us.

As we study the history of these early settlers of Tecumseh, we cannot but be impressed with the fact, that the women of those days, had their time so fully occupied that it did not require a new "cult" in order to cure them of nervous troubles and imaginary ill, for we read of their large families, five children in the Brown family, five in the Evans and seven in the Abner Spaffords and etc.

The idealistic philosophy of Christian Science, New Thought, Emanuel Movement would not appeal to them but materialistic philosophy was something they could understand, as illustrated with a Birch whip and the gospel of Hell fire and brimstone: they required strong food, and if this generation has improved on these early times, it remains for history to show.

The establishment of a school seemed the first thing of importance for them to which they turned their attention. This first school-house was constructed of tamarack poles and was twelve feet square, stood not far from the Red Mill in Brownville; here Mrs. Mary Spafford, wife of Geo. Spafford taught the first school ever organized in Lenawee county in the winter of 1824 25.

The village school and only school until 1832 was built by the efforts of a few individuals in 1826 was a frame house about 18ft. by 20ft. and stood a little south of the old Presbyterian church on Maumee street: this school was taught by Col. E. Wood whose school was celebrated for its exhibitions.

In 1832, Mr. LaBaron then a young man returned to Woodstock, Vermont and married Miss Maria Tribou, and brought her here and lived in the house afterward known as the Dr Baldwin place. Mr. LeBaron assisted by his wife started a private school in the Old Court house, [then new] this school was very popular.

Mr. Benjaman, a superior scholar, established the first classical school in Tecumseh.

Then came the prosperous administration of Perley Bills; wishing an assistant, he sent east for a Miss Brown who seemed to please him so well in this capacity, that she held this position through life, under the name of Mrs. Perley Bills.

In 1859, a branch of the State University was opened in Tecumseh, in the Court House, which was called University Branch Building: this University Building; stood on the square now occupied by the standpipe; the Principals were appointed by the Regents of the University.

Mr. Harvey, a fine scholar, assisted by Wilson Gray of Dublin, Ireland were the first ones appointed. B. L. Baxter was principal then for three years and they had what they called a female department; this was kept separate from the rest of the school and was presided over by a very talented lady Mrs. J. Q. A. Wood of Ann Arbor; then followed in quick succession Mr. Green, F. O. Marsh, then followed Prof. Esterbrook of Grand Rapids, who was one of the most popular instructors in the State of Michigan.

Following him, J. E. Bateman, C. W. Nash in 1854, it was during C. W. Nash's time that a Union school organization was affected, it embraced the entire village and some adjoining territory. Up to this time, the high school had been kept in the Court House, but having out grown these quarters in 1854 the subject of a new High school was agitated. At a public meeting $2,000 was voted. In 1855 a site was purchased on the northwest corner of Ottawa and Shawee streets opposite Military square, then $6,000 more was voted to be borrowed on the bond of the district; the following was completed in 1856 and at a cost of $16,000.

It is somewhat amusing to read the discription of this building written at that time with what pride they point to this comodious three story building with its towers on each side the fine chapel on the third floor, and above all, it was warmed by a furnace, a grand luxury in those dayys.

We, who condemn this building as inartistic, illy arranged, poorly ventilated, a firetrap, its three stories, and old fashioned appearance should not speak too harshly of it, for with what care and thought and hard work this building was erected; to them, it was perfect and beautiful, to us it is not all that could bedesired; the difference lies only in our point of view.

Good Reason.

"I see that Brinkerton has at last quit smoking. His doctor told him more than a year ago that it was bad for him, and his wife has been trying for a long time to persuade him to give it up. Evidently he has at last been willing to listen to reason." "I don't know whether it can properly be called listening to reason or not. His pretty stenographer complained that cigar smoke hurt her throat."—Judge.

What Else Could He Do?

"Henry," said Mrs. Jason to her husband the other evening, "did you get a letter for me today?" "No, mother," meekly replied Hank, "there was nothing for you." "Henry," said the old lady very sternly, "I want you to speak to the postmaster in the morning and ask him to look around carefully. There must be a letter there for me." Henry went home at noon and lied about asking the postmaster.

STATE FAIR

"If we can by the two weeks of the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 7-18, stimulate an interest in the opportunities Michigan presents to manufacturers as the ideal spot for production, we will consider one of our tasks well done. No other State in the Union is so happily situated for transportation facilities as our own. Any number of excellent sites for factories are available along both railroads and waterways and we want manufacturers to know about them. When they do they will realize the other advantages that many factories will come to the Wolverine State."

"This year the fair will have the greatest exhibit of 'Michigan-Made' articles ever shown. Already the space alotted for this purpose has been contracted for. The exhibit will prove that Michigan manufacturers are abreast of the times and that their products are factors because of their worth and because the State's distributing agencies are such that these products may be set down at the consumers' door at less cost than other manufacturers have to meet.

Clement Shorter's proposal for the erection of a memorial to Oliver Goldsmith in London is likely to meet with success. The spot chosen is near the Temple church, where Goldsmith lies buried in an unknown grave. It was in the neighboring Brick court that he wrote "The Vicar of Wakefield," in a room that still exists. The memorial is to be a replica of the dramatist's statue at Trinity college, Dublin.

The excitement attendant upon his reunion with former friends yesterday had affected him to such an extent that he was noticeably nervous during his entire address at the commencement exercises and it is believed that this was in part the cause of his illness.

Da Gama, Naon and Mujica Have Had Wide Diplomatic Experience.

John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union, furnishes sketches of the three South American diplomatists who have undertaken to adjust Mexico's troubles at conferences in Canada beginning May 18.

Dr. Domicio da Gama, ambassador of Brazil, succeeded Joaquim Nabuco, who accomplished much to increase the friendship between his country and the United States, to which he was accredited. Da Gama began his professional life as a journalist. In 1893 he was appointed secretary to Brazil's special commission in Washington, where President Cleveland was arbiter in a question between Brazil and Argentina. From 1896 to 1900 he was connected with special missions in Europe. In 1901 he was made charge d'affaires at Brussels. In 1907 he was Brazilian minister to Peru and in 1908 was transferred to Argentina.

Dr. Romulo S. Naon, minister of Argentina, was first recognized in public life when he won a medal at the University of Buenos Aires for a thesis on a matter of great interest to his country. In 1902 he was elected to the lower house of the federal congress and also in 1906, distinguishing himself throughout as a debater. President Alcorta appointed Dr. Naon secretary of justice and public instruction. He was appointed minister of Argentina in Washington in 1911.

Eduardo Suarez Mujica is a native of Santiago, Chile, and studied law at the National university. Soon after obtaining his degree he received a post in the office of the minister of foreign affairs, and soon afterward was made assistant secretary of state. While thus in close touch with diplomatic life he had numerous intricate international problems to handle. He was called to become the intendente of the province of Altacama, which he later represented in the national congress. In 1908 the late President Montt gave him the portfolios of justice and public instruction. Senor Mujica entered the diplomatic service of Chile in 1909, when he was appointed minister to Mexico and Cuba.

A Man.

Such a busy man is he
All the sunny hours,
Up and down the garden beds,
Digging weeds and flowers.
Never man so bold and brave
In the house would stay
When the sunshine and the earth
Beckon him away.
See the dog, obedient
To his every whim.
How the little chicks will fly
At the sight of him!
How the geese will hiss
When he gives them chase!
Chanticleer and Brindle, too,
Join them in the race.
Every inch a valiant man
In the broad daylight.
Search and find him if you can
At the fall of night.
Folded close to mother's breast
Lies the head of gold—
Just a little baby boy,
Only four years old!

HELD THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequently rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only: they help weak kidneys to rid the blood of uric poison. There is no better recommended remedy.

Read the statement that follows:

Mrs. H. B. Worcester, 8 Clinton St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and I consider them a fine kidney medicine. I used them when suffering from lameness in my back and other symptoms of kidney trouble and they brought me prompt and satisfactory relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Worcester had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

Get Rid of the Torment of Rheumatism:

Remember how spry and active you were before you had rheumatism, backache, swollen, aching joints and stiff, painful muscles? Want to feel that way again? You can—just take Foley Kidney Pills. For they quickly clear the blood of poisons that cause your pain, misery and tormenting rheumatism. adv

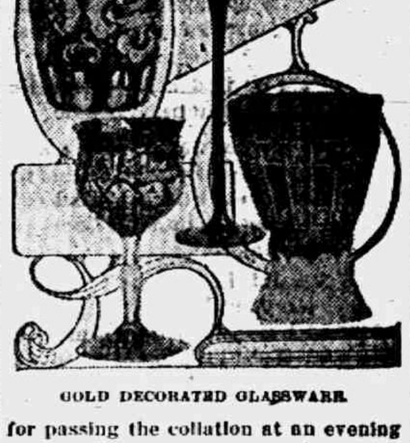
NOVELTIES IN CRYSTAL.

Glass Trays and Gold Decorated Tableware Are Attractive.

Daintiest among the new teapot stands are the circles in clear but thick glass, beveled or plain edged, that exactly fit over circles of finest linen delicately embroidered in white or colors. Although intended to prevent the teapot from scorching the table or the tray, these little circles will go under any medium sized hot dish and look charming when placed upon either a bare or a cloth covered dining or tea table.

Of the same character are the glass trays for serving tea or luncheon and for passing the collation at an evening party. These trays come in round, square and oval shapes, have mahogany, bronze, brass or wicker sides and often high curved or square handles by which they may be carried.



GOLD DECORATED GLASSWARE.

The lingerie under mat is easily fastened to the bottom of the tray by means of tiny pins forced into holes bored in the framing of the article. On the same principle are made the new muffin stands, which are handsomest in mahogany and glass because of the marked contrast between the two materials, but they are very stunning in bronze and crystal, and against the heavy metal framework the delicate lingerie matting is very effective.

Many charming and attractive new pieces of glassware are shown in the shops. There seems to be a tendency to favor fancy glass for table use. The gold decorated specimens which are illustrated here are considered very chic.

FREAKISH SHOWS.

A SINGLE NIGHT "OTHELLO."

Wolfsohn Turned the Play Into a Near Riot and Never Acted Again—George Rignold's Melancholy Romeo to Six Ambitious Amateur Juliets.

The freak play or the performance that is a travesty is little in evidence today, but it does not seem so long ago when a slump in business sometimes emboldened even the most conservative of theatrical managers to resort to extraordinary measures to attract at least one capacity audience.

One of the early freak performances was intended as an event of great artistic value. The late Henry Wolfsohn, who afterward became famous as an impresario, aspired to the great Forrest's mantle. The great tragedian was playing at Niblo's Garden in "Othello" and Wolfsohn, then twenty-two, had saved a little money with the idea of purchasing the privilege of appearing as the Moor in New York once at least. His ambition appealed to Marie Seebach, the German actress, who was appearing in that year (1868) at the Theatre Francais on West Fourteenth street. Wolfsohn paid the manager $1,000 for the privilege, besides himself selling out the capacity of the theater.

Although the audience was composed chiefly of his friends and relatives, the portrayal was so ludicrous that a riot seemed imminent and was only prevented through an appeal to the audience from Mme. Seebach to consider her own position. Wolfsohn never trod the boards again.

The next year in the same theater opera bouffe was the rage, owing to the tremendous hit of a comedian of the name of Gabel, who appeared as one of the two gendarmes in "Genevieve de Brabant." Gabel's popularity was so great that a benefit was tendered to him. He decided to present "Genevieve" as a travesty, the male principals assuming the female roles and the women those of the men. The house was sold out one hour after the advance sale opened. Speculators reaped a harvest.

The audience began to laugh before the curtain rose, the conductor was greeted with roars of merriment. Even the ushers were grinning in anticipation of a festival of fun. When Gabel appeared elaborately gowned as Genevieve it was fully two minutes before he was allowed to sing the beautiful serenade number. He, too, was bursting with laughter. The same reception greeted each of the principals, but from then on the performance was about as enlivening as a funeral. The theater was half empty before the act ended. Gabel said the next day that he would gladly give back the $5,000 it yielded if he could forget the experience.

It was fifteen years before anything of this nature was attempted again. This time it was for the late Maurice Grau, who had suffered many reverses, that the benefit was organized at the Academy of Music. Grau himself arranged the program, the feature of which was a travesty of the first act of "La Grande Duchesse." The great Aimee, queen of opera bouffe, was cast for General Boum, the ponderous M. Duplan played the Duchess, and the droll M. Mezieres was Wanda. Seats brought as much as $15 each. The house was crowded, but, alas, the fiasco was even more complete than at Gabel's benefit.

Booth's theater, then at Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue, was the scene of the next freak performance. George Rignold, famous as a matinee idol, was attracting all New York to see his "Henry the Fifth." Joseph Tooker, an ingenious showman, if ever there was one, conceived the idea of a special matinee of "Romeo and Juliet," with six amateurs to appear as Juliet. Rignold was the Romeo. Such a scene as was on view on West Twenty-third street that matinee day was never witnessed before nor since. As early as 9 a. m. the lobbies were packed, and the line to the box office reached to Broadway.

At noon at least 3,000 women were congregated in front of the theater, and the management, fully awake to conditions, commissioned "big" Jim Brown, king of ticket speculators of that day, to "work the line." This Brown did so well that 4,200 persons, 95 per cent women, were packed into a playhouse seating 1,800 comfortably.

The performance itself was so bad that Rignold would have quit in the fourth scene but for Tooker's plaintive plea to stick it out. Tooker's idea had been that the Juliets would be so bad that they would be funny, whereas five of them were just rank incompetents. The sixth Juliet was none other than Marie Wainwright, who distinguished herself all the more by the contrast. Miss Wainwright was immediately engaged as a professional and quickly became a star.—New York Sun.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Rules For Consumptives.

Acting under a law of 1912, the New Jersey state board of health has issued the following rules, which are to be followed by all consumptives in the state:

First.—All persons suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis (consumption) shall effectively destroy their sputum (spit).

Second.—All persons suffering from running sores due to any form of tuberculosis shall burn all soiled dressings immediately after removal.

Fourth.—No person suffering from pulmonary or other communicable form of tuberculosis shall handle food designed for the use of others, except when necessary in the performance of household duties, unless the food be wrapped in such a way as to protect it from contamination or unless some necessary subsequent process of preparation such as cooking will sterilize it and prevent its carrying infection to the consumer.

Fifth.—The manufacturing of any kind of goods for commercial purposes or the performance of any work known as "shop work" in the home of any person suffering from pulmonary or other communicable form of tuberculosis is prohibited unless the product is such as can be sterilized and unless sterilization is done in strict accordance with the requirements of the local board of health.

SURGERY TAMES WILD MAN SLAYER

Brain Operation Gives Vicious Brute New Character.

DISPOSITION NOW THE BEST

Described as a Human Being of the Lowest Order When Put In Prison, Undergoes Magic Transformation and May Get Pardon—Blow Held Responsible For Condition.

At the direction of the New Jersey court of pardons a full investigation is being made into the strange case of Jonas Szikely, confined in the state prison at Trenton, and as a result it is possible that at the next term of court the man may receive a pardon. The account of the operation on Szikely's brain a few months ago caused a sensation in the medical world. The story is best told in the official report:

"The case of Jonas Szikely, who is serving a sentence of thirty years from Oct. 10, 1910, for murder, is one of extraordinary interest. It is reported to us that when he was brought to the state prison he seemed little more than a giant brute, with a savage, forbidding countenance, uncouth habits, grabbing his food, spilling it over himself while eating, and in general of about as low an order as it seemed possible for a human being to be.

Blow on Head Caused Injury.

"He had received a terrible blow on the back of his head near the top, which had been inflicted, as the prison authorities understood, in the struggle during which the murder was committed.

"During nearly three years after being received at the prison he was kept under close guard, and, while he seemed never to have exhibited any disposition to injure any one, he looked and acted like such a typical brute that the authorities never felt disposed to take chances with him. During all of this time the prisoner would frequently and suddenly cry out, although he gave no other indications of having any localized pain.

"About six or eight months ago the visiting physician, Dr. Martin W. Reddan, decided to operate by removing part of the skull to see if there had been a splinter of bone driven in at the time he received the blow on the head so that it pressed upon the brain. The operation was performed, the splinter of bone was found and removed, thus relieving the pressure, and as the patient was coming out of ether the attendants were astounded to hear him utter fragments of the English language, which, since he had come to prison, no one had ever heard him speak, and upon his entirely coming out from the influence of ether and recovering the surgeon and all the prison authorties were wonderfully surprised to find that, instead of the brute features and expression of before the operation, the man now exhibited a bright, kindly, humane countenance, quite intelligent, and has since shown one of the kindest dispositions to be found anywhere.

Ignorant of Subsequent Events.

"He is constantly helping everybody, doing little things for the other prisoners' comfort and working with perfect obedience and cheerfulness, so that everybody, prisoners and authorities alike, have become particularly fond of him.

"He has no recollection of anything which has happened since he had the impression, as he was going home from his work, that he was being 'held up' until he came out of the ether after the operation.

"He knows nothing of his trial, nothing of the struggle at the time the murder was committed, never heard the name of the man who was killed, does not know how many men took part in the struggle nor anything about the events of his arrest, trial, conviction and incarceration.

"From the representations made by the surgeon and by the prison authorities, your committee think it was quite possible that this man may, by the blow received at the time the struggle commenced wherein a man was killed, have been at once transformed from a conscious, responsible human being into the irresponsible condition under which he has existed up to the time of the operation and that while in that condition may have killed a man and been tried and convicted without any one realizing his mental irresponsibility. If this is so, of course, no murder was committed, and now that the man has been restored to himself he should receive a full pardon."

House Guests.

A hostess should always state in her invitation just how long she wishes a house guest to remain with her. This will be appreciated by the guest, for she will then know what clothing to provide for her visit.

Good Form Hints.

Never grow careless about borrowing and returning things lent you.

Be enthusiastic over things, but don't overdo it or people may think you are insincere and gushing.

Don't keep your friends too long chatting in the street. They may be in a hurry.

He Was Exonerated on the Spot.

"What do you mean by kissing the housemaid?" "It was an excusable mistake, my dear. The hall was dark, and she had on your face powder and your beautiful golden hair."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

TOWN IS DESTROYED; 200 MADE HOMELESS

Michigan Theater Fire Wipes Out Village.

NEWBURY, MICH. — Practically 200 people are homeless as the result of a disastrous [illegible] which wiped out Dollarville, a small lumbering town two miles from here, this afternoon.

Fire broke out in a theater, when the picture machine exploded, and rapidly spread, taking Krempel's grocery store, the hotel and 20 dwellings in less than two hours. Help was rushed from Newberry in autos, and a great share of the household goods were saved.

Fear of the fire spreading further was allayed about 5 o'clock when rain began to fall.

Great concern is manifested for those who are homeless, as there is not a vacant house in Dollarville or here.

Nearly all the village's food supplies were destroyed in the general stores, and rainsoaked residents are sharing the remains of their cupboards with stricken neighbors.

OLDEST MASON PASSES AWAY

Noah Homer Dibble Dies at Alma in His 102nd Year.

DETROIT, MICH.—Michigan's oldest Mason, and one of the few human links that held the present to the daring days of the old lake sailing vessels, passed away at the Masonic home in Alma, in the person of Noah Homer Dibble, a member of Union lodge of S. O. O., No. 3, F. & A. M.

Mr. Dibble would have been 102 years old his next birthday, Nov. 12. He was born in Perry, N. Y., and was taken to Portland, N. Y., on Lake Erie, as a child. At 13 he ran away to Erie and shipped as cabin boy on a merchant trading vessel. His rise to captain and owner was gradual, and he retired in 1876 and went to Missouri, where he lived until six years ago. He will be buried today at Detroit.

10,000 SLAIN BY BRIGANDS

Capture and Sacking of Chinese City by White Wolf Band Reported.

SHANGHAI, CHINA—Reports were received that the White Wolf brigands had captured and sacked the City of Taochow, massacreing 10,000 Chinese.

There was no confirmation here of the report, but uneasiness was felt among foreigners because the report also said that the mission buildings there were burned. It is known that the White Wolf band has been operating in that vicinity, and frequent reports of outrages have been received.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Girl Invents New Strike.

DETROIT, MICH.—Miss Henrietta Smith, an undesirable alien, against whom the federal grand jury returned a true bill this morning, developed militant tendencies this afternoon. When officers went to the county jail to bring Henrietta before Judge Arthur Tuttle she refused to dress. All the authority at the command of Uncle Sam's deputies could not force her to. She was urged, coaxed and threatened to no avail. The deputies gave up and court adjourned without Henrietta being among those present. She is charged with entering the country after having been deported.

Grand Rapids Wins First.

HOLLAND, MICH.—The city of Grand Rapids got the $25 prize for having the largest representation in the Eagle parade here. Other prizes were awarded as follows: Best uniformed, Owosso, $25; tallest Eagle, J. Banghart, Owosso, $5; smallest Eagle, H. P. Sutphen, Owosso, $5; handsomest Eagle, Oscar Kilstrom, Grand Rapids, $5; prettiest band, Muskegon, $5; aerie accompanied by largest number of ladies, Muskegon, $15; members of aerie traveling greatest distance in automobiles, Kalamazoo, $10.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Claiming that he is "Kid" Williams of Baltimore, the new bantamweight champion pugilist, a young man was arrested here and later confessed to four forgeries committed in Detroit and three in Cleveland.

On his person was found, besides a revolver, a check book of the Wayne County-Home Savings bank of Detroit. One forged check which he carried was made out to John P. Harrison and signed and indorsed by Harry Grinnel of Detroit.

Backers of Moose Party Lacking.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—It has become known that there may be no Progressive party ticket in the field here this fall owing to the inability of candidates to get a legal number of Progressive signers to their petitions.

Petitions need 62 names for county offices and so far not a single one of the candidates has been able to muster up that number.

Grand Rapids Man Drowns.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — "I will swim across that river and back or drown," declared John Ladroot, 60 years old, to two companions with whom he was fishing in Grand river. In spite of the protest of his friends, Ladroot plunged into the water. He succeeded in crossing the river and attempted to swim back, when he was drowned.

WOMEN SEEK TO INFLUENCE JURY

Club Members Will Attempt to Convict Petras.

AURORA, ILL. — A remarkable movement "to avenge crimes against women" has been started by the club women of Kane county in connection with the trial of Anthony Petras for the murder of Theresa Hollander, the Aurora girl who was clubbed to death in a cemetery.

The women plan to visit Judge Irwin's court at Geneva, Ill., some day during the progress of the trial and "influence the judge and jury by means of mental telepathy," their object apparently being the conviction of the accused man.

It is expected that a venire of 500 will have to be drawn before twelve men acceptable to both sides can be obtained for a jury.

The sudden removal of Bailiff Henry Young of St. Charles, who had been in charge of the veniremen, caused a sensation in the court. The prosecution made charges that Young had been interviewing the prospective jurors in the interest of the defense. E. P. Gerry of Elgin was given Young's place.

Young Petras proclaims his innocence of the crime. So far as is known the evidence against him is purely circumstantial. Today's talesmen were almost unanimous in declaring their unwillingness to find a defendant guilty of murder on circumstantial evidence. Judge Irwin took occasion several times to inform the prospective jurors that a man might be hanged legally on this kind of proof.

Theresa Hollander was clubbed to death in St. Nicholas cemetery, near her home in Aurora, on the night of Feb. 16. On March 5 she would have been twenty years old, and on that day she was to have been married to Nicholas Fellner.

I. W. W. AGITATORS ROUTED

Mob Hurls Eggs, Stones and Dirt at Members at Tarrytown.

NEW YORK — Rotten eggs, stones, clods of dirt, and handfuls of gravel were hurled with telling effect at sixty men and women, members of the Industrial Workers of the World, who tried to hold a meeting in Tarrytown.

HIDES CASH IN OVEN; MELTS BEFORE FOUND

Nevertheless, Uncle Sam Makes It Good Again.

WHITE PIGEON, MICH. — Albert Fetch, who is a farmer, wishing to go visiting two weeks ago Sunday, deposited $163 in currency and silver in a teapot and placed it in the oven of the kitchen stove for safe keeping, where it remained until Monday morning, when Mrs. Fetch arose and built a rousing fire to prepare breakfast.

When the money was thought of, an examination of the teapot showed the silver money melted and the currency ashes. Fetch brought the teapot to the Farmers' Savings bank and the cashier, J. M. Benjamin, took the teapot to the sub-treasury at Chicago. There he was told that they did not have anyone there expert enough to examine it and advised him to send it to Washington. Therefore the teapot began its journey to Washington, and Mr. Benjamin received a check on the sub-treasury for the full amount.

BOAT CAPSIZES; TWO DROWN

One Goes to Death at Kalamazoo and Another in Otsego Lake.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Henry C. Kline, a grocery store clerk, was drowned in Lime Kiln lake when his boat capsized. He was fishing with his brother, who had a narrow escape from going to his death, managing to hang to the side of the boat until rescued.

Gaylord, Mich., June 23.—Frank Mojtkowjak was drowned in Otsego lake when he attempted to change places in a boat with a companion, Charles Nessel. The boat filled with water and turned over. Mojtkowiak was a good swimmer but was seized with cramps and went to the bottom like a stone.

FLAMES THREATEN FARMERS

Forest Fires Break Out Again in Wexford County.

CADILLAC, MICH. — Forest fires again have broken out in Wexford county and the situation is serious. Pleasant Lake district farmer, John Seguin, telephoned Sheriff Louis Chamberlain that his fences and woods were on fire and that his house and barn were threatened. He asked for aid to save his property. Men were sent to his aid. Other farmers in the district are in danger of heavy loss.

The Cummer-Diggins Lumber company, which suffered heavily during the recent fires, reports that its timber holdings are practically free from fire.

The Hague In History.

The Hague was originally a mere hunting station of the counts of Holland. Its name freely translated means "the count's hedge." The little town first rose to importance in 1527, when it was made the seat of the supreme court of Holland. In 1584 it became the place of assembly of the states general and the residence of the stadtholders, since when it has been the diplomatic conference place of Europe.

CLASS REUNION.

The annual reunion of the class "Helen's Babies" was held at the M. E church Wednesday afternoon with nearly 30 in attendance. For nearly 30 years this class whose first teacher was Mrs. Helen M. Griswold has held a picnic on the birthday of their teacher, the young girls who first comprised the class have grown to mature womanhood, and some have grown children of their own, yet never have they forgotten the dear band and have kept in touch with one another all these years.

Changes have come, Mrs. Griswold who shared our girlish joys and sorrows who gave counsel and loving words of cheer to us passed over to the better country, and Mrs Leman Barnes took up the work that she laid down, again the angel of Death laid its hands upon our friend and teacher and she too, went over the river.

Mrs Hurry is now most ably filling the place made vacant, and it is our most earnest prayer, that she may abide with us for many years.

Wednesday afternoon was beautiful and a spirit of peace and good will rested upon the happy band as they gathered together. Just a social good visit, but it was thoroughly enjoyed by all. A bountiful picnic supper was served, and as the evening shadows approached good nights and goodbyes were spoken, and each one went away happy that once more they had met together in their class reunion.

Guests of honor were Rev. and Mrs. G H. Whitney, Dr. and Mrs. E. C, Brown. Mrs A. J. Bigelow and Mrs. W. E. Bigelow of Ida, these two were the widows of former pastors of the church. Other out of town guests were Mrs Emma Ford of Blissfield, Mrs Boynton of Adrian and Mrs. Chas. Smith of Grand Rapids all members of the class, Stoats Hunt In Packs.

In some years stoats appear to be more numerous than in others, and they are seen not in ones and twos, but in dozens, hunting together in small packs. Stoats will hunt together from scent and in full cry like a pack of hounds, one always keeping the line and followed closely by the others. This sight has been recorded by different observers who have also seen weasels hunting in the same way.

Valuable Services.

"I have indeed done a service," the orator declared. "I have given the people cause to think."

"That was something at least."

"Yes, oh, yes. But I have done a further service. I have told them just how to think."—Buffalo Express.

Silent Service.

"Don't you like silent service in the house?"

"Sure. That's one reason we put in a dumb waiter."—Baltimore American.

FAMOUS PLAYERS AT THE OPERA HOUSE

Arrangements have just been completed with the Casino Company of Detroit whereby their Famous Players productions will be shown at the Bradley Opera House every Monday night. In showing these Famous Players productions Tecumseh people will have an opportunity of seeing the very best motion pictures that are produced. You can go from New York to San Francisco, into any of the leading theatres, and you will see nothing better than these very same Famous Player productions. They are the same pictures that are being featured one night a week at the New Family theatre, in Adrian, at 10 and 20 cents. The admission here will be 10 cents to all.

This new booking will in no way affect the regular showing of the 5 cent pictures at the Opera House, with the exception of Mondays the regular program of three high class reels will be shown the same as now

The Famous Player productions are all from four to six reels in length, making an hour and a half to a two hours show. They are pictures by the best people in the business and the bookings include the following big productions as some of the early attractions: Mary Pickford in Caprice; Tess of the Storm Country and a Good Little Devil (one of New Yorks latest and best productions); Dustin Farham in the Littlest Rebel; the Squaw Man and Soldiers of Fortune; Ethel Barrymore in "Sunday;" Edward Ables in "Brewsters Millions;" Tully Marshall in "Paid in Full;" Burr McIntosh "In Mizzoura" and Charlotte Ives in "Clothes." It will pay you to make your arrangements so that you will be able to go to the Opera House each Monday night and see these excellent productions. Many of them are taken from the original big New York productions and will never be seen outside of New York City (only in pictures) and with the original stars in the leading parts.

The first number Monday night will be "Arizona" one of the best western pictures ever brought into town, with Cyril Scott and an all star cast. "Arizona" is in six big reels and over 210 different scenes. The doors open at 7:00 p. m., first show starts promptly at 7:15. Remember Famous Players every Monday night.

Mexico's National Pawnshop.

One of the most remarkable institutions in the City of Mexico is the Monte de Piedad, or national pawnshop. The monte is one of the oldest buildings in the capital, having been built for the private residence of Cortes in 1520, and it has been fortunate enough to escape the hands of restorers. It was acquired in 1744 by Count de Regla Terreros, who laid out $300,000 in organizing the Monte de Piedad, with the idea of saving the needy from the usury of the ordinary pawnbroker. Its success is attested by its long history, and Mexicans today can get one-third value on their goods at a rate of interest seldom exceeding 3 per cent per annum. If any one fails to keep up his payments the deposited goods are sold, and any balance over the sum advanced is handed to the depositor.

A Monstrosity Among Newspapers.

Those who object to the widespread newspaper may see the apotheosis of their bete noire in the museum at Aix-la-Chapelle, the only existing copy of the Illuminated Quatruple Constellation, published in New York in 1859. Happily this monstrosity did not survive the first issue, for its pages measure eight and one-half feet by six feet, and each contains thirteen columns forty-eight inches long.

By way of comparison it may be mentioned that the smallest newspaper in the world is the Mexican El Telegrama, with pages four inches square. —London Chronicle.

Costly British Sport.

An expert has calculated that, including the personal expenses connected with the game incurred by the hundreds of thousands of amateurs, and by the wealthy professional clubs, together with the interest paid on shares and the gate money of the millions of spectators, British football costs about seven millions of money annually.

Some Hitch In Prospects.

"Now that you have agreed to marry me, dearest, I presume I had better ask your father's consent." "You may, if you like, but it isn't at all necessary. I am in the habit of doing exactly as I please." "Oh, in that case, perhaps I'd better consult your father about the advisability of not marrying you, then."—Detroit Free Press.

All Equal In One Respect.

When Matthew Arnold was a school examiner a fellow-inspector of a class of girl pupil-teachers asked Arnold to examine for him. Arnold gave each of the young women the "excellent" mark. "But," said the other inspector, "surely they are not all as good as they can be; some must be better than others." "Perhaps that is so," replied Arnold; "but then, you see, they are all such very nice girls."

Damascus, where once much fine enameled glassware was made, is now the seat of many forgeries, so cleverly done that many dealers have been deceived. Some of the pieces sold for as much as $500. Annual Picnic.

St Petets Episcopal Church and Sunday School with guests from Clinton and Manchester.

200 PRESENT.

The annual picnic of St. Peter's Episcopal Church and Sunday School was held Wednesday afternoon, with visiting schools from Clinton and Manchester, numbering in all about two hundred.

The grounds about the Parish House and Rectory were a scene of life and beauty with the host of merry lads and lasses, and the many grown ups that made up the company.

The time was spent in social visiting and the pulling off of various stunts. In the tug of was between the ladies of Clinton and Tecumseh the Clinton team carried off the honors, while the Tecumseh men won in the men's tug The egg races were jolly and were won by Esther Marsh, Lavern Barrett,

In the ball thowing they do say that Gene Rosacrans beat anything on record and will have to keep a smooth face, with the razor won in the contest.

A large basket of packages furnished a merry time for the children, as the one who caught them as they were tossed in the air was the lucky winner. Not the least enjoyable part of the program was the bountiful picnic feast that was spread for the company. And then the dispersing of the crowd, automobiles, the Clinton auto truck, buggies and the railroad cars were all called into requisition. for the homeward trip of the tired but happy people.

The first shot in the war of independent Democrats to ouse Tammany Hall from control of the Democratic organization in New York state was fired at the Democratic conference.

Montgomery Hare, one of the independent leaders, introduced a resolution providing that an unofficial convention be held and two tickets be selected, one a pro-Tammany slate and one a straight out and out anti-Tammany ticket, both tickets to be put up to the enrolled Democrats at the primaries to let them decide which they want. William Church Osborne, chairman of the executive committee and leader of the independent faction, is at the top, while J. Sergeant Cram, leader of the Tammany faction, is below.

HELD THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only: they help weak kidneys to rid the blood of uric poison. There is no better recommended remedy.

Read the statement that follows:

Mrs. H. B. Worcester, 6 Clinton St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and I consider them a fine kidney medicine. I used them when suffering from lameness in my back and other symptoms of kidney trouble and they brought me prompt and satisfactory relief."

Trivial Causes of Wars.

A bucket was once the innocent cause of a terrible war. Nine centuries ago some soldiers of Modena stole a bucket as a joke from a public well at Bologna. When they refused to restore it scrimmaging commenced between the soldiers of the rival states, and a war ensued, which spread until it involved the greater part of Europe. In more recent times a debt of a few shillings of which the bey of Algiers demanded payment through the French consul led to a war which lasted twenty years, cost more than 500,000 lives and made Algeria a French possession.

Good That He Returned.

"Boy, watch my horse till I come back!" called a man to a boy lounging around the station, as he hastened to bid farewell to a departing friend.

"Sure!" said the boy, taking the reins.

Just then the locomotive whistled and the horse, rearing suddenly, started at full speed up the road.

The boy stared after the fleeing animal, and, as the owner appeared, exclaimed with relief:

"It's a good thing you came now, sir, for I couldn't have watched him much longer."—Ladies' Home Journal.

ENGLAND WINS BACK CUP

Her Crack Team Defeats American Polo Players on Meadowbrook.

NEW YORK. — England won back the international polo cup, by defeating America on Meadowbrook field by 4 goals to 2¾.

It was a nearer thing than the cold figures of the score reveal. America, as well as England, drove the ball five times between goal posts, but the Americans undoubtedly were affected by the tremendous nervous tension of a game which must decide everything for them, while it meant for the Englishmen only an evening out of the match, were at times too reckless in their riding and suffered from penalties for fouling. While England lost only one full point in that way, America lost 2 points and a quarter of a point in addition for a safety play which, if it had not been made, might have resulted in another goal.

ENVOYS WAITING

Watchful Eye to Precede Any Further Mexican Moves.

MUCH HANGS ON NEAR BATTLE

Victory of Villa at Zacatecas, It Is Believed, Will Spill the Mexican Beans, so Far as Huerta Goes—Story of Bringing Factions Together Is Denied.

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT. —It is persistently reported here that arrangements have at last been completed for the participation of constitutionalist delegates in the conference. This participation, it was said, would be in an unofficial capacity, the mediators withdrawing for a short while to permit the Huerta delegates and the rebel representatives to discuss the problem between themselves.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—According to information received, the constitutionalist army commanded by General Aiamilla has captured the city of Zapotlan, a large railroad center in the state of Jalisco, ninety miles south of Guadalajara. The occupation of Zapotlan is regarded as an important step in the campaign against Guadalajara.

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT. — The American and Mexican delegates having resumed their conferences in the presence of the mediators, Justice Lamar and Frederick W. Lehmann, the United States representatives remained with the three South American envoys for more than two hours. No information whatever was given out regarding the subjects discussed. The only statement which could be obtained here throughout the day was a formal denial of reports contained in press despatches that steps had been taken by those attending the conference to bring together representatives of the two contending factions in Mexico.

Doing Some Watchful Waiting.

Despite the protests made by the mediators that no "watchful waiting" will be indulged in here, it is the firm belief of well informed persons that the mediators have consented to mark time for a time at least, pending the outcome of the great conflict which is imminent at Zacatecas.

It is understood that President Wilson is convinced that the constitutionalists will be victorious at this point and that their victory will be the final blow for Huerta. The Wilson administration, it is said, has yielded slightly in its opposition to the present head of the Mexican government. Washington no longer demands that Huerta and all his followers be completely eliminated as political factors and is quite willing to recognize the rights of the federal party.

ROADS WIN $700,000,000 SUIT

Whether Real Point at Issue Is Settled Is Question.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Transcontinental railways won their fight for title to some $700,000,000 worth of oil lands when the supreme court held void the clause in the patents making the land revert to the government if found to contain minerals.

The decision was in a case brought by Edmund Burke of California, who claimed the right to lands now held by the Southern Pacific, on the ground that they should revert to the government because oil had been found after the issue of the patent to the railroad. The court incidentally emphasized the claim that the government's time in which it could attack the patents had expired in 1900 or 1901. The court held that the claims could only be set aside by a direct attack by the government, which has a suit pending.

NINE AIRMEN DIE

Austrian Captain, Four Lieutenants and Aids Victims.

COLLIDE WITH AN AEROPLANE

Maneuvering at Height of 600 Feet When a Powerful Farman Biplane Crashes Into Their Dirigible, Parseval—Flames Burn Bodies—Investigation on.

VIENNA, AUSTRIA.—The worst disaster in the history of aviation occurred at the military aerodrome on the outskirts of this city when nine men, including five army and navy officers, were killed in a collision between an aeroplane and a dirigible balloon.

The two air craft were maneuvering at a height of 600 feet, a powerful Farman bi-plane crashed into the gasbag of the dirigible Parseval.

There was a loud explosion followed by a burst of flames which ignited both craft.

The blazing balloon and the burning aeroplane dropped through space like flaming meteors.

Those on board faced inevitable death in two forms, either to remain on board and burn to death or leap to destruction from the wrecked and burning air carriages.

The spectators upon the ground stood rooted in horror at the spectacle. They could see the figures upon the balloon clinging to the framework of the big dirigible as the struts buckled and broke.

Tied Upside Down in Fire.

The aeroplane was wrecked by the impact and immediately turned over. The aviator had been strapped to his seat and he hung helpless in the burning wreckage.

In addition to the pilots and the crew, the passengers on the Parseval and the Farman biplane included a captain and four lieutenants.

As soon as the burning debris reached the groud soldiers began pouring water upon it and tearing it apart in hope that the lives of some of the victims might be saved.

Doctors were rushed to the scene, but all who had not been killed outright were so badly burned and shaken by the fall that death was only a matter of a few minutes.

Bodies of Victims Charred.

Some of the victims had all their clothing burned off and their bodies were so black and charred as to be almost unrecognizable.

At the time of the catastrophe a number of aeroplanes were maneuvering. An investigation of the tragedy was commenced immediately. Officers of the aerial squad expressed the opinion that the aviator of the aeroplane had momentarily lost control of his machine or that the balloon had failed to answer her helm.

CLERK BLOWN FIFTEEN FEET

He Strikes a Match to Locate a Gas Leak.

LAFAYETTE, IND. — An explosion damaged the Morgan Brothers' grocery in West Lafayette. George Kantz, a clerk, was injured seriously. Kantz went into a vault where the books are kept, and, although he detected the odor of gas, he struck a match and the explosion followed. The gas jet inside the vault had been turned on and was responsible for the explosion.

Kantz was thrown fifteen feet into the store and a desk fell on top of him. The windows were blown out and merchandise was scattered from the shelves and cases. Kantz probably will recover. Two other clerks in the store had a narrow escape.

SHOT KILLS FERDIDAND OF AUSTRIA

Fourth Tragedy Hits Aged Emperor.

FAMILY SEEMS DOOMED

Morganatic Wife of Royal Victim Is Also Slain.

WAS SECOND ATTEMPT OF DAY

Assassination Occurs at Sarajevo, Capital of Bosnia, Which Royal Couple Were Visiting—First Attempt in Street Fails—Successful Attempt Made on Way to Hospital.

Vienna, June 29.—Archduke Francis Ferdinand, nephew of Emperor Francis Joseph, and heir to the Austrian throne, and the Duchess of Hohenberg, his morganatic wife, were assassinated at Sarajevo, the capital of Bosnia. Two attempts were made on the lives of the royal party. A bomb was thrown at their motor car which was warded off by the archduke, and his car passed before it exploded under the next car, which contained two of his aides who were slightly injured. Later on a man, said to be a young Servian student, emptied a revolver at the royal car and the archduke and the duchess were killed.

First Attack Failed.

The Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg, started out in the morning in their automobile to attend a reception in their honor at the town hall. Suddenly a man named Cabrinvitch, from Trebinje, who was standing among the crowd on the sidewalk, threw a bomb at the royal car with good aim. The archduke saw it coming and warded it off with his arm and the bomb fell to the street and did not explode until after the archduke's car had passed. When the explosion occurred it resulted in the wounding of Colonel Morizzi, aide de camp to the archduke, and Count Boss Waldeck, who occupied the car immediately behind that of the duke. Six persons among the spectators were more or less seriously injur

The archduke immediately ordered his chauffeur to stop the car. He made inquiries as to what had happened and gave orders to have the injured attended to. After this the procession to the town hall was continued. Here the town councillors, with the mayor at their head, were awaiting the royal party to bid them welcome.

Rebukes Mayor.

The royal party entered the hall and the mayor was about to begin his address when Archduke Francis Ferdinand interrupted him, and in an angry manner said:

"Herr-Burgomaster, it is perfectly scandalous. We have come to Sarajevo on a visit and a bomb is thrown at us." Here he paused a moment and then said: "Now you can go on."

The mayor then delivered his address and the archduke made a suitable reply.

The people, who by this time had heard about the throwing of the bomb at the royal motor car, burst into loud cries of "Zivib" (the Slav form of hurrah) as the archduke concluded his remarks.

After making the rounds of the town hall, which occupied half an hour, the archduke and the duchess started for the garrison hospital to visit Colonel Morizzi, the archduke's aide who was injured by the bomb. As the carriage was passing through the street, a second and successful attempt was made on the lives of the archduke and duchess. This time a student, drawing near the motor car, shot the occupants dead.

Wife Accused in Politics.

The archduke's wife was accused of having inspired many of her husband's political "indiscriminations." She was a Czech, as had been said, and the Czechs are federalists. The archduke's violent incursions into politics revealed him as an opponent of the Magyar ascendancy. Yet from her marriage the duchess at least kept up her appearance of selfeffacement. Outwardly, she was resigned to the anomalies of her position. She encouraged her husband in his dislike of publicity.

It was generally believed in Vienna that on the death of Francis Joseph the first official act of Grancis Ferdinand would be to make his wife empress of Austria, this in spite of his solemn promise to his uncle, by reason of his morganatic marriage, not to do.

Fourth Tragedy in Emperorr's Family.

The assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife is the fourth great tragedy in the life of the aged Emperor Francis Joseph, now in his eighty-fourth year. The emperor has seen the eldest of his three younger brothers, the Archduke Ferdinand, the Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, executed; his only son, the Archduke Rudolphdie under mysterious and scandalous circumstances, either murdered or a suicide, his wife, the beloved Empress Elizabeth, assassinated, and now, his second heir and the latter's wife assassinated.

ILLICIT LOVE BARRED BY MAIL INSPECTORS

General Delivery Users at Por Huron Must Give Reasons.

Port Huron, Mich., June 29.—As a result of a visit of postoffice inspectors to this city to investigate alleged abuse of the general delivery system, new regulations have been adopted and the people who have been in the custom of receiving their mail through the general delivery window will be required to fill out a card stating name, age and address, as well as the reasons for getting mail at the window instead of by the city delivery.

No minor will be given mail hereafter through the general delivery window.

BIG BUSINESS IS AID TO REBELS

Sensational Story Giving Inside to Revolution Plot.

H. CLAY PIERCE IS INVOLVED

It Is Said His Cash Is Behind Mexican Revolution—Was to Get Control of Mexican Railways—Villa Had Not Been Let Into the Scheme—Balked.

New York, June 29.—A project in which Henry Clay Pierce was interested to get Venustiano Carranza, first chief of the Mexican revolutionists, to unite the railways of Northern Mexico into a new system is revealed in letters and messages published in the New York Herald. As it appears in the correspondence given in the Herald Captain Sherburne G. Hopkins of Washington endeavored to act as intermediary between General Carranza and Mr. Pierce. The first chief of the revolution was urged to organize and operate the railroads in constitutionalist territory, deposing the present directors of the National Railways of Mexico and putting in their place men agreeable to Mr. Pierce and the Pierce-Waters Oil interests.

In return for this Mr. Pierce and his associates were to do what they could to finance the revolution.

Villa Spoiled the Scheme.

It is said that Carranza finally got ready to appoint Alberto Pani, a friend of Hopkins, as director of the new organization of Mexican railways but General Villa, who was ignored in the negotiations, kept Pani out of the job. When Villa refused to let Carranza put Pani in Calizado's place, Captain Hopkins' labors of months went for nothing.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One hundred Dollers for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testamonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by all Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. adv

ASK INTERCHANGE OF RATES

Illinois Electric Lines Want Reciprocity With Steam Companies.

Springfield, Ill., June 29.—Illinois interurban electric lines have started a movement to have through rate arrangements made with steam roads operating in this territory for freight movements. A petition requesting such an order from the interstate commerce commission has been filed in the name of the Chicago, Ottawa and Peoria traction line, but it is understood that all of the large traction interests of the state are back of the action.

The commission has scheduled a hearing for July 14 at Peoria, where the electric lines will present their arguments.

CROWDS SEE OUSTED PASTOR GET BEATING

Brother of Wronged Husband Assaults Minister on Street.

Kokomo, Ind., June 29.—The Rev. Charles M. Harness, until two weeks ago pastor of the Harrison Street Christian church of this city and who is now being sued by Calvin Smith for alienation of his wife's affections, was assaulted by Smith's brother, Virgil Smith, upon the public square here in the presence of 1,200 persons. The minister's face was cut to ribbons by the blows from Smith's fists and more than thirty stitches were taken by a doctor in closing the wounds.

The fight followed the hearing of the case against Mrs. Smith, who is charged by her husband with deserting their seven-year-old son.

Feeling is strong against the minister here, this being the second time he has been beaten within two weeks. No charges have been filed by the Rev. Mr. Harness against his assailants.

The Rev. Mr. Harness was one of the most popular ministers in Kokomo until two weeks ago, when suit was brought against him by Calvin Smith, who accused him of alienating the affections of Mrs. Smith. The church board met the same night and dismissed Harness. Since that time he has made his home with his father at Muncie, Ind. Mrs. Smith went to the Harness home Thursday afternoon and Thursday night her husband filed an affidavit against her here, charging her with child desertion.

Diploma Relations

BETWEEN THE U. OF M. AND T. H. S. CONTINUED ANOTHER YEAR.

Conditions existing in the Tecumseh Schools Stongly Critisized by the Committee of the Department of Education

We print below a letter from the Department of Education of the University of Michigan, and signed by A. S. Whitney Prof. of Education under date of June 13, 1914 which explains itself.

Mr. W. L. Reed, Supt. of Schools,
Tecumseh, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

I take great pleasure in informing you that upon the recommendation of the Committee of Diploma Schools, the diploma relation between your School and this University is continued for the year 1914.

The Committee is of the opinion that a small reference Library in the building, less home talent in the teaching force, better salaries, and a new modern building would very materially improve the efficiency of your schools.

Our last inspector says, "the building is disgraceful. I have seen no high school so poorly provided for, in this respect in any town of this size." The Committee is further of the opinion, that it cannot long continue the diploma relations with your high school until these conditions are improved.

Very Respectfully
A. S. Whitney,
Prof. of Education

This stinging rebuke should have great weight upon this community. How much longer can we continue to side step the question of a new high schools. The tax payers of this school district should pull the chip off their shoulders, lay aside the little differences that are existing and get together on this question

A new high school is decidedly a necessity, and plans for its erection should be started as soon as possible.

MISS ELIZABETH SCARLETT WEDDED TO ROBERT BAMBER.

Newberry, N. Y., June 25, 1914

A pretty wedding was solemnized this evening at the beautiful summer home of Dr. and Mrs Matthew Beattie in Cornwall, N. Y., when their niece Miss Elizabeth Scarlett became the bride of Robert Justice Bamber of N. Y., youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. G. Bamber of Lockport. The ceremony was performed on the porch which was prettily decorated with flowers. Rev. Dr. A. Evans of West Park Presbyterian Church officiating, the ceremony taking place at 6 o'clock.

The bride was attired in ivory crepmeteor, and carried a boquet of wild daisies. Miss Zella Mills of Tecumseh Mich. acting as bridesmaid. The groom was attended by his brother William Bamber of N. Y. A collation was served after the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Bamber left on a short honeymoon. On their return they will reside in New York City, where Mr. Bamber is employed in the store of Wendell & McDuffille Co. Dancing and music completed the evenings entertainment.

Miss Scarlett better known as Bessie by her Tecumseh friends was a graduate of T. H. S. in the class of 1908. Her many friends here extend congratulations and best wishes.

Arizona, the six reel production put on at the Bradley Opera house Monday evening drew a crowded house.

Mr. Marks expects to put on some special feature every Monday night during the summer season, for the enjoyment of his patrons.

OUGHT SHE TO SAY SHE ENJOYED THIS?

"Sister" Given Quick Divorce by Terre Haute Woman Judge.

Terre Haute, Ind., June 29.—For fifteen minutes a woman occupied the bench of the Vigo superior court to hear the divorce action of Mrs. Voorhees Griffith against her husband, who is controller of the city of Terre Haute. After hearing the formal presentation of the complaint, which charged cruel and inhuman treatment, and Mrs. Griffith's brief testimony, Miss Grace O'Neill, special judge, granted the decree. Griffith was not in court. It is understood a settlement was made outside court. The case attracted wide attention because of the social connection of Mr. and Mrs. Griffith.

"Everything went along smoothly and even the lawyers behaved themselves admirably," said Judge O'Neill after she had dismissed court. "I really enjoyed the experience."

An Appropriate Sign.

Mrs. Smith—I see the contractor has put the sign "Sold" on the new house next door. Mr. Smith—Yes, and the sign "Stung" should be put on the buyer.—Kansas City Journal.

Empty hours, empty hands, empty companions, empty words and empty hearts draw evil spirits as a vacuum draws air.—William Arnot.

FLOWER SUNDAY.

The usual morning service at St Peters church last Sunday was diversified by a floral service by the Sunday School which was very beautiful

The little children proceeded the choir in the processional each one bearing a lily, they were seated in the front pews. At a given signal they marched into the chancel where a wooden cross had been erected and each one placed their lily upon it until it stood transformed into a lovely cross of pure white lillies. The members of the choir then placed their lillies on a nearby table.

The music was appropriate for the occasion. Miss Bonnie Brown sang the offeratory hymn. This might well have been called Lily day for the profusion of lillies that filled the church with their sweet perfume was wonderful.

GEORGE J. TRIPP OF MORENCI CHOSEN TO FILL VACANCY MADE BY THE DEATH OF DR. J. W. GRAY.

A most unusual event occured Friday when the board of Supervisors appointed Geo. J. Tripp of Morenci as school commissioner to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. Gray.

Prof. Tripp is a Republican and a Democratic majority rules the actions of the board, but, laying party feeling aside they paid a tribute to his qualifications for the office, as he had been closely associated with Dr Gray in his school work.

Mr. Tripp had not been a candidate but was solicited by members of the board of Supervisors to consider the appointment. His record as Superintendent of schools has been fine. He began the duties of his new office Monday morning.

THE company back of the car is an important factor in determining automobile value.

The Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company has no bonded or other indebtedness on which interest has to be paid—no excessive capitalization on which it has to earn dividends—no heavy overhead expense of any kind—

The price of a Paige car represents actual car value simply because the company back of it is sound financially.

When you buy the Paige you pay only for the car.

That is why it is possible to include in the Paige so many structural features usually found only in cars of much higher price—

Investigate these facts for yourself.

Then get your name on an order blank as quickly as you can—The Paige is going to be oversold again this year.

LIFE IN THE LONG AGO.

When Huts Were Homes and Beds Were Shakedowns of Straw.

For centuries the common people of England made their home in wooden huts of one room. When a family increased in numbers or wealth another hut was built beside it, or, rather, a lean-to was added and then another and another, as need required.

Sometimes they followed a straight line. At other times they were built out from the central hut at various angles. The roofs of these huts were thatched. An opening was left in the center for the smoke to escape. The fire was always built in a hollow in the center of the room. Beds were made of straw. Often they were merely shakedowns in the corner. Occasionally the straw was held in a little frame resembling the ribs of a ship.

Houses built by Saxon knights were much more pretentious. They were big halls, like the Roman atrium, with a lofty roof thatched with slate or wood shingles. The floor was of hard clay. In the middle was a great fire of dry wood. The thin, acrid smoke from the fire escaped through an opening in the roof directly above the hearth.

Round the fire were long benches, on which hearthsmen and visitors sat when not fighting or at work, and talked and drank the hours through. The tables were long boards on trestles. At night the floor was strewn with straw, and, like the less prosperous folk, host and visitors slept together.—Youth's Companion.

CURIOUS MEXICAN TREES.

One Whose Fruit Is the Counterpart of the Green Parrot.

Mexico probably has a greater range of remarkable vegetation than any other country in the world. The parrot fruit tree produces an odd shaped fruit, bearing a close resemblance to green parrakeets. When the parrakeet is frightened it makes a dash for the parrot tree, where it assumes a position which makes it look like the fruit itself. So close is the resemblance that their enemies, the hawks, occasionally fly by a tree on which a dozen or more of these birds are sitting, apparently unaware of their presence.

Another remarkable tree is the arbol de dinamite—dynamite tree—whose fruit, if kept in a warm place, bursts with considerable force and a loud report, scattering its flat seeds to a surprising distance.

One of the most interesting fruits in Mexico is known as the melon zapote, or papaya. It contains considerable pepsin, which reacts against both acid and alkaline conditions of the stomach, and it is said that a diet which includes papaya precludes dyspepsia. Both the fruit and the leaves possess the peculiar property of rendering tough meat tender. When the pulp of the fruit is rubbed over a piece of tough meat the juice attacks the fiber and softens it.—National Geographic Magazine.

HELD THE WARNING

Many Tecumseh People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequently rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only; they help weak kidneys to rid the blood of uric poison. There is no better recommended remedy.

Read the statement that follows:

Mrs. H. B. Worcester, 6 Clinton St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and I consider them a fine kidney medicine. I used them when suffering from lameness in my back and other symptoms of kidney trouble and they brought me prompt and satisfactory relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Worcester had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

KIDNAPING VOTERS.

Once a Regular Feature of Political Warfare In England.

In England a generation or two ago kidnaping was a regularly organized feature of political warfare. On the eve of an election especially men of influence on either side would mysteriously vanish to reappear later with strange tales of forcible seizures, mad races across country in post chaises driven by yelling postilions, followed by longer or shorter terms of gilded imprisonment in great mansions, where they were wined and dined in sumptuous style and treated right royally in every way, only their liberty being denied them.

Quite humble voters, too, were forcibly abducted, but these did not always fare quite so well. Thus one victim made complaint before a magistrate that he had been decoyed from his house by a ruse and kept shut up in a coal hole for three days.

Wholesale kidnaping of voters in batches, too, was not unknown, the process being rendered easier by the custom of candidates paying the traveling expenses of their electors to and from the polling places.

For instance, at a certain Newcastle election a whole shipload of freemen of the borough, dispatched from London by sea, were taken by the captain—who had been heavily bribed—to Ostend and there left stranded.

During the same contest, too, and under similar circumstances a number of Berwick electors who happened to reside in London were dumped down in Norway, and a group of dirty Ipswich voters found themselves on the day of the poll cooling their heels upon the quay at Rotterdam. — Pearson's Weekly.

MARRIAGE FAILURES.

Two Crises In Wedded Life That Are Mainly Responsible.

That there should be such involved discussion and so many amazingly contradictory theories about the cause of the failure of marriage is surprising.

The plain fact is that marriage is always the end of romance and the beginning of history. This is so true that Homer tells us the women of ancient Greece reckoned their ages not from the birth date, but from the wedding day. A good many husbands in this twentieth century are a good deal more certain about the number of years their wives have lived since marriage than about the summers and winters they had numbered before they became wives.

Failure to recognize the difference between romance and history causes failure of marriage. Romance is all play; history is a serious business. Courtship is pie; marriage is potatoes. The comedown from pie to potatoes sometimes overstrains matters seriously. But if this crisis is safely passed another awaits.

Love is the spice of life, but friendship is the nourishing food without which life, except to unusual individuals, becomes a burden. The marriage which is all spice and no food soon gives one or frequently both of the parties thereto acute indigestion. When the ecstatic emotions of the honeymoon have fled, marriage must find some other subsistence or it cannot thrive. And the only satisfying food is friendship.—Mother's Magazine.

Little Anne In the City

Her Motive For Leaving It In Haste

By TEMPLE BAILEY

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"There!" said the mother as she rose to her feet. "It looks mighty pretty!"

"It certainly does," Anne agreed as she surveyed herself with naive satisfaction in the inadequate mirror.

A coarse straw hat with a pink rose was set on Anne's sunburnt hair. Beneath it the girl's eyes looked out eagerly.

"Oh, mother," she breathed, "I'm glad David's goin' to drive me to the station! He ain't never seen me look like this!"

The rattle of wheels outside took them to the front door, Anne walking a little stiffly in the closeness of her new suit.

"Dave," said the older woman as the mud spattered buggy stopped at the step, "you are early enough. You'll have to wait when you get to the station."

"I didn't want her to miss the train," the boy explained.

But there was another reason for his promptness. When they had left behind the half dozen towheaded youngsters who waved at them from the front gate and the big man who hallooed from the field—when they were beyond the sights and sounds of the farm and had come upon the quiet of the forest road he let his horse walk.

"Anne," he began and stopped.

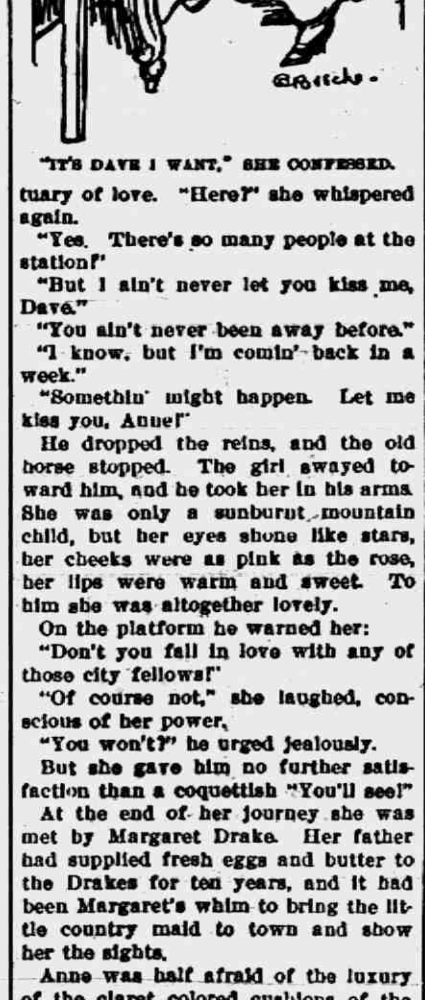
Her glance met his, and she laughed nervously.

"Look here!" he hesitated. "Look here, Anne!"

"I'm lookin'," was her tremulous repartee.

"Look here, ain't you goin' to let me kiss you goodby?"

"Here?" The great trees bending above the road made for them a sanctuary of love. "Here?" she whispered again.



"IT'S DAVE I WANT," SHE CONFESSED.

"Yes. There's so many people at the station!"

"But I ain't never let you kiss me, Dave."

"You ain't never been away before."

"I know, but I'm comin' back in a week."

"Somethin' might happen. Let me kiss you, Anne!"

He dropped the reins, and the old horse stopped. The girl swayed toward him, and he took her in his arms. She was only a sunburnt mountain child, but her eyes shone like stars, her cheeks were as pink as the rose, her lips were warm and sweet. To him she was altogether lovely.

On the platform he warned her:

"Don't you fall in love with any of those city fellows!"

"Of course not," she laughed, conscious of her power.

"You won't?" he urged jealously.

But she gave him no further satisfaction than a coquettish "You'll see!"

At the end of her journey she was met by Margaret Drake. Her father had supplied fresh eggs and butter to the Drakes for ten years, and it had been Margaret's whim to bring the little country maid to town and show her the sights.

Anne was half afraid of the luxury of the claret colored cushions of the limousine, but she was more afraid of the dancing eyes of the young man who had come with Margaret. He was like a being from another world, with his soft, white hands, his smooth, fair skin.

"So this is our mountain rose!" he said, and Anne blushed to the roots of her hair.

When they reached the big house Margaret showed Anne to a room all pink and white and gold and said:

"You can dress for dinner, dear, and then I'll come for you."

Anne gasped.

"I—I haven't any other dress," she stammered.

"Oh!" Margaret apologized. "I never thought of that. But—I have a white gown with a short waist—I could make it fit you, I think."

So it happened that when little Anne came into the dining room that night she created something of a sensation. Margaret had looped up the rough locks with a bit of silver ribbon, and two curls bobbed over one ear and were caught by a white rose. The silken gown swept in folds about the tiny straight figure and hid the awkward feet, while a chiffon scarf made a charitable place of concealment for the red hands.

The young man who had driven home with them came forward eagerly.

"Cinderella?" he murmured, laughing into Anne's startled eyes.

"Don't tease her, Mark," Margaret protested, with a perceptible note of irritation in her voice.

"Is he your beau?" Anne asked her in a dim corner of the library.

The men were smoking on the balcony, which overlooked the Italian garden.

"I'm not sure," Margaret said, with a catch in her voice. "We are not engaged, if you mean that."

"Has he ever kissed you?" Anne demanded.

Out of a long silence Margaret whispered:

"If he had, what then?"

"Because that would show that he wants to marry you. Dave kissed me this mornin' on the mountain, and that means that I'm his!"

"You dear!" Margaret said quickly and turned the subject to other things.

But that night when little Anne was in bed in the pink and white room Margaret came in, looking very beautiful, with her long braids framing the white oval of her face and hanging dark and glossy against the silken folds of her scarlet gown.

"Tell me about Dave," she commanded.

It was a simple little tale, but it breathed of youth and love.

"Mark wants to marry me," Margaret said slowly. "He asked me tonight after you came up."

Little Anne sat up in bed.

"Then it's all settled?"

"No; it isn't settled. I can't be sure of Mark. He knows that I have money and that father has influence, and he is an ambitious young lawyer. Oh, little Anne"—she threw herself down beside the wondering child—"I am afraid it is not love he gives me!"

Little Anne, puzzled by complexities which had never disturbed her pellucid mind, reiterated:

"He wouldn't have asked you if he didn't love you."

In spite of her doubts Margaret was comforted by that simple faith.

Next evening little Anne again wore the white gown. After dinner she sat alone on the balcony with Mark, while Margaret played for them. Below the balcony the garden was asleep under a silver moon. From beyond the stone walls came the soft night sounds of the city streets.

"Do you like it here, little Anne?" Mark asked.

"I like it, but I miss mother and Dave," she told him.

"Dave?"

"I'm goin' to marry him."

"You're much too pretty to marry a countryman."

He threw his cigar away and sat down on the marble coping which encircled the balcony. His change of position brought him just behind her, so that she had to turn to look up at him. He bent toward her suddenly.

"Such a waste of sweetness!" he murmured and kissed the parted lips.

She flung him from her and stood very still and silent in the white moonlight.

"If you were up on the mountain Dave would surely kill you for that," she said at last, and he shrank from her primitive fierceness.

In the other room the music stopped.

"Come here," Margaret called, "both of you!"

Anne went to her swiftly, like a bird flying to cover. Mark followed slowly. When they stood beside her Margaret talked of plans for the next day—a matinee and dinner at Bartin's or the opera and the Russian dancers.

"You—you needn't plan for me," little Anne said. "I'm goin' home."

Margaret stared at her in amazement.

"You promised me a week."

"I'm sorry, but I've changed my mind," little Anne insisted obstinately. "Mother needs me."

But that night she crept into Margaret's room.

"It's Dave I want," she confessed.

They clung together for a moment in the darkness. Then Anne whispered:

"Don't you marry Mark, Margaret."

"Why not?" was the sharp demand.

"Because—oh," she whispered with a shuddering sense of the secret she must not share, "wait till somebody loves you like Dave loves me, Margaret."

The next day Dave, driving to the mail train, found more precious freight.

A soft rain fell on the mountain and made the forest road a thing of moist fragrance and misty vistas. Dave drove the old horse to the place where he had stopped on the morning of little Anne's departure. Then he let the reins drop and held out his arms to his sweetheart. She yielded this time without resistance.

"I ain't ever goin' away from you again, Dave!" Her face was hidden in his rough, wet coat. "I ain't ever goin' away again!"

He laughed with a triumphant sense of possession.

"I knew them city fellows couldn't take you from me," he said. Then, with a sudden savage certainty, he added, "I'd 'a' killed them if they had!"

As Smart as His Boy.

When Sir William Gilbert was twenty-seven and was known to the world as a promising writer, his father, who was a retired naval surgeon, wrote a semimetaphysical, semimedical book entitled "Shirley Hall Asylum," his first book.

Edith A. Brown, when preparing a biography of the younger man, having heard that the son was the incentive from without which spurred into action the inherent but dormant literary talent of the father, asked if such was the fact.

"Yes," replied the author of the "Bab Ballads" and the wittiest librettos ever written. "I think the little success which had attended my humble efforts certainly influenced my father.

"You see," he added, with a suspicion of a smile, "my father never had an exalted idea of my ability. He thought if I could write anybody could and forthwith he began."

FERDINAND OF AUSTRIA SHOT

Morganatic Wife of Royal Victim Is Also Slain.

WAS SECOND ATTEMPT OF DAY

Assassination Occurs at Sarajevo, Capital of Bosnia, Which Royal Couple Were Visiting—First Attempt in Street Fails—Successful Attempt Made on Way to Hospital.

VIENNA — Archduke Francis Ferdinand, nephew of Emperor Francis Joseph, and heir to the Austrian throne, and the Duchess of Hohenberg, his morganatic wife, were assassinated at Sarajevo, the capital of Bosnia. Two attempts were made on the lives of the royal party. A bomb was thrown at their motor car which was warded off by the archduke, and his car passed before it exploded under the next car, which contained two of his aides who were slightly injured. Later on a man, said to be a young Servian student, emptied a revolver at the royal car and the archduke and the duchess were killed.

First Attack Failed.

The Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg, started out in the morning in their automobile to attend a reception in their honor at the town hall. Suddenly a man named Cabrinvitch, from Trebinje, who was standing among the crowd on the sidewalk, threw a bomb at the royal car with good aim. The archduke saw it coming and warded it off with his arm and the bomb fell to the street and did not explode till after the archduke's car had passed. When the explosion occurred it resulted in the wounding of Colonel Morizzi, aide de camp to the archduke, and Count Boss Waldeck, who occupied the car immediately behind that of the duke. Six persons among the spectators were more or less seriously injured.

The archduke immediately ordered his chauffeur to stop the car. He made inquiries as to what had happened and gave orders to have the injured attended to. After this the procession to the town hall was continued. Here the town councillors, with the mayor at their head, were awaiting the royal party to bid them welcome.

After making the rounds of the town hall, which occupied half an hour, the archduke and the duchess started for the garrison hospital to visit Colonel Morizzi, the archduke's aide who was injured by the bomb explosion and who had been taken to the hospital in a carriage after the outrage.

As the royal car reached the corner of Rudolf street, a man named Gavro Prinzip, who was on the side walk, fired two pistol shots in quick succession at the archduke and the duchess. The man, who was only a short distance from the car, was a good marksman. The first shot struck the Duchess of Hohenberg low down on the right side, while the second bullet hit the archduke in the neck near the throat and pierced the jugular vein.

The duchess became unconscious immediately and fell across the knees of her husband. The archduke lost consciousness in a few seconds after he was hit. The chauffeur put on full speed and rushed straight to the palace where an army of surgeons vainly tried first aid to the injured.

Neither the archduke nor the duchess gave any sign of life and the only thing the head of the hospital could do was to certify that both were dead.

Assassin Is Youth.

Prinzip, who fired the fatal shot, is a student and is nineteen years of age. He studied for some time in Belgrade. When interrogated by the police he declared that he had intended for a long time to kill some eminent person from nationalist motives. He denied that he had any accomplices.

Both Are Bosnians.

Both assassins are Bosnians. Cabrinitch is a compositor who worked for a few weeks at the government printing works at Belgrade and returned to Sarajevo, a pronounced Servian chauvinist. He made no concealment of his sympathies with the king of Servia.

Both Cabrinvitch and the actual assassin, Prinzip, expressed themselves to the police in the most cynical fashion about their crime.

Fourth Tragedy in Emperorr's Family.

The assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife is the fourth great tragedy in the life of the aged Emperor Francis Joseph, now in his eighty-fourth year. The emperor has seen the eldest of his three younger brothers, the Archduke Ferdinand, the Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, executed; his only son, the Archduke Rudolphdie under mysterious and scandalous circumstances, either murdered or a suicide, his wife, the beloved Empress Elizabeth, assassinated, and now, his second heir and the latter's wife assassinated.

FARMERS SAY AD. MEN PAINTED THEIR COWS

Eight Dead Bovines and Much Anger in One County.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Alleging that advertising agents for one of the city's large furniture houses have painted signs on cows throughout Kent county, killing eight thus far and probably seriously contaminating the milk supply which reaches Grand Rapids daily, irate farmers have asked Sheriff Edward O'Donnel for help in tracing the sign painters.

The farmers say that the sign painters have made a practice of catching cows, and dabbing paint on their backs as a practical joke. The cows which have died are said to have lead poisoning and show other evidences of death from poisoning due to paint which they attempted to lick from their backs.

MURDER HINTED IN MYSTERY

Man Found With Throat Cut But Money Is Missing.

MARSHALL, MICH. — Theodore C. Kimmell, sixty years old, was found dead with his throat cut, in his billiard and pool room at Partello, ten miles north of here.

Kimmell had separated from his wife recently, and a razor found by his side indicated suicide. Sheriff Fonda will hold an inquest. Kimmell is known to have had a considerable sum of money in his store, and inability to find this leads to the suspicion that he may have been murdered. The body was cold when found, and it is believed that his death occurred some time during the night. Sensational rumors are broadcast.

RATE DECISION IS DELAYED

Commission May Not Make It Public For Two Weeks.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Indications were that the decision of the interstate commerce commission on the application of eastern railroads for a 5 per cent advance in freight rates would not be made public during the present week, as had been expected generally.

The decision may not be announced for at least two weeks, and possibly not for a longer time than that, as it is known that some serious phases of the general questions involved remain to be settled before a conclusion can be reached.

Conspiracy Charge in Connection with Loans.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company; Frederick S. Mosely, a banker, and Ralph D. Gillette of Westfield were indicted on a charge of conspiracy by the Middlesex county grand jury.

The true bill charges the inducing of the investment committees of two savings banks in Cambridge to lend money to the Hampden railroad corporation.

All were indicted also as accessories before the fact of conspiracy.

Gillett, who was at the head of the Hampden railroad corporation, died about a year ago. Mosely, who is a banker in Boston, is alleged to have been interested financially in the road.

The road was designed as a link to connect the Central Massachusetts division of the Boston & Maine with the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad near Springfield, Mass. It parallels in part the Athol branch of the Boston & Albany railroad.

The entire investment committees of the Cambridge Savings bank and the East Cambridge Savings bank were indicted on account of conspiracy to lend money to the Hampden corporation.

REBELS IN SPLIT

CHIEF HOLDS OFF SUPPLIES

Redoubtable Poncho Is Without Ammunition to Continue March to Mexico City and Supreme Chief Won't Give Him Any—Carranza Slaps at United States.

EL PASO — Another few days will witness a pitched battle between General Carranza and General Pancho Villa for supremacy in the constitutionalist cause, unless Carranza himself manifests a complete change of attitude.

Flaming with wrath because the supreme chief positively refused to forward him munitions sufficient to make the dash from Zacatecas to Mexico City, Villa and the flower of his army of 25,000 men are arriving at Torreon, which is only 270 miles from Monterey, Carranza's new capital. The last stage has now been reached, for Villa has two lines of railroad with which he can throw his men across the state of Coahuila and he can do it before any of the eastern generals, reported loyal to Carranza, can come to his assistance. His military chiefs and representatives in the United States are now proceeding to Monterey for the purpose of discussing the mediation propositions, but they are going singly by way of Laredo and they have no men with them.

General Carranza at Monterey shows no signs of receding from any position he has taken. In a speech he reiterated that he only feared "Judas in his own ranks," which was taken as another slap at Villa. He also repeated his former declarations against the United States. He declared that the United States is assuming the role of a dictator and that Mexico is tired of dictators.

"No such role will be tolerated by the constitutionalists."

These words were enthusiastically cheered by all who heard them. Friends of the constitutionalist cause who are at the border towns, according to dispatches are making every effort to prevent an armed clash between the two factions. Carranza is being urged to send Villa the ammunition, but steadfastly refuses to do so.

DEVELOPMENT OF AUTOMOBILE BROUGHT WORLD WIDE BENEFITS.

H. M. Jewett Paige President, Shows Why Motor Car Expenditures Are Not Wasteful Extravagance,

"Anything that gives us quicker and more economical transportation is a boon to civilization and the automobile has certainly contributed its share to this advancement," said H. M. Jewett, president of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company, in a address before a recent gathering of automobile dealers. Mr. Jewett's topic was "The Automobile Industry—What of Its Future?" and he took the occasion to show the fallacy of the idea that the millions spent each year for motor cars represented wasteful luxury.

"The prejudice against the automobile is being fast eliminated," continued Mr. Jewett. "When motor cars first appeared upon our streets and roads, every owner of a horse felt that each automobile owner was an enemy.

"Today there is still prejudice in the minds of some people who really do not understand the existing conditions of the case. There are a great many bankers who feel that farmers who buy automobiles are indulging in a luxury.

I have even heard some ill-informed men state that they are a real menace on account of the enormous amount of money that is being spent for them.

"Let us look into this subject for a moment and see, comparatively speaking, the relative amount of money that is being spent each year by the people of the United States in luxuries that really do no good, and in many instances are a detriment.

There are two billon dollars spent annually in the United States for intoxicating liquors. There are $459,191,882 spent for tobacco; $268,000,000 spent for chewing gum and candy; $260,700,000 spent in moving picture shows; $134,796,000 spent in carriages and wagons; and only $249,202,000 is exported abroad, which leaves net, in the year 1913, $217,948,000 expected for automobiles in the United States.

"Tobacco, liquors, chewing gum, candy and picture shows are certainly doing the world no good. They don't increase values anywhere; and most of them are injurious to the health; but let us see what good the automobile does.

The automobile has increased land values in the United States a hundred fold more than all the money spent on them. Think of the wonderful increase in real estate values of suburban property, farm lands' etc, that is attributable to the automobile, because it gives quick transportation.

"The automobile has also decreased the cost of living, by giving us better roads so that products from the farms can be brought into our city at a lower cost. It has also increased the zone of economical living.

"The automobile alone is responsible for 75 percent of the betterment of roads in the United States.

A Question of Brains.

At a club frequented by doctors the discussion came up recently whether a person could live without a brain. During the discourse one of the doctors said: "When I was practicing medicine in Indiana a remarkable case came under my supervision. A man while out hunting had leaned upon his shotgun and the weapon had gone off accidentally, making a large wound in his head just above the ear. The brain was laid bare and in bringing the patient to the hospital a handful of the gray matter leaked out. He was trepanned and finally recovered, his mental faculties apparently as good as ever."

"Your story is interesting," interrupted an auditor, "but it sounds to me somewhat inconsistent."

"Why so?" questioned the narrator.

"Because," answered the other doctor, "if he had ever had a handful of brains he wouldn't have leaned on the gun."—National Monthly.

Great Crest of the Sierra.

Mount Whitney, the highest point in the United States, is not an isolated mountain peak, like Mount Shasta or Mount Rainier, but is the loftiest point in the great California crest or enormous saw tooth ridge of the Sierra Nevada, including many eminences almost as high. Mount Whitney is 14,501 feet above sea level. Among those of slightly lesser height are Mount Russell, less than a mile distant, 14,190 feet; Mount Williamson, 14,384 feet; Mount Muir, 14,205 feet; Mount Langley, 14,042 feet; Mount Barnard, 14,003 feet, and Mount Tyndall, 14,025 feet. The most distant of these is less than six miles away.

By a strange freak of nature the lowest point of dry land in the United States is less than eighty miles from the highest. The lowest point is in Death valley and is 276 feet below sea level. It is said that from this point Mount Whitney can be easily seen on a clear day.

AN OLD TIME DANCE.

We print below an invitation to an Independence Ball given 79 years ago today. There may be a few left in Tecumseh who will remember some of the managers

Nothing Heroic About Him.

She was very romantic, and when she saw the scars on his face she jumped at conclusions.

"I think I have discovered your secret," she softly said. "You are a Heidelberg duelist and likewise a German baron"

"I am not a baron," he said, "and I never heard of Heidelberg. I'm only the fellow the students practice on at the barbers' college."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In a Dilemma.

One of London's charming young suffragettes said: "I want to get married just to prove that I can, and I don't want to get married just to prove that I don't have to If I don't they'll say I can't; if I do they'll say I have no more independence than any other woman."—T. P.'s London Weekly.

All in the Game.

Stern Parent—William, how did you tear your trousers so? Future Star (tearfully)—I—I—I—was practicing the fallaway slide. S. P.—Is that so? Well, you come out in the woodshed and I'll give you a demonstration of the hit and run.—Buffalo Express.

Improved.

"How do you like your alarm clock?" asked the jeweler.

"First rate."

"You didn't seem pleased with it at first."

"No, but it's broken now."—London Tit-Bits.

Truthful.

"I hadn't been talking with him three minutes before he called me an ass. What sort of a person is he?"

"Well, I never knew him to tell a lie."

Otis Hicks
Fenner, Jan. 24, 1834

Just four days after this auction Mr. Hicks home was gladdened by the arrival of a son, John F. Hicks whose picture is here given

J. F. HICKS

When fourteen years of age John Hicks came to Tecumseh with the munificent sum of 25 cents in his pocket. Six cents of this he spent for crackers and cheese, he then hired out to Luke Pierce in Franklin and for 8 months did the drudgery of farm work imposed on a boy for $8.50 per month.

His first business venture in Tecumseh was in a nursery under the name of Hicks, Strong & Hicks. Later he was in the hardware and lightning rod business with Lebbins Drew. Next he succeeded the firm of Barnes & Jones in the clothing, then in the jewelry store under the firm name of Hicks & Son. but through all he has operated for 60 years. He has been for many years and is now president of the largest Lightning Rod Co in the United States. He keeps a large force of men and horses busy through the season.

He is an ardent Mason and for 15 years was High Priest of the R. A. Chapter. For the last 50 years he has been a member of St. Peters Episcopal church serving as vestryman for many years. During the past year he and his wife have built a fine Parish house for this church, which is a much appreciated gift.

Mr. Hicks is still hale and hearty and enjoying the good things of life as he goes along. He has a clear head for his business which shows no signs of decreasing.

Ghost Plant of Oregon.

The ghost plant was known and much praised by the Indians of Oregon in times past and is sometimes known as the Indian pipe plant. It is said the Indians believed that it had great remedial qualities and made from it a lotion which they considered curative for diseases of the eye. It is a tall, waxlike plant about eight inches high, and its bloom resembles a waxen cup —Portland Oregonian.

The Possum Trail.

At one of the famous Georgia 'possum dinners one of the guests turned to the waiter with the remark: "Rastus, that 'possum must have gone to my head. It aches like fury."

"Is dat so, suh?" responded Rastus. "Funny how 'possum always meks for a bollah."—National Monthly.

His Infinite Variety.

The average man has within his system the material for 13 pounds of candles, a pound of nails, 800 pencils, bindings for 16 small books, 500 knife handles, 28 violin strings, 20 teaspoonfuls of salt and a pound of sugar.—Detroit Free Press.

A Sure Clue.

"Doctor, is your patient sure you can cure him by your new method?"

"How did you know my patient was not a woman?"

"I heard that you were going to try the silence cure."—Baltimore American.

Month of March in History.

March, the month of Martius (Mars), though the third month of our calendar, was the first month of the Roman year. It was considered as the first month of the year in England until the change of style in 1752, and the legal year was reckoned from the 25th of March. Its last days (old style) were once properly supposed to have been borrowed by March from April, and are proverbially stormy.

Low Estimate on the Jokesmith.

"A wag in the Starbeams column recently referred to my poetical paragraphs as 'larceny,'" a trifle disgruntledly stated Tennyson J. Daft. "Huh! If he considers my lyrics and limericks larceny, what would he call my runes and sagas? Aw, well, it doesn't matter, for the jokesmith is the lowest form of human life, anyhow, and only useful to show to what extent foolishness may go without being funny."—Kansas City Star.

"Fire Damp Whistle."

An ingenious invention for warning miners of fire damp is a kind of whistle which the gas automatically affects. If there is 1 per cent. of dangerous gas the whistle sounds broken and uneven notes, and when the gas reaches the danger point of 5 per cent. there is a succession of rapid, throbbing notes which are easily heard. Professor Heber is the inventor, and he has named the device the "fire damp whistle."

Why He Doubled the Price.

A young man who was a great talker was sent by his parents to Socrates to learn oratory. On being presented to the master the youth talked incessantly. ECHOES FROM ABROAD

Relatives in town have received a letter from Mrs. John Darling, nee Addie Ford, (a former Tecumseh girl) who with her husband is taking a trip abroad. Her letter is written at Luzern and she gives an interesting account of her trip. In Venice, she spoke of the lack of horses, mules, cows and autos, and of the pleasant trips in the gondalas and on the ferry boats. Here they met a couple of old friends and their children whom they had known at their old home in Duluth

At Milan, they found the houses more Americanized. Everywhere they found pleasant accommodations and perfect cleanliness. Especially interesting was her account of the ride through St. Gothard tunnell, which took 14 minutes and had 7 spirals of one mile in each which lifted the train 100 ft or more above the track they had passed over.

They are anticipating a trip in August to the "land of the midnight sun,' cruising up the coast of Norway, to the North Cape and Spitzbergen.

Every step of the journey is full of interest and Mr. and Mrs. Darling are enjoying it all.

The Koran.

In the London Everyman is a review of the Koran and its author, Mohammed. It is a one man's book and that man not an imaginative one but essentially a man of action and lacking in invention. The Koran is a jumbled mass of precepts, doctrines, threats, injunctions, divine commands, narrative, lyric and epic poetry. It's heaven and hell are too material for modern thought. "Obviously," says Everyman, "the Koran is meant not to be read with the eye, but to be recited, when the repetitions are not nearly so pronounced. It reflects a social order, a system of ideas as remote from Rome, and more especially from Greece, as our own are from the North American Indian. But neither time nor evolution can utterly quench the flame of Mohammed's personality, which carried his followers to reckless excesses, to the sovereignty of empires, which created an art peculiar to Islam and founded age long traditions."

One of the Sights of Paris.

The Paris department stores are worse jumbles even than the English department stores. When there is a special sale under way the bargain counters are rigged up on the sidewalks. There, in the open air, buyer and seller will chaffer and bicker and wrangle and quarrel and kiss and make up again—for all the world to see. One of the free sights of Paris is a frugal Frenchman with his face extensively haired over pawing like a Skye terrier through a heap of marked down lingerie, picking out things for the female members of his household to wear, now testing some material with his tongue, now holding a personal article up in the sunlight to examine the fabric—while his wife stands humbly, dumbly by, waiting for him to complete his selections.—Irving S. Cobb in Saturday Evening Post.

A Bird In the Hand, Etc.

The minister had just pronounced the words which made them one. Of course the next thing of importance was the fee.

The bridegroom looked at his bride, then at the minister. Fumbling in his pocket, he produced a two dollar bill.

"Here is a two dollar bill I will give you now," he said, "or I will wait until the end of six months and pay you what I think it is worth, even if it is a hundred dollars. You can take your choice."

The minister studied a moment, glanced at the bride and hastily replied:

"I'll take the $2 now."—Indianapolis News.

YOUR BLOOD is the canal of life but it becomes a sewer if clogged up. All life consists of building up and tearing down and just in the same manner that the blood carries to the various parts of the body the food that the cells need for building up, so it is compelled to carry away the waste material that's torn down. These waste materials are poisonous and destroy us unless liver and kidneys are stimulated into refreshed and vigorous life.

DR. PIERCE'S Golden Medical Discovery is the balancing power—a vitalizing power. It acts on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition—on the purifying filters which clean the blood. Thus fresh vitalized blood feeds the nerves, heart—and brain. This well known alterative relieves catarrh of the stomach and headaches accompanying same, and has been successful for more than a generation as a tonic and body-builder. It builds up the rundown system. You need it—if you are always "catching cold"—or have catarrh of the nose and throat. The active medicinal principles of American-Native-roots are extracted without alcohol and you can obtain this tonic in liquid or tablet form at any drug store or send 50 cents in 1-cent stamps for trial box of tablets.

LIEUT. J. C. PORTE

To Pilot Hydroaeroplane America in Transatlantic Flight.

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y. — America, the Rodman Wanamuaker transatlantic hydroaeroplane rose from the water with ten passengers, establishing another weight-carrying record for hydroaeroplanes.

The flight was not an extended one. In fact it was not so intended by Lieutenant Porte, who had invited the special correspondents of the New York, Boston and London dailies to take a "taxi" ride on the water. While planing along at flying speed the America struck a swell which bounced her into the air for the better part of a hundred yards. Lieutenant Porte said he could have flown at any time but had no intention of doing so with any such cargo.

ILLICIT LOVE BARRED BY MAIL INSPECTORS

General Delivery Users at Port Huron Must Give Reasons.

PORT HURON, MICH. — As a result of a visit of postoffice inspectors to this city to investigate alleged abuse of the general delivery system, new regulations have been adopted and the people who have been in the custom of receiving their mail through the general delivery window will be required to fill out a card stating name, age and address, as well as the reasons for getting mail at the window instead of by the city delivery.

The inspectors, it is said, criticised the class of people who were receiving their mail at the general delivery window and it is alleged they found that many married women were carrying on affairs with other men and that high school girls were carrying on correspondence with young men who were under the parental ban.

No minor will be given mail hereafter through the general delivery window.

On the Overland

He Changed His Mind

By WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co

At Pasadena Ralston boarded the California Overland. He passed through the train to the Pullman and dropped into the seat which had been reserved for him by wire. A woman in half mourning occupied the section opposite. He could not see her face, but he divined, from the outline of her figure that she was young and good looking.

Ralston, following her example, fell to an inattentive inspection of the scenery. They were being whirled through orange groves lined with ragged eucalyptus of graceful pepper trees.

But Ralston was restless, and the scenery failed to interest him, nor did the magazine into which he plunged prove of much more avail. At last he tossed it aside.

"YOU MUST NOT DO IT!"

"What rot the magazines sometimes print!" he said, unconsciously speaking aloud.

"I beg pardon. Did you speak?"

Even as he turned his head Ralston felt the thrill of vivid life rush through him. He had not heard that voice for five years, but he would have known it among ten thousand. The gray eyes met the brown ones.

"Kate!"

"Robert!"

Then both together, "What are you doing away out here?"

He explained that he was on his way back from the Philippines, where he had been the correspondent of an illustrated weekly. She, it appeared, was returning to the east from a visit to an aunt in Los Angeles. For an hour they talked of the people and the places they had known. He studied her covertly.

"Let me see—it must be four years since I saw you last."

"Five. Have I changed much?"

"No. I can't say that you have. People don't change much, as a rule; they merely develop. You were only a girl when I left. Of course it was open to you to develop in any one of several ways, but I can look back and see that you are what one might have logically expected you to become."

"Dear me, is it as bad as that?" she said lightly.

"As good, I should call it," he answered gravely. She shot a quick sidelong glance at him. "Often out in the Philippines when I was lying in the night, looking up at the stars in the sky and trying to find the softest spot of a cavalry saddle for a pillow, I have wondered what you would be like when I met you again. Marriage often changes a woman so completely."

"I thought you said that people don't change; that they only develop."

"I'll modify it, then. Marriage sometimes changes a woman completely, for better or worse."

There is no place like an overland train for quick friendships, unless it may be an ocean liner. Casual acquaintances of many years' standing become intimate in a day. Long before the train had reached Albuquerque Ralston was wondering whether his boyhood's love was to devour him again. Kate was free; her husband had been dead three years, and her old charm appealed to him as subtly as ever. He wished the journey would never end.

Kate noticed that he began to grow nervous; his eyes were shining with a steady glow that frightened her. Once he took out his watch, and she heard him say softly under his breath, "Twelve hours more." She knew that at La Junta he would change for Denver, and she felt an impending crisis approaching. But her feeling was all of joy—a joy so fierce and poignant that it was scarce akin to happiness.

She had married a man who had not loved her and whom she had not loved. They had been friends and nothing more. Now this young man's wild passion found ready echo in her love starved heart. Always she had loved him, though never till this day had she admitted it to herself.

The porter came round to make up the berths. They moved to an adjoining section and forgot the passing hours—forgot everything except each other's presence. More than one passenger watched them curiously and wondered what fascinating topic held them in such rapt interest. The last lingerer from the smoking section had long since retired before they took any cognizance of time. At last he looked at his watch absently. He was startled to see that it was past 1 o'clock.

"It must be late," she said, noting for the first time that the lights were low and that they were alone.

"No; it's early," he replied unblushingly. "Don't go yet. You'll have plenty of time to sleep after I leave you."

She stayed, against her judgment. She told herself that she would leave him in a few minutes. He had not mentioned love, but she felt the strong undertow of it through all his turbid speech. When at last she broke away from him it was to lie the night through in vivid wakefulness.

For Ralston the night was filled with the stress of emotion. The one woman in the world for him was in the section across the aisle, and he had to face the fact that he was bound to another. Two years before, in that utter loneliness of soul that comes to men in exile, he had met Major Remington's daughter and had asked her to marry him. She had neither accepted nor rejected him, but when she left for the States three months later there had been an understanding between them that he was to seek her out and renew his suit when he came back to America. He had been detained in the Philippines longer than he had expected, but he was now on his way to her.

They were both up early from a sleepless night and they drifted together again inevitably.

Presently they were climbing the mountain side, with two engines in front and another behind to push. The woman could see the burning misery in the man's eyes, and from him to her there passed the subtle sense of some alien force which divided them.

"You are not married?" she asked him suddenly.

"No, I am not—married."

"You mean that"—

A reckless bitterness welled up in him. "You may congratulate me. I am probably on my way to be married."

Her level eyes fixed him. They were both very white.

"Probably, you say. Don't you know?"

"There was a provisional engagement. It was understood that I was to offer myself again when I returned."

"And you do not love her? So much your tone implies."

"I never loved but the one woman I have played at love with others."

She shivered. "It is horrible. You must not do that. You have no right!"

"Sometimes a man has signed away his right to do right," he answered steadily. "I thought it all out last night, and I shall live up to the letter of my agreement."

A brakeman passed through the car calling: "Next stop La Junta! Change cars for Pueblo, Denver, Colorado Springs and all points north of there!"

The train slackened speed, jarred down to a halt. He rose and looked down on her with dumb, anguished eyes. He did not kiss her; he did not even touch her hand.

"Whatever happens, I want you to remember that I never loved but the one woman."

She answered, "I shall remember, Robert."

Ralston swung from the car into a collision with Lieutenant Hasbrough of the Seventh infantry.

"I say, my man, be a little careful—well, where did you drop from, Ralston?

"Wasn't it at Samar I saw you last, or was it Talnos? You were doing a picture of a burning Gugu village Hang it, but I'm glad to see you! Where you bound for—Denver? I just came down from there—been attending Nan Remington's wedding—'member her?—second daughter of Major Remington of Bell's brigade."

Ralston's pulse hammered. He gripped the lieutenant's arm with a clutch like steel. "Whose wedding did you say?" he demanded.

Hasbrough eyed him curiously, but charitably laid his excitement to a lingering touch of the island fever. Quietly he extricated his arm. "Miss Nan Remington—I say, Ralston, you needn't grow so enthusiastic. I'm not the groom."

"You're sure?"

"Sure I'm not the groom?" laughed the lad.

"No; sure of the wedding. There's no possibility of any mistake, is there?"

The lieutenant roared: "Mistake? I guess not! Why, hang it, I stood up with the man—Jenkins of the artillery. You must remember him."

Ralston climbed up the steps down which he had just come. The car conductor barred his way.

"This isn't the Denver train, sir. It's on the other track."

Ralston laughed happily. "Let it stay there. I'm not looking for it."

"Oh, I thought you said"— began the perplexed official.

"Said! Great streaks of thunder, a man's liable to say anything! There's no tariff on changing your mind since I left the country, is there? I'm going to Chicago."

SECOND GIRL CRASH VICTIM NEAR DEATH

Little Hope for Recovery of Miss Imogene Smith,

Richmond, Ind., July 6.—Another fatality may result from the automobile accident a mile west of Richmond. Miss Imogene Smith, daughter of Postmaster Ed. Smith of Newcastle, is near death. Her skull is fractured at the base of the brain. Miss Ada Kelly of Richmond, daughter of M. W. Kelly, died a few minutes after the accident, in which a car driven by George [illegible] of this city turned over as a party of young persons was returning from a dance given by the Elks lodge at Jackson Park. It was learned that there were seven instead of six people in the car, the one previously not accounted for being Clarence Jackson of Newcastle. He was only slightly injured.

Miss Grace Kelly, sister of the girl killed, is seriously injured about the back and abdomen, but will recover.

Newcastle, Ind., July 6.—Miss Imogene Smith, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident near Richmond last night, which cost the life of Miss Ada Kelly, was prominent socially here. She was actively identified with the movement put on foot here to employ a visiting nurse.

Washington, July 6.—President Wilson has requested the resignation of George Fred Williams, American minister to Greece and Montenegro, as a result of Mr. Williams' public statements regarding the situation in Albania.

Mr. Williams' own reports on his statements were taken up at the cabinet meeting. Afterward Mr. Wilson decided their effect was such that it would be improper for Mr. Williams longer to represent the United States in the Balkans. It has been understood that Mr. Williams, of his own accord, has forwarded his resignation.

Roadhouses Charged With Selling Liquor to Minors.

Detroit, July 6.—Essex county police, assisted by the license inspectors and Probation Officer Hackney, of Windsor, will commence a crusade to prevent girls under the age of eighteen years from frequenting the roadhouses in the county.

According to one of the officers, there is an old Ontario statute that prohibits girls under age from drinking in hotels. This has, it is said, never been enforced, but frequent complaints by parents have induced the authorities to investigate.

SING SING RUN BY BOOZE AND DOPE

Sensational Charges Made by Former Warden Clancy.

CONVICTS CONTROL PRISON

Former Warden Describes Unloading Drugs From Boat by Stealth—Influence of Prisoners With Sellers of Habit Forming Articles Such There Is No Discipline.

New York, July 6.—James H. Clancy, warden of Sing Sing prison until a few weeks ago, charges that convicts actually control the prison, because of their influence with a political ring which makes possible the smuggling of drugs, whisky and contraband supplies.

"If there is ever a real investigation of conditions at Sing Sing there will be a scandal that will shock the state," said Mr. Clancy.

Ring Supplies Dope.

"Members of a political ring which supplies the prisoners with drugs and whisky are making $25,000 a year out of the graft. A few days before I left Sing Sing, I appeared at the prison about 1:30 o'clock in the morning unexpectedly. There were several keepers in the yard and when I asked them what they were doing they told me they were watching a motor boat which was landing at the prison pier without showing any lights. I kept my eye on the boat for fifteen minutes and then ran to the pier with several keepers. By that time the crew of the boat had landed several packages. When they saw me coming, they hauled out into the stream so hastily that they left the packages on the dock. I found several cases of whisky containing half pint bottles for easy distribution among the prisoners and a large quantity of cocaine, heroin, morphine and opium.

Costs State More Than Cash.

"As things stand there is very little hope for the first-term prisoner, the young man who goes up to Sing Sing for the first time and who might be reformed under proper conditions. He is almost sure to leave the prison a drug fiend and acquainted with all of the vices to be found there. Sing Sing costs the state a good deal more than the cash it takes to run it."

FARMERS OF KANSAS HAVE BUMPER CROPS

Oklahoma and Texas Share In Prosperity Prospects.

Chicago, July 6.—Kansas farmers will receive more than $100,000,000 for their wheat crop this season, which will insure prosperity not only for the residents of that state but for the railroads as well. This is the word brought from the Southwest by Darius Miller, president of the Burlington railway, after a two weeks' visit in that section.

Mr. Miller admitted laughingly that the prospects in the Southwest were such as to jeopardize any prospects the western railroads may have of obtaining a 10 per cent increase in freight rates.

HOIST BY HIS OWN PETARD

I. W. W. Anarchist Blown Up by Bomb He Made.

New York, July 6.—A dynamite explosion at 1626 Lexington avenue, between One Hundred and Second and One Hundred and Third streets, killed four persons, hurt seven, smashed to flinders half of a six double story apartment house, and led to a police inquisition among the local anarchists and members of the I. W. W., one of whom, Arthur Caron, died in the explosion and may have caused it. The apartment house destroyed was the headquarters of the I. W. W. agitators.

The police theory tonight was that Caron had on the top floor of the apartment house half a box full of dynamite that he was making, or intended to make, into bombs for use against such men as John D. Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller Jr.

REBEL FACTIONS AGAIN AT PEACE

Villa to Have Center Position in Mexico City March.

Mediators Fix Up Plan Whereby the Rebel General Will Be Back in Field Within a Week—He Is Not to Be Interfered With In His Further Fighting.

Mexico City, July 6.—Elections for president, vice president, deputies and senators were held in that portion of the republic controlled by the Huerta government. General Huerta appears to be the favorite candidate for the presidency and General Blanquet for vice president.

El Paso, Tex., July 6—Within less than a week Pancho Villa will be back in the field at the head of his rebel army, advancing towards Mexico City, if nothing goes awry with plans now being worked out by the "mediators" at Torreon.

Between the claims and counter claims of the Villa and Carranza supporters the matter sifted down to the fact that there will be peace between Carranza and Villa for the time being at least; that the war against Huerta will be pressed and that Villa will do as he pleases and Carranza will pretend to sanction it all.

In return Villa will continue to maintain his loyalty to the "ssupreme chief." The conference has had the effect of putting Villa closer to the Carranza generals, Obregon and Gonzales, and their commanders and is expected to bring results in the field.

Villa to Have Center Position.

The conference has brought all leaders or their personal representatives together and in future Villa promises to co-operate with these commanders. They promise also to co-operate with him. Villa is to have the center position in the march on Mexico City and when he cannot get coal from his own territory the Carranza element will supply it. He is also to get ammunition when he calls for it, but he will raise his own funds for this purpose. All he asks is permission to import it through Tampico.

Villa to Issue His Own Money.

Villa's paper money is to be retired and the issue of "constitutionalist" money sanctioned by Carranza will replace it, but Villa does not pledge himself not to issue more. As the exigencies of his campaigns arise Villa will issue his money as his armies advance. All that Villa has consented to do is to allow Carranza to retire his paper with Carranza paper.

THE NORTHERN TUTOR

A Story of Old Plantation Life

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

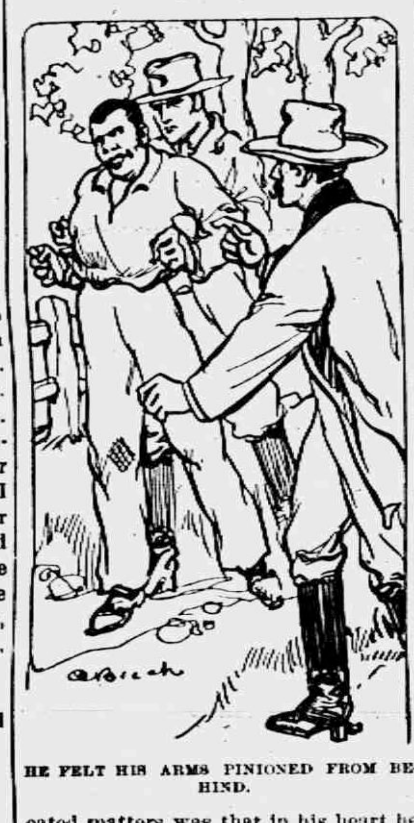
Some sixty years ago Edward Lanier, a graduate of a northern college, having read much of plantation life, felt inclined to spend a few years in the south as tutor of the children of a planter. He desired to study law, but must support himself while doing so. By following his proposed course he would have much time to himself and live an entirely different life from what he would live in the north.

Lanier, through friends, obtained the position he desired in the family of Colonel Malcolm Sinclair, who owned a large plantation in Georgia and 1,000 negroes. He found the colonel an honorable, conscientious man and thoroughly identified with southern customs and interests. The eldest son was fifteen, and Lanier was expected to prepare him for college. A daughter, Alma, seventeen, was also to receive instruction from him. The other children were from seven to twelve.

If there is one principle concerning their children that parents are apt to ignore it is that, given a young man thrown in intimate relationship with a young woman, and there usually results a love affair. One of Edward Lanier's duties was to teach Alma Sinclair an hour a day. He lived under the same roof with her, and their association was unrestricted. Whether Colonel and Mrs. Sinclair did not think their daughter old enough to fall in love, or whether they considered that she would not think of a northern penniless tutor as a suitor, does not matter; they seemed oblivious to the principle above stated.

Lanier realized that he was hired to teach their daughter, not to make love to her. Indeed, the kindness and consideration with which he was treated by the family, the liberty accorded him, threw him on his honor not to attempt to win the heart of a girl of the impressionable age of seventeen. Alma herself soon showed signs of a preference for her tutor. This was in no wise due to a lack of modesty, but to an innocent unconsciousness that she had lost her heart to him.

When Lanier saw in his pupil signs of love it troubled him. What complicated matters was that in his heart he reciprocated the attachment. But never a word or a look of his betrayed love. Indeed, when he saw that his charge was in her innocence stepping over the line that separated them he would ignore any recognition of her act.



HE FELT HIS ARMS PINIONED FROM BEHIND.

The more oblivious he seemed to the girl's preference for him the more complicated became the situation, for his ignoring of her expressions of attachment were set down to indifference, and that in one who loves is not to be tolerated. Alma being unconscious of her real feelings, or perhaps not realizing the danger of the situation, was very incautious. One day during the presence of her mother she spoke to Lanier in a tone to indicate her preference for him. He knit his brows, looking a warning. Mrs. Sinclair not only heard what her daughter said, but caught the tutor's look intended to repress her. She informed her husband of her discovery.

Lanier had been considering the expediency of breaking away from the girl he loved and who loved him and had made up his mind to do so at an early date. He was too late. Within an hour after the episode mentioned Colonel Sinclair came to him and said:

"You have been admitted to my home and have been treated with every consideration. You have taken advantage of your position to make love to your pupil. I desire that you leave this house immediately."

This was in the olden time when man's deference, his sense of protection, to woman was all powerful. How could Lanier justify himself? By saying that he had never spoken or even looked a word of love to the planter's daughter? Such a course would be throwing the blame, if indeed there were any blame, on the girl. Lanier entered upon no defense whatever. He made no reply, except to say that he would immediately get together his belongings and depart.

Unfortunately the tutor had recently made purchases which had taken all the money he had or was due him. Colonel Sinclair's generosity was not a whit influenced by this tacit acknowledgment of the charge he had made, though it is quite possible that he desired to more than discharge his obligations to the man who had wronged him. He sent his steward to Lanier with what he owed him for salary, with an additional hundred dollars that he did not owe. Lanier took what was due and sent the rest back by the steward without comment.

Lanier would have preferred to return to the north, but the journey was of more moment than today. Besides, he had no money, and, although he could have borrowed all he wanted from planters—whose liberality was proverbial—he did not care to do so. A gentleman who desired a secretary met him the day after his leaving Colonel Sinclair's and gave him employment in that capacity. Lanier would be ready to go north within a few months to pass his examinations for the bar and could save money enough from his salary to pay his way.

There were no children in the home of Lanier's new employer, and the young man had no complications to fear. He, however, declined all invitations, desiring to avoid meeting Alma Sinclair lest he should lay himself liable to a charge of remaining in the neighborhood with a view to prosecuting his suit. Alma, who had learned of the cause of his discharge, but was too young to take any action in the matter, simply suffered in silence.

While Colonel Sinclair treated his slaves with every kindness, it is not to be supposed that in all cases this induced a return. There was one man, called Jim, who under whatever civil system he had lived would have been a criminal and a desperado. The colonel had been obliged to discipline him on various occasions and during one of them while receiving his punishment in the presence of his master declared that he would be revenged. Sinclair, who knew no fear, thought little of the threat, but his wife and his family from that moment lived in terror lest the man make it good. Mrs. Sinclair begged her husband to sell Jim to some one who would take him to Texas, as far from Georgia as any point where slavery existed, but the colonel declined on the ground that he had no right to transfer a danger to any one else. He therefore kept Jim and sought to win him from his ways by justice and liberal treatment.

One afternoon Lanier was sent by his employer to collect a debt owing him. The only road by which he could reach the desired point was past the Sinclair plantation. He was on horseback and was skirting the plantation with a fence only between him and it when in a grove beyond he heard high words. He recognized in the voices a white man and a negro, that of the white man sounding like Colonel Sinclair's. Dismounting, he threw the reins over a rail and, climbing the fence, saw Jim, who was a powerful negro, advancing quickly upon his master.

Within the grove was the Sinclair family cemetery. The colonel had lost a child, whose grave he visited frequently. Jim had been watching for an opportunity to take revenge upon him and had entered the grove from a different direction. As Sinclair was placing flowers on his child's grave he heard a twig break and saw Jim coming with a club in his hands quite big enough to kill him. He ordered the negro to his quarters in a tone of authority which he hoped might cow him. Jim told him that he had come to repay the punishment he had given him and continued to move toward him. The colonel, being unarmed, had a choice between this unequal contest and flight. He disdained the latter and stood his ground.

The negro was within a dozen yards of his victim when he felt his arms pinioned from behind. Lanier had stolen up unseen by him and grappled with him. But Lanier could not cope with the giant for long. Colonel Sinclair darted forward and threw his arms about the negro's legs, and Lanier pulled him over. Between the two white men they mastered him, called for help, and he was soon secured. When he was led away with his arms tied behind him the colonel seized Lanier's hand.

"I owe you my life, sir. One blow of that cudgel would have finished me. Come home with me."

"I am on my way to perform a duty."

"Then come when you have performed it."

Lanier returned to his horse, mounted him, rode away, and when he returned stopped at the Sinclair plantation.

He found the conditions far different from those that had marked his departure. Alma, taking advantage of the changed situation, assured her father that Lanier had never spoken a word of love to her, but that she had doubtless shown by her manner a preference for him. Having heard this from his daughter, the colonel added to his thanks for saving his life an apology for the way he had treated the man who had saved it. Lanier was restored to a welcome in the Sinclair household and in time avowed his love. But, too proud to ask the girl to be his wife, he returned to the north and was admitted to the bar. Later he returned and took her home with him as his wife.

Ancient Gallantry.

The respect and veneration paid to the fair sex formed an essential ingredient in chivalry. Principle of female adoration so predominently displayed in every aspect of chivalry extended its influence to the laws of the times, for we find James II. of Aragon ordering in this manner: "We will that every man, whether knight or no, who shall be in company with a lady pass safe and unmolested unless he be guilty of murder."

And Louis II., Duke of Bourbon, instituting the order of the Golden Shield, enjoins his knights to honor, above all, the ladies and not permit any one to slander them, "because," adds he, "from them, after God, comes all the honor that man can acquire."

The Suicide Symphony.

The idea that music may be harmful—that it can create a fever in the blood dangerous to life and reason—will come as a revelation to many. Friedrich Nietzsche, the well known German philosopher, declared that there is something in some music, most notable in Wagner and Tschaikowsky, which acts unfavorably on the brain and nerves of many people. Tschaikowsky's baleful influence cannot be denied. He destroyed himself after composing his famous "Sixth Symphony," and as several have died by their own hands after playing it it has come to be known as the "suicide symphony."

The Homeric Poems.

No one of any literary pretensions believes any longer in the one time prevalent opinion that the "Iliad" and "Odyssey" were composed by a single poet, be he Homer or some one else. Wolf away back in 1795 proved that the poems are the result of many minds, being made up of many epics of many periods and finally collected and arranged by Peisistratus about B. C. 550.—New York American.

TECUMSEH'S INDEPENDENT BASE BALL TEAM

Tecumseh has this year organized a base ball team that is playing a class of ball which for an independent team in a village of this size is exceedingly good.

The team has played six games this season, winning four of them and tieing one. They won and lost a game with Clinton, won one from Riga and played an eight inning tie in Marshall

Last Saturday, July 4th, two games were played against the Hudson Independents, a salaried team. Tecumseh winning both games by scores of 8-1 and 14-10 the afternoon game being a fourteen inning affair.

Marshall comes to Tecumseh Thursday July 9th for a game and the team deserves the patronage of everyone interested in base ball here. Marshall has a fast semi-professional team, having won most of their games against such teams as Charlotte, Kalamazoo, Jackson and Albion.

The better the support of the citizens the better the class of ball that can be played here.

MOODY REBELLED.

Moving a Vote of Thanks Was Not In His Line That Night.

Dwight L. Moody during his first visit to England attended a meeting at which the Earl of Shaftesbury was chairman. The duty of proposing a vote of thanks was assigned to him and the announcement made:

"Our American cousin, the Rev. Mr. Moody of Chicago, will now move a vote of thanks to the noble earl who has presided on this occasion."

The whole thing was quite out of Mr. Moody's line. With an utter disregard of conventionality he burst upon the audience with the bold announcement:

"The speaker has made two mistakes. To begin with, I'm not the Rev. Mr. Moody at all. I'm plain Dwight L. Moody, a Sunday school worker. And then I'm not your American cousin. By the grace of God I'm your brother, interested with you in our Father's work for his children.

"And now about this vote of thanks to the 'noble earl for being our chairman this evening.' I don't see why we should thank him any more than he should thank us. When at one time they offered to thank our Mr. Lincoln for presiding over a meeting in Illinois he stopped it. He said he'd tried to do his duty and they'd tried to do theirs. He thought it was about an even thing all around."

That opening fairly took the breath away from Mr. Moody's hearers. Such a talk could not be gauged by any known standard. Mr. Moody carried his English audiences with him from that beginning to his latest labors.

OLD WORLD BARBERS.

Their Prices Are Low and Methods In Some Cases Are Crude.

The barber shops of the United States and Canada are the finest in the world and charge the highest prices. Comparatively few cities of Europe use American chairs, and many of these run their barber shops in connection with men's furnishing stores.

In most European cities a hair cut and a shampoo cost 6 cents, and in parts of London a shave costs 4 cents. In some Italian cities 1 cent is charged for a shave and 2 cents for a hair cut, and in Turkey barbers take their entire pay in tips.

Many German barbers make wigs and switches while waiting for customers, and many French barbers do ladies' hairdressing. Austrian barbers are compelled to serve apprenticeships of four years on pay beginning at 41 cents a week and ending at $1.02 a week before they can own their shops.

Syrian barbers seat their customers in straight backed chairs before tiny wall mirrors and fix queer shaped pans about their throats. Then they rub on with their fingers lather made from cheap soap.

In India your barber calls at your house and shaves you every morning for $2 a month.

In China the barbers carry stools, small tubs, razors and scissors about the streets, stopping on the sidewalks to perform their work, just as scissors grinders do in America. — New York Sun.

Some British Sinecures.

Gladstone was born at a time when sinecures such as those held by Horace Walpole still abounded, and to the end of his life he took a lenient view of the persons who profited by them. A. G. C. Liddell records in his diary on March 12, 1892: "Dined with the Cobhams. Mr. Gladstone there. * * * Some one alluded to the diminution of sinecures. Mr. Gladstone said that there was nothing dishonorable in accepting a sinecure if it was recognized by the society in which it existed and not considered unusual or unworthy. One of the last sinecures, where there was absolutely nothing to do, which was not the case with all sinecures, was the office of chief justice in eyre, north of the Trent. It was held by Tom Duncombe and was worth £12,000 per annum."—London Spectator.

Origin of Smoking.

The origin of the custom of smoking is veiled in mystery. The Chinese are thought to have had the habit at a very early date, and this is not surprising, judging today from the Chinaman's fondness for the pipe. When Columbus discovered America he found smoking indulged in by all the tribes of Indians, but the practice had a religious association to them. From Santo Domingo tobacco was introduced into Spain and Portugal in 1559, but it was then used in the shape of snuff. Sir Walter Raleigh, however, is the first man of note to make smoking a fashionable habit.

Antiquity of Death Masks.

Although there is no mention of death masks in the works of Homer or in any of the later classics, modern explorers have satisfied themselves that in the early burials of all nations it was the custom to cover the heads and bodies of the dead with sheets of gold so pliable that they took the impress of the form, and not infrequently, when in the course of centuries the embalmed flesh had shriveled or fallen away, the gold retained the exact cast of the features. Schliemann found a number of bodies "covered with large masks of gold plate in repousse work," several of which have been reproduced by means of engraving in his "Mycenae," and he asserts that there can be no doubt whatever that each one of these represents the likeness of the deceased person whose face it covered.

THE CHAUTAUQUE UNDER CANVAS.

There are hundreds of thousands of people throughout America who could never hope to attend a Chautauqua if long travel were involved. Instead, the Chautaugua must be brought to them: To meet this problem the traveling-tent or circuit Chautauqua sprang into being.

As these Chautauquas run from five to seven days each and as single admission tickets to several different sessions may, in many instances, represent the same person, it is impossible to give definite figures as to just how many different individuals actually attend the Chautauguas in the United States each year. The number, however, conservatively estimated at between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000,

Tent or circuit Chautauguas are for the most part being held in places from 5000 to 25,000 population though successful inroads are being made in the larger cities. Birmingham, Ala., is the largest city in which a circuit Chautauqua will be held this year. Savannah, Ga., Charleston, S C, and Chattanooga, Tenn., and a number of cities of this size are proving successful Chautauqua centers.

The hauling of the seats, the driving of the stakes, the raising of the big canvas tent, and some of the methods of advertising in connection with the coming of a circuit Chautauqua to a town or city make the incident not unlike the arrival of a circus. Instead of profane and reckless laborers for tent crews, however, the Chautauqua crews are composed chiefly of young men from the colleges.

Two weeks before the arrival of the big tent each town is in gala attire. Streamers span the business streets. Banners hang from every awning. Flags are tacked on the fences of the rural districts. Cloth pennants are given to automobile owners and paper pennants adorn the windows of the homes Citizens form themselves into a boosters' parade and tour the country round about in autos. In not a few instances Chautauqua week is made an old home-coming event as well.

It is a busy week, indeed,—three sessions a day. The forenoon is given up to a literary lecture and the work of a playground director; the afternoon to lectures and music, and the evenings to magic, Shakespearean plays, selections from grand opera and other similar forms of entertainment, From sixty to seventy people, including a band of thirty pieces, appear on these programs.

If attended by single admissions the total cost of a week's program in some instances would be as high as $8 but season tickets are sold at from $2 to $2.50.—From "The Chautauqua of Today," by W. Frank McClure, in the American Review of Reviews for the month of July.

Swords That Snapped.

A great many swords were brought home after the war between the states welded in the middle, because the young officers who owned them had bragged about their elasticity and had broken them in trying to demonstrate it. The tragedy happened in this way:

The young officer in setting out for the war had been given a fine sword by his admiring friends at home. He was told and made to believe that his sword was of tried Damascus or Toledo steel and that it would bend double without breaking. In camp somewhere the young captains and lieutenants would fall to vaunting their trusty blades, and on a bet one of them would stick the point of his sword into a tree and begin to bend the hilt around to meet the point. And just as the hilt came around the blade snapped in two in the middle. (Very few of these presentation swords were as Damascus or as Toledo as they were supposed to be.)

After that the two parts of the sword had to be welded, and the weapon shows the welding to this day.—New York Mail.

Old London Cookshops.

Mediaeval London, besides being a "city of taverns," was famous for its cookshops, such as the place on the river bank described by Fitzstephen in the thirteenth century: "There every day ye may call for any dish of meat, roast, fried or sodden, fish both small and great, venison and fowl. If friends come upon a sudden wearied with travel to a citizen's house and they be loath to wait for curious preparations and dressings of fresh meat let the servant run to the water side, where all things that can be desired are at hand." This particular place of public cookery apparently did an indoor as well as an outdoor trade, for Fitzstephen further described it as being used both day and night by "multitudes of soldiers or other strangers who refresh themselves to their content on roast goose, the fowl of Africa and the rare gadwit of Ionia." But what were the two last mentioned viands?—London Standard.

A Curious Story.

The queen of Hanover, wife of King Ernest Augustus of Hanover (better known as the Duke of Cumberland, son of George III.), died at Hanover about 1842 of an illness which baffled the skill of her doctors as to its real cause. During her illness a clairvoyant was consulted, who wrote certain curious signs and words on the door of her bedroom; but, although these mystic words were repeated over and over again, the queen died. The king of Hanover after his wife's death gave orders that her bedroom should always be kept as though the queen would sleep there at night. The bed was turned down, the pillows reshaken, hot water brought and the daintiest slippers laid in readiness for her.—London Tatler.

When Real Knowledge Comes.

"Mamma," asked a little girl, "how long did you know papa before you married him?"

"My dear," replied the mother, "I was acquainted with your father for several years, but I really didn't know him until after we were married."

30 DAYS IN JAIL.

Mrs. Carl Albert Remington arrested by Deputy Sheriff John B. Smith in Dundee Thursday night, on the charge of obtaining money on false pretenses was taken before Justice Hosmer Friday morning and was sentenced to the county jail for 30 days, or pay a fine and costs amounting to $25.50 She was taken to the jail Friday. When arrested she and her husband were in an intoxicated condition. The husband has resumed his work at the Hailey carriage shop after having sobered up from his late spree.

THE 4th AT WAMPLER'S LAKE

It is claimed that Saturday July 4th was the banner day for a crowd at Wamplers lake. Games and races occupied the time in the forenoon, and in the afternoon a short program was given in the dance hall, when Judge Larwell of Adrian gave an elequent and patriotic address Dancing was enjoyed later in the afternoon and evening and there was a fine display of fireworks

IN A CYCLONE

The following letter from Mrs. J. A. Smith who with her husband and son and Lottie, his wife moved from our vicinity several months ago, was written to Mrs. Wm. Powell, and is of interest to all their friends, who will rejoice to know that they escaped the fearful cyclone of June 27.

Eaton Rapids
June 28, 1914

I suppose you have heard of the terrible cyclone which passed through here yesterday between five and six. Lottie, Lualta and I had been to town and [illegible] within [illegible] mile of home when it began to lighting and thunder terribly hard; our horse would start to run everytime, but we arrived home and John was there in the yard, he took the horse right to the barn. Clyde had just brought his team in, he had been ploughing, but did not think it was going to storm after all, for the clouds had gone by and the sun was shining. John ran the buggy in and started for the house when he see timber and hay coming through the air, he ran in and said to get in the cellar. It went by our house east and a little south. In the east was a rainbow and clouds so black and the big funnel a rolling, it looked to us as we came out of the cellar as large around as a barn It took everything in its path all along on the south side of the road within a half mile of us, on both sides of us to the east and west every barn, nice new ones, all went down and three houses, three horses were killed, and one family very nearly killed, a man, wife, three children, the man that works for them and a lady that was visiting them. The man and woman they took to the hospital, the others went across the road in a little building, We went right up within fifteen or twenty minutes, found them all mud, one man had a hip broken, one a shoulder broken, two little boys were covered with blood and mud and all cut up, it was an awful sight. We could not get a doctor as all the telephones were out of commission. Two boys, names Fulton and Wing, who were just starting out and now every thing gone, clothes, bedding, furniture and everything. One woman, a Mrs. Ford with a broken back lives just west of us. Woods, across the road and east of us, had a nice big horse killed, barn flat on the ground, Clyde and Lottie are up helping as I am sitting here writing, thousands of people are going by to see the ruins, Dewit Bowin was in the wreck, his barn and nearly all of his out buildings are gone down, all of his tools and some hens. John has been up there nearly all day helping him to get a place to put his stock.

Clyde helped one of the aid ladies collect of the people as they came, he collected over $100 for them. Just one tree in the orchard was blown down, but the yard and fields are strewn with debris. Well I do not want to see another, it was just south of us, so we could see the whole thing The sun shining bright, a big rainbow with the great funnel whirling in it. It never saw the clouds so black. I suppose because the sun shone so brightly against them.

Mules and War.

Along all the frontiers of the world wherever there is a war there is a demand for the mule. Compared with him the much vaunted war horse is a vanishing figment of the past. His strength, his sureness of foot, his wariness of eye, his ability to endure hardship and hard work on little food and with little care, have made him invaluable as a campaigner, whether in deserts or mountains. The mule has seen the camel and the elephant disappear from armies. He may see the horse vanish. He has seen the motorcycle and the motorcar come in. He may see the aeroplanes numbered by thousands. But it is not likely he will ever see himself superseded in his own line of work. There may be mules without war, but probably never a war without mules.—New York World.

A Chip of the Old Block.

"Father," said the student, "I want to talk to you about changing my course of study."

"Talk to your mother, son," directed the father, who was reading the sporting page.

"Mother," said the son, "I made a mistake when I elected chemistry. But, it is not too late to change even yet. I want to take astronomy instead."

The mother searched the eyes of her son sharply. Then she said:

"Nope. You'll have to think up some better excuse for staying out at night!"—New York Globe.

GOLF WITH ANY OLD CLUB.

He Was a Shy Man, Too, but Surprised the Clever Amateur.

He was standing looking idly round him when I came forward to the starting tee at Blackhill golf course, a little dapper man, whom any one would have guessed could not play for nuts. Perhaps that latter idea is what caused me to ask if he meant to play a round. I should love to give somebody a proper whacking.

"I would like a round," he said, almost shyly, "but I have no clubs." This was not a chance to be missed. I would let him use mine. How pleased he was in his simple way. Any old club would do for every shot. "Well, well," I crooned to myself; "if the man is out for a thorough drubbing I am the last to deny him it."

He took a dirty ball from his pocket, made an easy sort of swipe at it, and I have never seen a ball so eager to get to the hole as that one was. His method of attack seemed to consist of one or two iron shots and a putt. I will vouch for it that he deliberately allowed me to win a hole or two. I have never felt so completely humiliated in all my life, yet he was quiet, inoffensive and almost shy.

"You are a brilliant golfer," I gushed as we made for the nineteenth hole. "Oh, ay, I ha'e to be!" he said quietly. "It's my work, ye see; it's my work!"

Why don't those professionals try to look more like real golfers?—Glasgow News.

How to Become a Poet.

"The art of writing poetry is very difficult at first, but it becomes easy by practice," says an English writer. "The best way for a beginner is to take a line from another poem; then he should construct a line to fit it; then, having won his start, he should strike out the first line (which, of course, does not belong to him) and go ahead. When the poet has written three verses of four lines each, he should run out and find a girl somewhere, and read it to her."

An Ignoble Use.

Washington Irving in "Crayon Papers" says: "I was once at an evening entertainment given by the Duke of Wellington at Apsley House to William IV. The duke had manifested his admiration of his great adversary, Napoleon, by having portraits of him in different parts of the house. At the bottom of the grand staircase stood the colossal statue of the emperor by Canova. It was of marble in the antique style, with one arm partly extended, holding a figure of Victory. Over this arm the ladies in tripping upstairs to the ball had thrown their shawls. It was a singular office for the statue of Napoleon to perform in the mansion of the Duke of Wellington!

Imperial Caesar, dead and turned to clay!

Qualified.

"This," said the able manager, "is a difficult part to play. The character doesn't have to speak a word during the performance, and yet he is on the stage the greater part of the time. Do you think you can do it?"

"I should think I can!" exclaimed the actor. "I'm well qualified for the part. I've been married for twenty years and haven't had a chance to say a word yet."

Old Love Letters.

Wife—I came across a bundle of your old love letters today. Husband—Did you read them over? Wife—Yes. Husband—And what was the effect of that perusal? Wife—I wondered which was the bigger fool—you for writing them or I for marrying you after receiving them.

A Hint.

"Yes," said the young student thoughtfully, "when I get interested in a subject I never stop until I have embraced it thoroughly."

"That's nice," was the hesitating reply. "Do—do you think I'm an interesting subject?"

Wisdom of Solomon.

The reason Solomon is called the wisest man is because he never tried to tell each of his wives that she was the only woman he ever loved.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Both Busy.

"The girl who knows she is pretty makes a fool of herself."

"And the girl who doesn't know she is pretty makes a fool of some man."—Houston Post.

The Competitors.

"Is there much competition in your office?" asked Miss Skittles.

"Sure," replied the facetious Miss Skids. "Between the mirror and the clock."—Puck.

POSITIVE PROOF

Should Convince the Greatest Skeptic in Tecumseh

Because it's the evidence of a Tecumseh citizen. Testimony easily investigated. The strongest endorsement of merit, the best proof. Read it.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory. I am in hopes that our kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience. I willingly confirm the statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills."

The above statement must carry conviction to the mind of every reader. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Chaplin had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c. all stores. Our Oldest Religious Magazine.

Oldest of all religious magazines in America is the "Sailors' Magazine," published by the American Seamen's Friend society, New York. Started in 1828, it has appeared without interruption ever since. Its monthly issue has been printed by the same family from father to son for seventy-five or eighty years. For sixty years its cover was unaltered. In this magazine appeared for the first time the world famous hymn, "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me." It was written by E. Hopper, then pastor of the little old Church of the Sea and Land, its edifice still standing, but almost unknown to this generation of New Yorkers. Colonel Roosevelt's first speech, made when he was a boy, is also recorded here. Romances are traceable through its pages—true stories of adventure, heroism and tragedy that make up the life of the sea.—New York Post.

Shoeless Horses.

While experiments are being made to produce a horseshoe suited to modern roads, writes a correspondent, I wonder whether anybody remembers the book written by the Rev. J. G. Wood, the famous naturalist, in which the argument was put forward that horses should not be shod at all. He declared that the hoof could adapt itself to any kind of land surface, that although it would become soft when the horse was out on grass land it hardened when the pasture was stony or pebbly, and that the practice of nailing on shoes and paring away the "frog" or sole of the hoof was a clumsy and useless expedient. He gave as proof photographs of the hoofs of a horse driven shoeless by a doctor who had a city practice.—Manchester Guardian.

At Outs With Webster.

Professor X., one of the old school, always objected to the pronunciation of "wound" as though it were spelled "woond." One day he stopped a student in the middle of a reading with, "How do you pronounce that word, sir?"

"Woond," replied the student.

The professor gave him a sharp look and said, "I have never foond any ground for giving it that soond, sir."—Boston Transcript.

Shaking Hands.

Cheerful Idiot—I was quite excited just now seeing two men shake hands. Johnson—What can there possibly be exciting about the simple ceremony of handshaking? Cheerful Idiot—Oh, each man had his hand doubled up and was shaking it under the other fellow's nose!—London Telegraph.

Unless They Are Heiresses.

"It's hard to lose a beautiful daughter," said the wedding guest sympathetically.

"It's a blame sight harder to lose the homely ones," replied the old man who had several yet to go.—Boston Transcript.

One Thing Left.

Elderly Uncle—Spent your entire patrimony, have you, Archibald? Gone through everything? Scapegrace Nephew—Yes, uncle; everything but the bankruptcy court.

Who's Been There Knows.

She—Take care, Alfred! That isn't the remedy for seasickness. Don't you see the bottle is marked poison? He—That's the one I want.—Health Bulletin.

Once Thought of Dad.

A lady once showed her little girl a beautiful new silk dress which had just arrived from the dressmaker, and by way of improving the occasion, she said: "You know, dear, all this was given up by a poor worm." The little girl looked puzzled for a minute or two and then said: "Do you mean dad, mamma?"

YOUR BLOOD is the canal of life but it becomes a sewer if clogged up. All life consists of building up and tearing down and just in the same manner that the blood carries to the various parts of the body the food that the cells need for building up, so it is compelled to carry away the waste material that's torn down. These waste materials are poisonous and destroy us unless the liver and kidneys are stimulated into refreshed and vigorous life.

The Invention of the Panorama.

The panorama was invented by a Scotchman named Robert Barker, who obtained a license in London in 1787 and erected a rotunda on Leicester square. He was associated with Robert Fulton, the practical inventor of the steamboat, who introduced panoramas into Paris in 1796, but resigned in favor of Thayer perhaps in order to give his attention to the application of steam to boats. Thayer raised a rotunda on the Boulevard Montmartre, whence comes the name of the Passage des Panoramas. Bonaparte caused plans to be drawn up for eight panoramas, in which his conquests were to be shown to the Parisians, whom he always tried to impress with the magnitude of the achievements in order to keep them faithful to his star. But these projects were never realized.

Forgetmenot.

"Ah, yes, there are still true and loyal souls in this sad world," murmured the solemn individual in the tortoiseshell glasses. "I used to know a dear girl—it was ten long years ago—and not a year has passed since that she hasn't written me a birthday letter. Always what she writes is about the same: 'Dear Alfred, I can't ever forget, not if I live to be a hundred, this day of all the days in the year. Let me once again wish you long life and happiness—with all my heart,' etc."

"Very sweet of the girl," said the stout young man with the amazing waistcoat, "very sweet of her indeed."

"Very," replied the solemn individual, "only, you see, she writes that dashed letter to me on a different day every year."—New York Post.

The Stone Houses of Easter Island.

The remarkable stone houses of Easter island are built against a terrace of earth or rock, which in some cases forms the back wall of the dwelling. They are built of small slabs of stratified basaltic rock piled together without cement. No regularity of plan is shown in the construction of a majority of them. The average measurement is as follows: "Height from floor to ceiling, 4 feet 6 inches; thickness of walls, 4 feet to 10 inches; width of rooms, 4 feet 6 inches; length of rooms, 12 feet 9 inches; average size of doorways—height, 20 inches; width, 19 inches.

He Had a Reason.

"I notice you are very cautious in what you say about people."

"Yes."

"Why is this?"

"Well, I ain't prominent enough to claim I was misquoted."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"What do you mean?"

"It drags."—Cleveland Leader.

A Commune Girl

She Passed Through Successive Spiritual Forms.

By F. A. MITCHEL

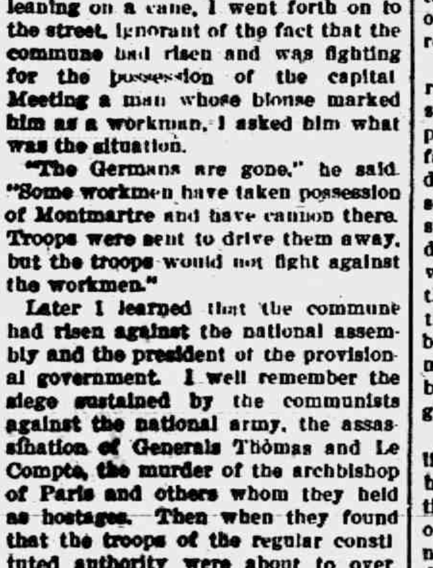
I am now an old man—a very old man. The middle of my life is what the hub is to the wheel. As all parts of the wheel center in the hub, so all parts of my existence point to the time of the war of my country with Prussia, the siege of Paris, the army of Germans marching through the city, the uprising of the commune, its brief and aimless reign, its fall.

In 1870 I was working in my vineyard in the department of Indre. I had no natural taste for war, and since my parents, who were very old, needed me I did not enlist in the army. But when Paris was besieged I was conscripted. Having been sent to the capital, I was put in the defenses on Mount Valerian and was soon wounded by a fragment of a shell. This transferred me to a hospital.

I lay on my cot in a stupor. Presently opening my eyes, I looked up into the face of a woman. It seemed to me that a window of heaven had opened and an angel was looking down upon me. And, oh, the pity there was in that countenance! It seemed that it was not for me alone, but for all who suffered for France. It was the face of youth, that youth in which noble sentiments so easily take a strong hold, youth that does not reason, but feels. In that countenance I seemed to see an impersonation of the spirit of altruism.

When she withdrew I followed her with my eyes. She went from cot to cot, leaving in her wake what she had left with me. Her figure was lithe; her step was quick. She seemed to have much to do. The bountiful sympathy there was in her was for all, and to distribute it she must be always moving.

I lay on my cot for weeks listening to a sullen booming of distant guns.



THE FIGURE OF A WOMAN APPEARED ON ITS CREST.

I wished that I might be discharged from the hospital—not that I might take my place again behind the defenses, but that I might get another view of that devoted face. And, when I had seen it once, surely I would want never to cease to see it.

I did not recover till the Prussians had marched away. Then one day, leaning on a cane, I went forth on to the street, ignorant of the fact that the commune had risen and was fighting for the possession of the capital. Meeting a man whose blouse marked him as a workman, I asked him what was the situation.

"The Germans are gone," he said. "Some workmen have taken possession of Montmartre and have cannon there. Troops were sent to drive them away, but the troops would not fight against the workmen."

Later I learned that the commune had risen against the national assembly and the president of the provisional government. I well remember the siege sustained by the communists against the national army, the assassination of Generals Thomas and Le Compte, the murder of the archbishop of Paris and others whom they held as hostages. Then when they found that the troops of the regular constituted authority were about to overpower them they attempted to destroy Paris, since they could not hold it.

While all this was going on I went about looking for her who had passed through the hospital leaving hope, courage, all that was good and virtuous and strong, in her trail. I did not see her. Then came a horrible thought. Had she been sacrificed to that spirit of vandalism which hovered over Paris at the hands of the commune? Alas, it was impossible that such purity could live amid such barbarity. She must have perished protesting against the enemies about her.

Hearing that a mob had gathered in the Place Vendome, I went there, moved by a desire to see what new iconoclasm would be perpetrated. Pushing my way through the crowd, I entered a building, determined to reach a window above from which I could see what was going on. I succeeded, and the whole of the open square, filled with a howling multitude, was spread before me. Presently an opening was made, and a knot of men, preceded by a woman who was egging them on, approached the column in the center of the square. She, a lithe, delicate figure, turned her face toward me.

Horror of horrors! She was the girl who had bent over me in the hospital.

A rope was produced and fixed around the column. I saw an excited crowd pulling on the rope, and among the number was the girl of whom I had been dreaming.

And yet my reverence for her was not changed to antagonism. Rather, I felt for her the sympathy she had shown for me. I saw in her a noble soul, but one perverted. That great sympathy which was a part of her nature for the world's unfortunate, the poor, those who toil, yet never reach affluence, had been turned awry. A power for good, it had become a power for evil.

And were not these wretches, inflamed by hate, by despair, by a failure to reach that ignis fatuus they had been following, to destroy what they could not turn to their comfort, also to be pitied?

The next time I saw this girl of the commune it was night. I was standing before a burning building. A red flame shot out, throwing a bloodlike glare over a sea of faces. Turning my head, I saw a slender feminine figure standing on a box addressing those immediately about her. She was the girl I had seen in the hospital and at the pulling down of the Vendome column. I could not hear her words, but on her face was the expression of one working in a holy cause. And yet there was now more of the militant than of the angel. Under the strain the wild beast that lurks in our natures was coming to the front.

Meanwhile I had become strong enough to do my part in re-establishing order. I took my place among the regular troops who were fighting their way through the streets of the capital. One day we were led up to a barricade behind which the communists were evidently bent on making a desperate stand. In the narrow street was not room for us to deploy, though we scattered as much as possible, and we were at a great disadvantage, presenting a compact target for those who fought behind heaped cobblestones. When we came within range we received a storm of bullets which laid many of us on the street.

But we pressed on and were about to proceed to carry the barricade by storm when the figure of a woman appeared on its crest, a sword in one hand, a pistol in the other. She was half turned from us, urging those beneath her on the other side to come up and meet our expected attack. Then she turned and glared at us.

The figure was that of the girl of the hospital, the [illegible] the girl of the commune. She was the impersonation of hate. Yet she was a woman, and none of our men would fire on her. My reverence for her was gone, but in its place had come a profound regret. I seemed to see an angel from heaven turned into a demon from hell.

Despite her efforts—and for a time they were successful in holding her men to the defense of the barricade—we captured it, and she was among the prisoners. There was none of that submissive spirit apparent in her pertaining to the Christian martyr; there were rebellion, hate, the fierceness of a tigress who had been defending her cubs and seen them slaughtered. She was sent under guard to prison, and I, one of her conquerors, was sent to take her there.

Short work was made of the communists once they were in the power of the legitimate government. Those who were captured with arms or whose hands indicated that they had been working on the barricades were lined up against a wall and shot down without mercy. I was in the firing squad that ended the career of the girl of the commune. She would not keep her face to the wall, but turned toward us.

At the last the spirit of evil that had grown up within her during the struggle passed and was replaced by an expression of one who was about to die in a noble work. She was again the angel of peace and good will. She had become at the last the martyr.

When we marched away from that scene, destined to remain stamped in my mind during my life, the bullet that I was ordered to send to the girl of the commune was still in the barrel of my gun.

When peace came again to Paris I returned to my home, where I have since lived in quiet. But the latter part of my worldly existence has been far different from the first. In my day dreams and in my night dreams those scenes of the struggle of a social substratum come back to me, and I wonder whether I was on the right or the wrong side. That struggle was but the recurrence of others of its kind that had preceded it. Is the world becoming more sympathetic with such movements, or is the social substratum becoming more powerful through organization?

But these questions are with me of little import compared with that one human soul who was moved to action by a divine sympathy, that took on during the contest the grim ugliness of conflict, and who in the face of death returned to its original divine instincts.

SOUND BUSINESS MAXIMS.

Use Your Ability and Take No Stock In the Law of Chance.

Most men who have amounted to anything started with nothing but ability and determination, a combination which recognizes no man made limitations.

Any kind of work is better than idleness, which is directly responsible for most of the unhappiness in this world.

Idleness is a dangerous thing. It may grow into a habit that might stick to you after you get back in harness, and the man who loafs on his job is only fooling himself.

Eternal, intelligent effort is the price of commercial growth, and where there is no progression there is bound to be retrogression. Business is something like aeroplaning—to stop is to drop, and to drop is generally to bust.

If I had an enemy and wanted to get even with him I could wish him nothing worse than to land in a soft job and get the loafing habit. It would only be a question of time before he or the job petered out, and the longer he held on the worst off he'd be in the end, for there is a law of compensation which somehow or other makes us work in old age for the time we waste in youth or suffer if we can't make good.

Pin your faith to this law of compensation, but don't take any stock in the law of chance; there's no such thing. Waiting for something to turn up in the belief that things are bound to come your way eventually is throwing dice with fate. Many a good dog never got a decent bone until his teeth were gone.—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

PETRAS ON STAND

Accused Nan Talks on Cemetery Murder Case.

LAST SAW THERESA ON CAR

Defendant Tells Story of All His Movements on Night of Hollander Murder—Clothes Shown to Demonstrate They Were Not Spotted—Victim Was "Nice Girl."

GENEVA, ILL. — Before an audience that strained to get each word and that watched every expression of his face, Anthony Petras, charged with the murder of Theresa Hollander, testified in the Kane county court house at Geneva.

Attorney Harvey Gunsul, his attorney, asked about the night of the murder.

"Did you see Theresa that night?" he asked.

"I did. I walked with her from her house downtown a little way. I met her in front of her house. 'Hello,' she said.

"I said 'Hello.' We talked then about the weather and laughed. Then she took a car and she hollered to me as she got on: 'Well, how is married life by this time?'

"'Fine,' I hollered back."

"Then I went on to night school." Petras continued, describing minutely the route he took.

Rescued a Lost Cat.

"On the way I met a little cat that was lost and I brought it home. Then I met Anton Bozkns.

"What did you say to Bozkns?" asked Attorney Gunsul.

"I said 'Hello!' and he asked me if I had a knife. And I gave him my knife to sharpen his pencil."

"Was this the knife?" Attorney Gunsul asked, pointing to one exhibit.

"Yes," said Petras.

The knife he identified was not the one found beside Theresa's body in the St. Nicholas graveyard.

Petras then recited what he had for a lesson at school. He told in speaking to his friends of telling one of them, Fishbach, that he was not going downtown.

"I was broke," testified Petras. "I had 10 cents in my pocket."

Petras explained why he had waited for a New York street car.

Met Theresa on the Car.

"I knew what time it would come, so I waited," he said. "Then Theresa Hollander got on the car. She sat down next to me. When she got up to get off the car she looked to me. She nodded her head. Then she smiled. I smiled back at her. 'Good night, Tony,' she said. 'Good night, Tressie,' I said. And then she got off the car at Ohio street.

"At the next street, Indiana avenue, I got off, too. But that was the last I see of Tressie, when she smile at me in the car and I smile at her. I never see Tressie again until—until they bring her back dead from the cemetery."

Petras then described the scene with Hickman, and told of the incidents testified to by the colored man.

Then Went Straight Home.

"I stepped on his leg when I got off," said Tony, "and I begged his pardon. Then I went straight home. It was 9:50 when I got home.

"I knocked on the door of the bedroom and hollered 'Hello, Hon.' to my wife, and she let me in."

Attorney Gunsul then showed Tony some garments; one, heavy overcoat with a fur collar.

"I wore that overcoat on that night," said Tony.

Mr. Gunsul held the coat up so the jurors could see it was unspotted, Petras next identified the blue trousers he had worn on the night of the murder, and other clothing.

Did Not Kill Her, He Says.

"Did you meet Theresa Hollander in St. Nicholas cemetery?" asked the attorney.

"Did you hit Theresa Hollander in the head with a club?" asked Attorney Gunsul.

"No, sir," cried Tony.

"Did you kill Theresa Hollander?" asked Attorney Gunsul.

Petras then was questioned by his attorney concerning his former relations with Theresa.

"She was a mighty nice girl," he said. "I liked her, yes, sir, I loved her until I met Meta, and then I liked Meta better and married her. No, sir (Tony shook his head vigorously), I never said I would shoot anybody for keeping company with Theresa."

BLUE SKY LAW HELD INVALID

Iowa Act Found Unconstitutional by Federal Court.

DES MOINES, IA. — Iowa's so-called blue sky law, providing for the regulation and supervision of investment companies, was held unconstitutional in a per curiam opinion handed down by Walter I. Smith, United States circuit judge, and Smith McPherson and John C. Pollock, United States district judges.

DEAD WOMAN FOUND FASTENED TO DOCK

Mrs. Charles Miller, Jackson, Believed to Be Suicide.

JACKSON, MICH. — With a rope fastened around the waist, the body of Mrs. Charles H. Miller, of this city, was found floating in about three feet of water near a dock at Clark lake.

There was a heavy bruise over the right eye. It is the opinion of the sheriff and coroner that Mrs. Miller took her own life. In her bedroom in the Miller cottage was found a box of rough on rats, part of the contents of which she had swallowed.

Mrs. Miller was violently ill during the night, but it was not known that she had taken poison. It is said that a doctor was not called. The next morning she disappeared and a search revealed her body floating near a dock in the lake in front of the cottage. The body was clothed only in a night dress and a heavy cloak. The rope, with which the body was fastened to the dock, had been used on a launch belonging to the Millers, and had been cut from the boat by the use of a razor. Mrs. Miller was thirty years old, and was well known in Jackson and was prominent socially.

BOMB SHATTERS MILAN HOME

Mrs. Payne's House Dynamited for Second Time.

MILAN, MICH. — The home of Mrs. Lyman Payne, on West Main street here, was shattered by dynamite placed in the west wall.

The wall was nearly destroyed and all the windows were broken on this side. Windows of the residence just west, occupied by William Cole, were broken, but the family was absent at the time. Mrs. Payne was absent also, having been in South Dakota several months visiting a brother. This is a second attempt to blow up the House, as a similar explosion occurred about a year ago.

SENATOR BORAH

WASHINGTON — An attempt to have the Nicaraguan and Colombian treaties considered in open session of the senate was made by Senator Borah of Idaho, a member of the foreign relations committee. A vote on Senator Borah's resolution was postponed.

Senator Borah told the senate he had secured a great deal of interesting information bearing upon these treaties which he was unwilling to have "clamped down" by the rules of a secret session.

NOT VERY FUNNY AFTER ALL

"Joke" May Cost Sight of Muskegon Clubman.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — Terribly injured about the face by an explosion of powder during a Fourth of July celebration, Fred Stuffer, twenty-four years old, will likely lose the sight of both eyes.

Stauffer was leaning over one of several piles of powder on the floor when a companion tossed a lighted firecracker into the heap as a joke.

REBELS AT PEACE

Villa to Have Center Position in Mexico City March.

WILL ALSO ISSUE OWN MONEY

Mediators Fix Up Plan Whereby the Rebel General Will Be Back in Field Within a Week—He Is Not to Be Interfered With in His Further Fighting.

MEXICO CITY — General Huerta received a majority of the votes cast in the presidential election held throughout the territory now held by the federals. The voting was extremely light everywhere. General Blanquet, minister of war, received a majority of the votes for vice president.

In the election for senators from the district of Mexico H. Zamaconay Inclam was first and General Pedro Gonzales second. In the election of deputies Eugenio Paredes was first and Antonio Paredes second. Scattering votes were cast for Gamboa and others for the presidency.

EL PASO, TEX. — Within less than a week Pancho Villa will be back in the field at the head of his rebel army, advancing towards Mexico City, if nothing goes awry with plans now being worked out by the "mediators" at Torreon.

Between the claims and counter claims of the Villa and Carranza supporters the matter sifted down to the fact that there will be peace between Carranza and Villa for the time being at least; that the war against Huerta will be pressed and that Villa will do as he pleases and Carranza will pretend to sanction it all.

In return Villa will continue to maintain his loyalty to the "ssupreme chief." The conference has had the effect of putting Villa closer to the Carranza generals, Obregon and Gonzales, and their commanders and is expected to bring results in the field.

Villa to Have Center Position.

The conference has brought all leaders or their personal representatives together and in future Villa promises to co-operate with these commanders. They promise also to co-operate with him. Villa is to have the center position in the march on Mexico City and when he cannot get coal from his own territory the Carranza element will supply it. He is also to get ammunition when he calls for it, but he will raise his own funds for this purpose. All he asks is permission to import it through Tampico.

Villa to Issue His Own Money.

Villa's paper money is to be retired and the issue of "constitutionalist" money sanctioned by Carranza will replace it, but Villa does not pledge himself not to issue more. As the exigencies of his campaigns arise Villa will issue his money as his armies advance. All that Villa has consented to do is to allow Carranza to retire his paper with Carranza paper.

WILL PROTECT YOUNG GIRLS

Roadhouses Charged With Selling Liquor to Minors.

DETROIT, MICH.—Essex county police, assisted by the license inspectors and Probation Officer Hackney, of Windsor, will commence a crusade to prevent girls under the age of eighteen years from frequenting the roadhouses in the county.

According to one of the officers, there is an old Ontario statute that prohibits girls under age from drinking in hotels. This has, it is said, never been enforced, but frequent complaints by parents have induced the authorities to investigate.

MAYBE it is an old fashioned idea this notion of putting all the value possible into the car itself—and as little as possible into overhead expense—

But it has given the Paige a positively dominant position among cars of medium price—

Ample capital for operating purposes—no bonded indebtedness—no excessive capitalization—no heavy overhead of any kind to be paid for.

Just a full dollar of car value for every dollar of the selling price.

Is it any wonder that the Paige is going to be oversold again this year in spite of increased production?

COUNTY Y. M. C. A. CAMP

The following boys from Tecumseh attended the County Y. M. C. A. camp at Wampler's lake: Robert Moore Jr., Harold Blesing, Ralph Cuthbert, Lester Waring and Arthur Brown.

Rev. Hartzog was a leader of one of the tents and gave the first camp-fire talk taking for his subject his trip to Washington. Perry Satterthwaite was another one of the splendid tent leaders.

Britton was represented by Lawrence Miller and Marsh Drury. In all there were five leaders in the camp at one time. With the cook, Mr. Karl Ashley and an extra leader there were thirty-seven campers. A number of parents and friends visited the camp Paul Blanchard of the University of Michigan, Dr. Perry of Adrian spoke at the camp-fires.

The boys and leaders spent considerable time fishing. Dr. Hartzog took great interest in this sort of sport. Tuesday afternoon a field meet was held under the direction of Supt. Page of Blissfield. The honors won will be announced a little later.

Carrol Hyde known in camp as "Doc" was camp physician and health commissioner. He was also swimming master in the absence of Samuel Porter of Blissfield who was to be in the camp but could not,

As far as possible the group was self governing. The ruling body was known as Parliment. The men in the camp constituted the House of Lords and representative boys elected from the tents made up the House of commons. Parliment could and did set as a court. Arthur Brown of Tecumseh was president of the lower house

Sunday afternoon the boys hiked to Cedar hill and again Wednesday they hiked to Brooklyn a distance of five miles.

The sleeping was good with the exception of the first night. The boys found it hard to go to sleep and some of them were up before the sun the next morning should it have been seen. Some of the weather was a bit disagreeable but the fellows had the time of their life notwithstanding the weather they got into the game with stunts nights. Monday and Tuesday with Rev. Livingstone as star actor. The camp paper "The Wampler's Lake Budget" read at the camp-fire was one of the great features of the day's program. Every fellow had to take his turn in the joke column. Base ball games were played almost every day. A game was played with the Toledo Y. M. C. A. camp which ended with the Lenawee boys on the long end of the score 9–4.

The last issue of the paper has this statement, "The Budget hopes and desires to meet all of you at the next Y. M. C. A. camp which is going to be a success with such good boosters as we can boost of."

NOTICE OF ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING

The Annual Meeting of School District No. 7 of the Township of Tecumseh, for the election of School District Officers and for the transaction of such other business as may lawfully come before it, will be held at the Library on Monday, the 13th day of July, 1914, at 7:30 o'clock p. m.

The Royal Black Hussars Band

THE ROYAL BLACK HUSSARS BAND.

THE Royal Black Hussars Band is a musical organization which has earned for itself fame through its sterling merit and the consistency of its performance. There is scarcely a summer resort in the middle west that has not heard this famous organization at one time or the other during the past six or seven years.

Charles W. Niles, the director, although yet a comparatively young man, has had a varied and extended musical experience. Born in Germany and in a musical family, he learned to read music before he learned to read letters. As a lad he was looked upon as a musical prodigy, and while yet in his teens he enlisted in the United States army as a musician and later for three years was assistant director of the Fifth United States Cavalry Band, then under the directorship of Professor Frederick Gross, one of the most famous of army bandmasters. The repertoire of the Royal Black Hussars Band is varied and comprehensive, embracing everything from oratorios and grand opera to popular songs and ragtime, and the daily program is always made to fit the day and the occasion. The band is handsomely uniformed, numbers eighteen and is one of the big features of the Lincoln Chautauquas.

The Royal Black Hussars Band will appear on the Lincoln Chautauqua program in this city on the fourth day, afternoon and evening. In the afternoon it will play the prelude to Senator William E. Mason's address, and in the evening it will give a full concert.

Avoid Self-Consciousness.

To think about oneself all the while is to turn energy in on oneself continually that might much better go out in unselfish action. The self-conscious person needs to pour out this force of attention and thought, instead of concentrating it on self and wasting it in awkward embarrassment and hurt pride.—Great Thoughts.

35 YEARS AGO

In looking over a file 1879 of just 35 years ago today, July 10, 1914 we find several interesting items. "The New Brick Store." "Woodman spare that tree" was the silent wish of many Tecumseh people, when the old locusts on the Patterson corner went down But the march of improvements is a great leveler. Work is progressing rapidly on the new store upon that site, and before the snow flies another handsome business block will be added to our principal street. The store is being built by Lucius Lilley and Gus Wright. I will be two stories in highth, 90 ft. deep on Railroad st. and 22 ft. front, and will be finished both externally and internally second to no business block in the village. Rumor says that it will be used for a drug store or a banking office." Today July 10, 1914 the store is occupied by McCann & Bowen clothing store, and is a fine appearing building after all these years.

The editor of the Herald (S. C Stacy) now sports a new rig. We don't mean to insinuate that it is paid for, not much. But we were fortunate to find three reckless individuals who were willing to part with their property "on tick." The horse was bought of C. H. Adam, John Halley made the buggy and J. S. Gilman made the harness And we claim that it is the cheapest rig for the money to be found in the corporation

Fred Knight a member of Company C, while at the depot last Friday evening on the return of the company from Clinton was shot in the foot, by a member of the Adrian Co, Some of the boys took occasion to get pretty well set up at the temperance celebration in Clinton and one of them was carelessly slinging a revolver around while the train stopped, and a ball lodged in Fred's foot, The doctors have been unable to extricate the ball and at last accounts Fred was in rather a bad condition.

Last Monday we took a trip through the towns of Franklin and Cambridge. The wheat crop is excellant all over in that section, abundant in quantity and superior in quality. The farmers had very generally expected to begin harvesting on Monday morning, but the rain rather dampened their ardor, They have undoubtedly improved the fine weather of yesterday and today.

There is a considerable scarcity of harvesting hands about here. Last Monday 23 men came in on the noon train to find work, and by three o'clock they were all engaged. Besides these, a good many men residing in the village will work in the harvest this year.

The Origin of Algebra.

If Diophantus of Alexandria, fourth century of the Christian era, was not the inventor of algebra, then it is not known to whom the honor belongs. To Diophantus the honor is generally given. The Arabians claim that the invention belongs to one of their countrymen, Mohammed Ben-Musa, who flourished about the middle of the ninth century Certain it is that the Arabians introduced algebra to Europe by way of Italy through Leonardo, a merchant of Pisa, who had lived among the Arabs of Barbary. Leonardo's treatise was written in 1202.

Some Very Pretty Names.

No Encouragement.

Mrs. Short—Oh, dear, I do wish we were rich! Just think of the good we could do if we only had lots of money! Mr. Short—True, my dear, but we can do a great deal of good in a quiet way now. Mrs. Short—Yes, of course, but no one will ever hear of it.

Didn't Take the Bait.

Miss Andeute (insinuatingly)—I dislike my name; it's horrid. Mr. Fly (absently)—I fear it's too late to change it now.

Chautautauqua Week at Tecumseh August 16 to 21.

Put on in a big tent by the Lincoln Chautauquas and local business and professional men.

A WEEK OF HIGH CLASS ENTERTAINMENT

The people of Tecumseh and country surrounding have a special treat in store for them in the coming to Tecumseh of the Lincoln Chautauqua the week of August 16th to 21st.

It is not necessary to tell you what a Chautauqua is for you all know. Some months ago the Commerce Club took up the proposition of furnishing a summer Chautauqua for Tecumseh and closed a contract with the Lincoln Chautauqua people for the dates mentioned Later a public meeting was called and at this meeting the various committees were appointed to carry on the active work of pushing this Chautauqua and making it a big success.

The Chautauqua tent with superintendent and his assistants should reach Tecumseh the day before the program opens and will probably occupy the park, corner Kilbuck and Ottawa streets.

The tent is as fine a structure of its kind as modern makers can produce; it is water proof and electric lighted; the stage is set, being an improvement not heretofore undertaken by any Chautauqua management. Comfortable seats will be provided.

The program has been planned with great care. It is not a mere show or spectacle only, but the finer fun of following fluent speech of unraveling mental snarls. A week of sweet music, character portrayals, of impersonations, mimicry and suspense, exploding in laughter of cumulating pathos and mental strife, closing in rich full sentiment.

A varied program has been arranged to suit every tasts. Such talent as Malcolm R. Patterson, ex-Gov. of Tennessee; William E. King, formally U. S. Senator from Illinois; Fred S. Jackson, formally Congressman from Kansas, and others will deliver lectures, fine musical talent has been arranged for, a Grand Opera Co, Band and Orchestra music, in fact 24 entertainments in all.

One solid week of high class entertainment is in store for you so make your plans to buy your tickets early Invite your out of town guests to visit you during Chautauqua week, It will be a big event. Get ready for it.

A full program will appear in the column of the paper later also an announcement of the price for tickets,

It will be wise to make your plans early to get your tickets so you will be sure to get good seats. Ticket will be on sale soon. Look for the announcement.

In most every community these summer Chautauquas are so popular that they have been returning year after year and we feel sure that our people will be so delighted with it that they will demand a return date a year from this summer.

The Monday club will hold an extra business meeting at the Club rooms tomorrow (Saturday) at 4 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

Tecumseh Wins Over Clinton

In a Great Ninth Inning Rally Tecumseh Ties the Score, and then Wins it in the Tenth.

SCORE, 7 TO 6.

Not since the days of the South Michigan League has there been such interest shown in local base ball as was displayed Thursday afternoon when a good crowd turned out to see the game between Tecumseh and Clinton

In the first inning it looked if the honors would easily go to Tecumseh as the score stood at the end of the inning 2 to 0. But Clinton got next to Hodges in the fourth and scored four runs, in the sixth they finished the job, driving Hodges from the box, Leonardson then took up the burden. This brought Clinton's total up to six.

After this Blanchard Clinton's slab artist was invincible until the ninth when the crowd hoping to inspire the team began to use their voices, this so upset Blanchard that he wavered and before he pulled himself together three scores crossed the plate and the game was tied. Ed Rogers' triple to the fence was a large factor.

Clinton started out in the tenth as if to get them back, but a neat double play by O Hanna and Exelby prevented a possible score, Tecumseh came back in their half, the first man was out, second one singled and stole second, Ed Rogers' the hero of the ninth produced the hit that ended the game.

Guy Yates the diminutive short stop of the Tecumseh team was by far the leading star of the game, taking care of some very difficult chances. Walter Cotton playing left field for Clinton made several fine running catches

This was the third game played with Clinton. The winning of yesterdays game gave the series to Tecumseh.

Garden Party

Mesdames James McCann and Chas. Williamson, Hostesses.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1914.

In response to invitations extended by Mrs. James McCann and Mrs. Chas. Williamson, over seventy ladies gathered on their beautiful lawn Wednesday afternoon.

The lawn was attractively decorated, a bank of green across the front with a graceful archway at the entrance Wicker chairs and divans were scattered about for the comfort of the guests.

18 tables each with a lovely bouquet and dainty settings were arranged for the ladies. When refreshments were served, several fine selections of classic music on the Victrola added to the pleasure of this hour.

As the twilight shadows fell, the lawn was lighted with electric lights in Japanese lanterns making it a veritable scene from fairyland. Cards furnished the amusement of the evening, 500 being the favorite game.

The garden party was charming in every appointment, and the day was all that could be desired for such an occasion. The out of town guests were Mrs A. Reason of London, Ont., Mrs. Sam McClure of Erie, Pa. and Mrs. J. D. Blocker of Dayton, Ohio.

REPAIRS NEEDED AT OUR LIBRARY

In passing our beautiful public Library, I have noticed the dilapadated appearance of the approach, and to my notion, such a beautiful building should not have been allowed to be in this condition for so long a period. I would call attention to this matter and suggest that those in authority should take steps toward making the necessary repairs to this building.

AFTER THE 4th

A delayed fourth of July celebration was held on the Shull lawn on Tuesday evening. Quite a number of relatives and friends gathered for the occasion, and a fine display of fire works was the leading attractions. Several balloons sailed onward and away while one large one went up in smoke.

S Waring was very pretlly decorated with flags and bunting on Tuesday evening when a company of relatives and friends met for a picnic supper and entertainment. Among these who were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Jones and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Rogers, and Mr. and Mrs. Linger and children. A bountiful picnic supper was served after which a fine display of fireworks made things lively for a while.

FIRE

About 12:30 Thursday the fire alarm was sounded and in a few moments the fire department were on their way to the scene of action. It proved to be one of the old car shops in the south east part of town, and was soon in ashes. The other buildings were saved by the prompt action of the firemen. The origin of the fire is unknown but it is thought that tramps might have made that a stopping place.

Had Forty Homes.

Vollon, the painter, was a unique personage even among the odd characters of Paris. While he was essentially a bohemian, there were times when even his patience was taxed to the utmost, and to obviate the necessity of meeting unwelcome people he conceived the idea of multiplying his lodging places. At the time of his death he owned no less than forty homes, all in apartment houses, situated in all the out of the way corners of Paris, plainly furnished and with just enough accommodation for himself. He changed from one to the other all the time in order to escape importunate acquaintances and to take refuge from his friends. It was in order to throw them all off the scent that he engaged rooms all over the city. He finally died in the Rue de Dunkerque, where he had as many as three different apartments, all within a stone's throw of one another.

The Test of Character.

But responsibility is the great character developer, and very few of us really know what we can do until we are put to the test. The market is long on men who can take orders, but short on those who can intelligently issue them. Responsibility requires a certain amount of initiative—the willingness to act when occasion demands and the courage to fail under honest effort and take the consequences. Of course you may fail, but you can't tell whether you will succeed unless you try, and having tried to the utmost of your ability and failed is better than never to have tried at all—better because in every loss there is the compensation of experience, while mere inaction means mental and physical stagnation, the dam and sire of annihilation.—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Very Red Tape.

A burglar entering a house by a ladder in a small Prussian town fell and broke his leg when making off with his booty. An inquiry into the accident revealed that, contrary to the bylaws of the town, the house owner's ladder was not provided with strong iron spikes at its base. The house owner was therefore ordered to pay all the hospital costs and further to give the burglar a substantial sum.—London Standard.

Taking on Trust.

It is far better that we trust and be deceived occasionally than not to trust at all. Not only must we trust one another, but there are many things in life that we must take on trust—things that we do not understand and are mysteries to us. Even love is a mystery.—W. J. Bryan.

POSITIVE PROOF

Should Convince the Greatest Skeptic in Tecumseh

Because it's the evidence of a Tecumseh citizen. Testimony easily investigated. The strongest endorsement of merit, the best proof. Read it:

George D Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pill's at Wright & Son,s Drug store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory. I am in hopes that our kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience. I willingly confirm the statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills."

The above statement must carry conviction to the mind of every reader. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Chaplin had the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. TROGLODYTES OF TRIPOLI.

They Live Underground, Some of Them Never Seeing Daylight.

In the region of Gharian, in the hinterland of Tripoli, there is an invisible town with 7,000 inhabitants. This city of the Troglodytes was visited by Miss Ethel Braun and is described by her in her book, "The New Tripoli."

This city is excavated out of rock and earth. Its inhabitants live underground, some of them never coming to the surface. "The richer ones," writes Miss Braun, "are born in these dim dwellings, never leaving them until they are carried out to be buried." The rich families have, however, one reception room over the ground at a height of six or seven feet.

Describing the Troglodyte prison, Miss Braun tells of an Italian lady's experience while visiting the female prisoners.

"They had never seen a European woman before and asked her to take off her hat. No sooner had she done so that in a twinkling all her hairpins were pulled out, to be kept as souvenirs by the women, who looked upon them as most precious mementos."

The friendly Troglodytes made Arab tea for Miss Braun, "shai, as it is called, made with powdered tea and much, very much, sugar, so that it tastes just like a sirup," and they were very excited at the event of her visit.

Caring For the Piano.

One of those popular fellows who can sit down at a piano and play accompaniments to songs, even when the "music" is not forthcoming, happened to be in a little village recently when a concert was almost stuck through the pianist disappointing at the last minute. Our friend, says the Glasgow News, came to the rescue and got the company out of its difficulty, but inwardly he applied to the instrument adjectives which would shock even George Bernard Shaw. After the performance the caretaker (a "lady") was covering up for the night, and the player mentioned to her that the piano was very much in need of attention, but she scouted the idea. "Why," said she, "I went over it myself this morning and scrubbed every part of it, keys and all."

Her Candlestine Courtship.

The servant was discussing her latest love affair with a mistress, who was humane enough to be interested.

"Well," said the mistress, "since you've been going out with him for months, I think it's quite time he took you to see his parents."

"I've been telling him so, ma'am. Only last Sunday I said to him, 'Herbert, I'm not going to be courted in this candlestine way any longer.'"

It was some time, says the Manchester Guardian, before the mistress' puzzled brain understood that "candlestine" and "clandestine" were synonymous.

Love of the Forest.

The only way to love the forest is to stay in it until you have learned its pathless travel, growth and inhabitants as you know the fields. You must begin at the gate and find your way slowly, else you will not hear the great secret and see the compelling vision. There are trees you never before have seen, flowers and vines the botanists fail to mention and such music as your ears cannot hear elsewhere.—Gene Stratton Porter.

Miss Dunne was injured in the accident, but aided in the attempt at rescue. Harry Armstrong and Bert Dolan were so badly injured that they were rushed to Chicago on the Northwestern road from Lake Geneva and were taken to a hospital.

NEW YORK — A dynamite explosion at 1626 Lexington avenue, between One Hundred and Second and One Hundred and Third streets, killed four persons, hurt seven, smashed to flinders half of a six double story apartment house, and led to a police inquisition among the local anarchists and members of the I. W. W., one of whom, Arthur Caron, died in the explosion and may have caused it. The apartment house destroyed was the headquarters of the I. W. W. agitators.

The police theory tonight was that Caron had on the top floor of the apartment house half a box full of dynamite that he was making, or intended to make, into bombs for use against such men as John D. Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller Jr.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN

Famous British Statesman Who Is Called by Death.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN DEAD

Advocate of Free Trade and Foe of Home Rule Expires.

LONDON, ENG.—Joseph Chamberlain died here. His death removes one of the most striking figures from British politics in the last generation. It came as an entire surprise, as the condition of his health was not known publicly to be any worse than at any time in the last two or three years.

While his greatest claim to fame was his determination and brilliant advocacy for years of a protective policy for Great Britain, the citadel of free trade, he will also be remembered as the bitterest and most forceful opponent of Gladstone in that statesman's effort for home rule for Ireland; as one of the founders of the liberal-unionist party and as the minister whose policy in South Africa involved his country in the greatest war it had experienced since the Crimean conflict, but blotted out the two Boer republics and made South Africa "all red."

CHICAGO — Because the Baltimore and Ohio railroad made James B. Wilson, formerly a conductor, work overtime, a jury in Judge Heard's court awarded Wilson $45,000, one of the largest awards ever made in Cook county in a personal injury suit.

Wilson was injured at Peninsula, Pa., while switching a freight car. His arm was crushed and his spine broken. He appeared in court in a wheel chair and testified that he had been obliged to work three days, Aug 19, 20 and 21, with only nine hours' rest. He insisted that while exhausted he fell between a freight car and an engine.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

All day Saturday our streets were quiet, and the stores were doing just an average busines, for every farmer was busy with haying and harvesting for the day was an ideal one for the work. In town the people were waiting for evening hoping there might be a cooler breeze before starting out for their supplies for Sunday.

Were you in the buisness part of town Saturday night, and did you count the people? From far and near they came by auto, by buggies any way to get to town and the street was a mass of humanity. On every side street horses were tied, autos were wedged in and one was led to wonder where all came from. The stores up and down were packed up to their capacity and proprietors and clerks alike were kept busy unt ila late hour, dispensing their wares to the busy throng. And then, the hush of midnight.

VAGRANTS

Friday afternoon a vagrant couple, an old woman past 80 years of age, and a man between 50 and 60 were hanging around the L. S. depot claiming to come from Erie bound for no where in particular. They finally disappeared and when next seen were lying on the ground in the grove at St. Peters church on Saturday. Dept. Smith and Supervisor Schreder interviewed them and they then claimed they came from a town in Ohio. They were given transportation on an outgoing train on the D. T. & I. that evening. They were genuine dope fiends and had reached that point in life when they were oblivious to filth and dirt. A little black dog followed them in their wanderings. An old suit case that they carried showed that they had started on a trip but it was not possible to find out what they were doing or where they were going.

It was a pitiful sight to see an old frail woman so dead to all sense of decency and shame, wandering around the country so filthy that even to look upon her made one shudder.

The Test of Love.

Of course sincerity and purity of affection has not one but many tests. If you love you must know where the other doubts and persist where the world deprecates. Love is because it is. For this reason one stands with it against the world and does not wield the weapons of the world against it. Surely its assurance in the face of the storm is one of its sweetest tests.

Man's Contrariness.

In winter a man is always ready for spring, and in summer he is always ready for winter. A man is twice as contrary as a mule.—Atchison Globe

AN OLD TIME CHOIR

Sunday morning at the M. E. church the music was rendered by an old time choir, many of whom sang there over thirty years ago and all members of Mrs. Griswolds old class. Among those who sang were Mrs. Alva Waring, Mrs. Chas. Smith, Mrs. J. J. Neeley of Detroit, Mrs. Cynthia Hoag, Mrs. Myron Conklin, Mrs. Geo. Bangs, Mrs. B. Hurry, Mrs. Will Waldron, Mrs. L. Howe, and Mrs. Arthur Harding. Mrs. Waldron and Mrs. Howe sang a duet in the opening hym the rest joining in the chorus. During the collection Mesdames Bangs, Neeley, Waring, and Smith made up a quartette and were joined by the others in chorus. The singing was enjoyed by everyone present and brought back a host of memories. The voices have none of them lost their old time sweetness and power of expression.

DETROIT RACES.

When the trotters and pacers reach the fast Detroit track where the annual blue ribbon meeting is to be held July 27 to 31, it is expected that they will be in better shape to go fast and carry their speed than ever in the past. The horses which are racing on the half mile tracks have been going faster than in other years at the same period and the big stables at the popular traing camps are indulging in some merry miles.

There are a greater number of speedy trotters in the M. & M. this year and the same applies to the pacers in the C. of C. stake, this pair being the ruling classics of the light harness turf and the feature of the annual speed carnival given by the Detroit Driving Club. On top of this Secretary Conner reports that very few horses have been withdrawn from the five stakes to be raced at the Blue Ribbon meeting, which means that the fields will be of unusual size.

The Detroit track will be in shape for record breaking this year. The turns have been rebuilt, the sand being carted away and clay substituted. Teams with harrows, floats and sprinkling wagons work day and night on the big oval, so that the last week in July will find it the best piece of dirt out of doors.

Horses which have been training at Detroit this year have been doing some fast miles, so that when race week comes, if the weather is of the right sort, there is every reason to expect the speed averages of the Blue Ribbon to be lowered in the hard fought contests bound to occur in the rich stakes and purses which make up the program of twenty races for the five afternoons.

This contract was let purely on the ability of Uncle Sam's Macaroni Co. being able to deliver quality and service. English Laws on Finding.

Judge Atherley Jones stopped a case against a man and his son charged with "stealing by finding" a rug which the younger defendant picked up after it had blown off a motorcar. The judge, in directing the jury to return a verdict of not guilty, said that the law with regard to finding property, although there was a popular superstition that finding was keeping, was very clear. If a person found an article it was his duty to preserve it, and, if he had any reason to suppose that it belonged to a certain person, it became his duty to go to that person to make inquiries in order to ascertain. But otherwise there was no actual duty upon him to take it to a police station. It was probably a prudent course, but the police had no greater right to the article than the person who found it.—London Times.

Pretty Bad.

The barber was very busy and the shop was full of men waiting for him to practice his tonsorial art upon their heads and faces.

One man, Mr. Blank, became tired of waiting for his turn to come and started to leave. Although his beard had come out pretty heavy, he thought no one could notice it and that he could come back the next morning when Hughes, the barber, was not so busy. The barber, not wishing a customer to go away unattended to, accosted him by saying, "You're not leavin' us, is you, Mr. Blank?"

"Why, I don't need a shave, do I, Hughes?"

Hughes thereupon looked his customer over critically and answered him assuredly: "No, youse don't need a shave; all youse need is a hair cut on de face."—National Monthly.

"Going to England."

The Isle of Wight inhabitants are not alone in speaking of "going to England" when they leave their own fragment of the kingdom. A patriotic Cornishman also "goes to England" when he crosses the Tamar. Similarly inhabitants of the Balkan peninsula talk of "going to Europe" when they leave their own corner of the continent—in curious contrast with the people of our own island. We regard ourselves as both of and in "Europe," and accordingly it is only "the continent" that we visit. The record in the splendid isolation line is probably held by that minister of the Cumbraes, in the Clyde, who prayed for a blessing upon "the inhabitants of Great and Little Cumbrae and the adjacent islands of Great Britain and Ireland."—London Mirror.

POSITIVE PROOF

Should Convince the Greatest Skeptic in Tecumseh

Because it is the evidence of a Tecumseh citizen. Testimony easily investigated. The strongest endorsement of merit, the best proof. Read it:

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says "My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory. I am in hopes that our kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience. I willingly confirm the statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills."

The above statement must carry conviction to the mind of every reader. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Chaplin had the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Astronomically Speaking.

Before he became a newspaper man James S. Black was a collector in Flagstaff for awhile. He was given a bill against Director Lowell of the observatory and tramped up the long hill from the town to see the astronomer one hot June morning when the mountain sun blazed its hottest.

Arrived at the top, Black inquired of an attendant if Lowell was there. After the manner of collectors he followed up a negative answer with inquiries as to his probable return.

"Will he be back this afternoon?"

"No."

"Will he be back tomorrow?"

"No."

"Will he be back next day?"

The attendant couldn't say.

"Well," said Black, getting desperate, "do you know when he will be back?"

"Oh, he'll be back for the transit of Venus," said the attendant.

"That finished it," said Black in telling the story. "Not being an astronomer, I gave up that bill."—Popular Magazine.

Nose Tip Vaccination.

The young Japanese diplomat pointed to his father, the marquis.

"That's father," he said, "the old fellow with the saucer shaped scar on the tip of his nose. All Japs of the older generation have that scar."

"Yes," said the debutante.

"Yes; it's a vaccination mark. In the old days, when compulsory vaccination first began, we Japs vaccinated everybody on the tip of the nose. Why? Well, because it was a good place, where there's no movement to rub off the scab, and also because the vaccination scar on the nose was easily identified by the medical officers of the government. A man didn't have to take off half his clothes in order to prove that he'd been vaccinated.

"Yes; the nose tip vaccination had its good points, but before the modern hankering after beauty it had to go."—New York Tribune.

Campbell and His Poem.

At a dinner where Thomas Campbell and Lord Nugent were present the conversation drifted from the use of Latin words in English to monosyllabic verse. Some one expressed a doubt whether two consecutive lines composed of words of one syllable could be found in our language. Lord Nugent at once quoted:

"By that dread name we wave the sword on high
And swear with her to live, with her to die."

Campbell said he did not believe in the lines and asked where they came from. Lord Nugent said, "From your own 'Pleasure of Hope.'" "How do you know that?" asked the poet. "I know it all by heart," replied Nugent. "I'll bet you a guinea you can't repeat it," said Campbell. The bet was taken and Nugent started declaiming. The poet soon got tired and said: "I see you know the poem. Don't go any further." The other insisted upon repeating the whole poem or claiming double stakes, and Campbell paid the extra guinea in order to be spared the recital of the poem which had made him famous—which he had forgotten.

The World a Looking Glass.

Anatole France, in one of those delightful monologues of his which, when he receives his friends and all who care to visit him at the Villa Said, go by the name of "conversation," though nobody ever talks but M. France, told us one day about his mother.

"She used to sacrifice my father to me a little," he said. "I always came first. She taught me all day long, and her lessons have been my guide ever since. I remember one day she showed me some little faces over a doorway. 'You see they are laughing,' she said. A few days afterward, when we passed them again, she told me to look. 'They are not laughing today,' she said. 'They cannot know you've been naughty, you think, and yet you can see they're not pleased with you. It will always be like this. Whenever you do wrong everything will look reproachful. The leaves, the sun, the moon, will look unhappy when you have misbehaved. The world is a looking glass, my boy.'"—John N. Raphael in London Globe.

The Last Speaker of Cornish.

In the little village of St. Paul, near Penzance, there is a monument erected to the memory of Doll, or Dolly, Pentreath, who attained the age of 102 and was the last woman who spoke the Cornish tongue. This is the inscription: "Here lieth interred Dorothy Pentreath, who died in 1777, said to have been the last person who conversed in the ancient Cornish, the peculiar language of this country from the earliest times till it expired in the eighteenth century in this parish of St. Paul. This stone is erected by the Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte, in union with the Rev. John Garnett, vicar of St. Paul, June, 1860. 'Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee' (Exodus xx. 12)."—London News.

Keep Your Temper.

Which of all the domestic virtues is most essential to a happy married life? The ability to keep one's temper, beyond all question.

There is nothing which lends more to misery, not only for its possessor, but also for those about him, than an ungovernable and unreasonable temper. No one is worse to live with than an ill tempered man, except perhaps an ill tempered woman.

Bad tempered people completely spoil the lives of those who associate with them. The feeling of strain is ever present. One never knows just when the storm will break, although apparently the weather, metaphorically, is "set fair." Life in these circumstances is a burden almost beyond bearing.

Ironical.

"Don't knock on the glass with your hand—you might hurt it. Use a sledge hammer." That's the ironic notice to be read on the window of a Bronx vermin exterminator's shop. Inside the window are three or four ferrets, trained to hunt rats. Before the shop owner put the sign on the window tapping on the glass to arouse the ferrets was one of the favorite sports of the neighborhood.—New York Tribune.

Not a Regular.

The tall blond has Mrs. Malaprop backed off the map when it comes to reckless handling of the queen's English.

"My cousin, Ignatz, has joined the navy," she confided to her friend.

"Is he a regular sailor?" asked the short brunette.

"Not yet," replied the tall blond. "He is just a sub marine, I guess."—Youngstown Telegram.

Inexhaustible Rome.

"Rome is wonderful," said a man familiar with the historic city. "Rome is inexhaustible. There is a story that describes Rome well.

"The pope was giving audience. He said to a lady in black:

"'How long have you been in Rome?'

"'Three weeks,' the lady answered.

"'Ah,' said the pope, 'then you have seen Rome.'

"And he turned to an American merchant and asked:

"'And you, sir, how long have you been in Rome?'

"'Three months,' the American replied.

"'You, then, have begun to see Rome,' said the pope. And he next accosted an elegant woman with gray hair.

"'How long, madam,' he asked, 'have you been here?'

"'Three years,' the woman answered

"The pope smiled faintly.

"'You,' he said, 'have not yet begun to see Rome.'"—New York Herald.

Our True Moles.

In this country there are five recognized groups of true moles, two of which are confined to the Pacific coast and the other three are distributed over the section east of the one hundredth meridian extending from Canada to the gulf of Mexico. In the latter districts and in the greater part of Pennsylvania, New York and New England the common mole occurs with the star nosed mole and Brewer's mole. The mole is so seldom seen even by those who are familiar with its work that it is often confused with other small creatures, particularly the shrew, the mole or meadow mouse and the pocket gopher. However, it can be readily distinguished by its stout, short front limbs ending in broad, rounded hands with palms turned outward. It has a rather elongated body, close, plushlike fur, a pointed snout and a short tail. Neither eyes nor ears are in evidence. It is a creature of strictly subterranean habits.

Wisdom of Father.

Brown, who lived in the suburbs, returned home late one evening with a package which he deposited on the dining room table. His wife, naturally curious, lost no time in starting to investigate.

"What have you been buying, Jimmy?" she asked, taking up the package and untying the string.

"A cornet," answered Jimmy. "I have been thinking for some time"—

"A cornet?" was the wondering interjection of the wife. "I thought you knew better than to buy a cornet! You know very well that the man next door worries you almost to death with his."

"Yes, I know," was the smiling response. "That is the one I bought."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Origin of Life.

The scientific world is not in possession of even one fact as to the origin of life nor of the origin of anything whatever. All animals now start from very minute bodies called cells. Each kind of animal has its own fixed kind of cell. One kind of cell never changes into another. But the origin of the cell for each kind of animal is totally unknown.—New York American.

AMORIA

A Medicine to Produce Love

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Wonderful discoveries these, doctor, that scientists are making in serums for arresting disease," said David Waterman to his friend Dr. Pulsifer.

"Very," was the laconic reply.

"There is one remedy, however, the scientists have paid little attention to."

"What's that?"

"The imagination."

"I have used it."

"The power of the imagination is illustrated daily in a thousand different ways. A smoker with his eyes shut cannot tell whether or not the weed he smokes is lighted. I have myself drunk a glass of ale, thinking it to be lager beer, and supposed it to be beer soured."

"Singular, isn't it?"

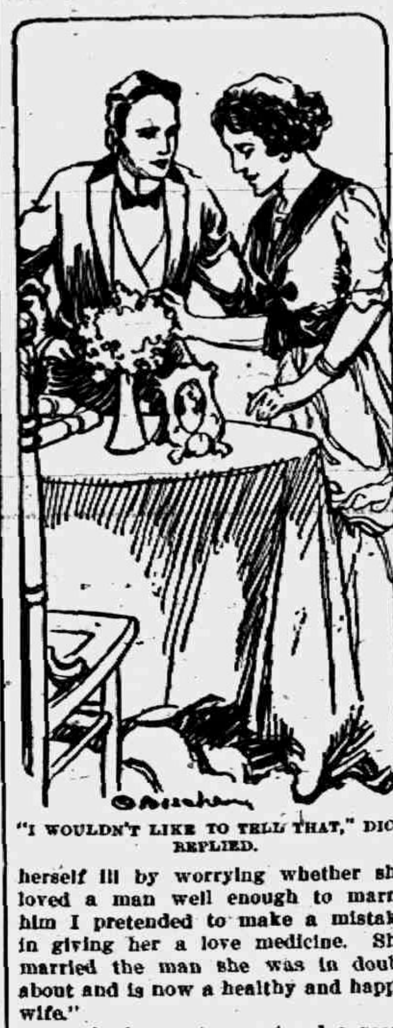
"Very."

"I wonder if that is not the way love is produced."

"Certainly. Love is a product of the imagination."

"Why, then, can't you produce it by playing upon the imagination?"

"I can and have done it. In the case of one of my patients who made herself ill by worrying whether she loved a man well enough to marry him I pretended to make a mistake in giving her a love medicine. She married the man she was in doubt about and is now a healthy and happy wife."



"I WOULDN'T LIKE TO TELL THAT," DICK REPLIED.

A girl of seventeen entered a room adjoining the one in which the two men were chatting just in time to hear this last statement of Dr. Pulsifer, catching only the words "giving her a love medicine" and what followed.

A love medicine! She had never heard of such a thing. Could it be possible that doctors could give a medicine to produce love? She had never been in love, but was very curious to know how one in love would feel. She stood very still, hoping to hear more on this interesting topic, but Dr. Pulsifer had caught a glimpse of her and was silent.

This young lady was Dolly Waterman, the daughter of one of the men who had been conversing. A few days later Dick Otis, a young fellow of nineteen, who had formerly been her playmate and was now her friend, came to see her, and another dialogue consequent on the first took place.

"Dick," said Dolly, "do you know that there is a medicine to produce love?"

"No, I don't," replied Dick, opening his eyes very wide.

"There is."

"Who told you that rubbish?"

"It can't be rubbish, for I heard Dr. Pulsifer telling it to father."

"What did he say?"

"Why, he said he gave a love medicine to a girl who was one of his patients."

"Dr. Pulsifer said that?"

"Yes, he did. And he said, too, that she married the man it was to make her in love with and is now a happy wife."

Now, Dick Otis was by no means as unsophisticated as Dolly. He at once saw that there might be an opportunity. Love was not the subject of interest to him it was to her, for most young men of his age are given rather to love of self than love for any one else. He at once resolved to pretend to tumble to the idea.

"If Dr. Pulsifer hadn't said that I shouldn't have believed it."

"Fact," said Dolly.

"Did he say how long it required for the stuff to take effect?"

"I didn't hear him say that."

"I'd like to get some of his medicine."

"What for?"

"Well, I know a girl who I think is sweet on me. She's a good match, but somehow I can't get up any emotion for her. Perhaps if I were to take a bottle of Dr. Pulsifer's medicine it would start me."

"I know who you mean. You'd have to take a dozen bottles to get up the slightest fancy for a girl like that."

"I believe I'll go to the doctor and ask him for the prescription."

"Do."

"Why? Do you want to take it?"

"No; I want to see how it affects you."

"Humph!"

Not long after this Dick came to see Dolly with a bottle, very prettily done up, with the word "Amoria" written on the label. He told Dolly that he had got it from Dr. Pulsifer—in which statement he broke the eighth commandment—and that he was going to take some of it. Wouldn't she like to take some too? Dolly asked him whom it would make him in love with, whereupon he assured her that she was mistaken in that part of the matter. A love medicine couldn't make a man love any particular girl. That was ridiculous. Dolly admitted that it was hard to believe. Dick pulled the stopper out of the bottle and held the liquid under her nose.

"Smells like roses," she said.

"That's one of the chief ingredients," Dick informed her.

"What's the dose?" she asked.

"Teaspoonful just before going to bed."

"Why then, I wonder?"

"Don't know. Maybe you'll dream of the one you are to fall in love with—like putting wedding cake under your pillow."

"Have you taken a dose yet?"

"No; I'm going to take one tonight—that is, if you will."

Dolly said she didn't care to be in love, and Dick said he had no special desire either. Dolly was very curious to know how it would affect him and begged him to take a dose. He steadily refused till she gave in and agreed to take some of it too. Then Dick poured a little into another bottle and left her the one he had brought.

Now, Dolly only consented to take the medicine for the sake of learning how it would affect Dick. She made a mental reservation. She would take it if she didn't forget to do so. But she didn't forget it. When she went to bed she took up the bottle, looked at it, held it up to the light and smelled of it. The perfume was delicious. She touched it with her tongue and it was like a new kind of candy. She poured a tiny bit into a spoon and put it between her lips. It was so nice that she concluded to take half a teaspoonful, which, being only half a dose, wouldn't affect her. It was so delicious that she concluded to take the other half teaspoonful. When she went to bed she had taken all there was in the bottle.

Dick had promised to come to see her the next evening and tell her how he felt. He did so, anticipating a lot of fun, since he intended to pretend that he was madly in love with her. Nevertheless he determined not to hurry matters nor to overdo it.

"Well?" said Dolly as soon as they were together.

"Well?" repeated Dick. "I took all there was in the bottle."

"With what result?"

"I went to sleep dreaming of a girl I had known for years. I had supposed I felt only a friendship for her, but in this was mistaken. For the first time I realized that I loved her and had always loved her."

"Oh, dear! Who is she?"

There wasn't the slightest reason for this question, for Dick told her with his eyes who the girl was.

"I wouldn't like to tell that," Dick replied, "until I learn how she feels toward me. How did the medicine affect you?"

"I? Oh, I didn't"—

"Are you sure?"

"I don't think I took enough to affect me."

"How much did you take?"

"I took half a teaspoonful."

"Didn't it make you feel a bit queer?"

"But it tasted so nice I took another half teaspoonful. Fact is I took all there was."

"Don't you feel any different?"

He was standing very near her, she resting one hand on a table on which there were violets. Dick took the other hand in his. He stood thus for a few moments, looking into her eyes, which were bent down upon the violets. Then he bent forward to her lips, she withdrawing them slightly. It may have been imagination, produced by a little sweetened water pleasantly flavored; it may have been the perfume of the violets. Whatever it was, when their lips met Dr. Pulsifer's theory was proved—love had been kindled.

"Oh, Dick," she said, looking up at him through her beautiful eyes, a happy smile on her face, "I feel so nice!"

"So do I."

"I wouldn't have believed it. Would you?"

"Not if it hadn't come from one of the most advanced physicians in the country."

Then a cloud passed over her fair brow.

"But suppose that when we stop taking the medicine we fall back to where we were?"

"Then we'll take some more of it."

"But we haven't any more; it's all gone."

"I have the prescription. I'll order a cask of it."

There was no fear that the flame, having been kindled, would cease to burn. Indeed, it became a conflagration, which burned itself out only when the honeymoon had waned to a crescent thread, and it left live coals that glowed with all the steadiness of a love that no love potion can ignite and no anti-love toxin can kill—the love of a united family.

A Chinaman on the Opium Habit.

In the American Magazine appears an article entitled "A Modern Opium Eater," written by a newspaper man, who became a victim of the habit and is now a convict in a penitentiary. In the course of the article the author quotes as follows what a Chinese den keeper said to him about the power of the habit to hold its victims:

"You no quit. Every man alleetime say he quit. Every man alleesame you. Smoke one time, smoke two time, smoke tlee time, then smoke alleetime. Chineman, white man, chokquay (negro) alleesame. No can quit. Bimeby you die you quit. Bimeby maybe you bloke—no more money, no more fliend bollow money, no can stealem money, maybe you quit one, two days. Bimeby maybe you go jail, no got fliend bling you hop, no got money given policeman catchem hop, you quit. You got money, no go jail, you no quit. I heap sabe. Bimeby you see."

The Facile Mexican.

In the opening paragraph of one of his best stories Kipling wrote: "Let it be clearly understood that the Russian is a delightful person till he tucks his shirt in. As an oriental he is charming. It is only when he insists on being treated as the most easterly of western peoples that he becomes a radical anomaly, extremely difficult to handle. The host never knows which side of his nature is going to turn up next." There is a somewhat similar difficulty with the Mexican. He can be charming, but one never knows whether he is the most northern southerner or the most southern northerner, and he can change from one to the other with a facility that is almost genius.—Philadelphia Ledger.

H. H. LURTON DEAD

IN COURT IN CLOSING DAYS

Interment Will Be at Nashville, Tenn. —Most of Court Away From Washington—Was Named by Taft—Had Been Promised Place by Roosevelt, Who Afterward Recanted.

WASHINGTON — News of the death of Justice Horace H. Lurton at Atlantic City came as a shock to official Washington. The justice has been in poor health for several months but sat in the court in the closing days and read opinions. The last opinion he read from the bench was that dismissing the petition of the state of Louisiana asking permission to file the suit enjoining Secretary McAdoo from putting into effect the raw sugar duties under the Underwood-Simmons tariff act.

Justice Lurton's body will be brought to Washington this evening. The funeral party will leave here by the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad at 11:10 o'clock and go to Louisville, Ky., and then take the Louisville & Nashville to Nashville, Tenn. The interment will take place at Clarkesville, Tenn., the home of Justice Lurton where he began the practice of law.

All of Justice Lurton's associates in the supreme court have been notified. Chief Justice White has advised the marshall of the supreme court, from White Sulphur Springs, that he will join the funeral train at that point and proceed to Tennessee. Justices Lamar and Vandervanter are the only members of the court now in Washington. Justices Day and Pitney are near enough to Washington to make it possible for them to attend. The marshall of the court, J. M. Wright, will accompany the body to Tennessee.

Justice Lurton had seen but little more than four years' service on the supreme court bench.

Appointed by Taft.

Although a Democrat, he was appointed by President Taft, who had been associated with him in the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit and had a high opinion of his judicial ability and integrity.

President Taft departed from a rule he laid down governing the appointment of judges when he named Justice Lurton, who was sixty-six years of age at the time of his appointment. In doing so President Taft felt that he was righting a wrong that had been done his friend, Justice Lurton, when President Roosevelt had practically agreed to appoint Mr. Lurton to the supreme bench and then changed his mind on the ground that he had been unfriendly to labor in his decisions and had accepted favors from railroad companies.

FRED A. BUSSE PASSES AWAY

He Was Formerly Chicago Mayor and Illinois Treasurer.

CHICAGO — Fred A. Busse, former mayor of Chicago, former postmaster of Chicago and former state senator and state treasurer of Illinois, is dead at his home at 4852 Sheridan road. The cause of his death was valvular disease of the heart from which he had suffered four and one-half months.

Politicians declare he had the largest personal following of any man in local Republican politics. He went to the mayor's office from the postmastership, to which post Theodore Roosevelt appointed him. He had previously held the position of state treasurer. He was a power in political circles and his friends fondly referred to him as "the burgomaster." Men associated with him in his administration from 1907 to 1911 declare he was the best mayor Chicago ever had.

MARINES TO OCCUPY HAITI

President Wilson Decides to Land Forces to Restore Peace.

WASHINGTON — President Wilson and his advisers have decided to land American naval forces in Haiti in an endeavor to restore peace to that afflicted republic. It is possible also that San Domingo will be occupied by the armed forces of the United States.

The unofficial report here os that a large force of bluejackets and marines will undertake the task. The marines will probably be taken from Vera Cruz and their place in the garrison there filled by soldiers from Galveston. This indicates that a complete occupation of either Haiti or San Domingo, and probably of both republics, will be effected by the American forces, and military control will be maintained until peace is restored and governments established.

YIELD OR FIGHT, IS CARSON DEFI

Ulster to Submit to Home Rule if Conquered.

DRUMBEG, IRELAND — The Orangemen's demonstration here culminated in a scene of immense enthusiasm around the platform where Sir Edward Carson, bible in hand, pledged the covenanters never to surrender to coercion, to remain loyal to the throne and never to waver in their support of their leaders in the fight against home rule.

In a speech which evoked tremendous enthusiasm he served notice on the British government that unless it was prepared to leave Ulster alone it would soon find the Ulstermen recognizing no government except the provisional government of Ulster. He said he had been given authority to act and, if necessary, that meant he was to exercise his powers without regard to consequences to himself. The Ulstermen, he added, were not going to give way and were bound to win, because God would defend the right.

CROP YIELD IS EXCELLENT

CHICAGO — The five grain crops this year aggregate 5,256,000,000 bushels, of 705,000,000 bushels, equal to 13.6 per cent, more than the harvest last year. The three grains, wheat, corn and oats, show nearly 5,000,000,000 bushels. This is the showing made by the government report issued. It is the second best ever made, the record yields being 276,000,000 bushels more than the present estimates in 1912.

With favorable conditions for the spring wheat crop in the northwest which is just coming into the healing stage in the southern sections, the 100,000,000-bushels mark may be reached in the final returns.

"BILLY" BAXTER IS DEAD

Famous White-Haired Minstrel Played Before Thrones.

CHICAGO — "Billy" Baxter's banjo is now still. The famous minstrel man, who amused the crowned heads of Europe with song and jest, who played with all of the large minstrel troupes in America, and was one of the most widely known and beloved characters on the American stage, died at the Rhodes Avenue hospital.

Wherever "Billy" Baxter went with his mandolin, guitar, and banjo mirth and pollity followed, and new friends were won. Born in Cincinnati on June 4, 1861, he turned early to the stage where his musical talent soon won him a place among the stars of minstrelsy.

Commerce Commission Reports on New Haven Road.

ACTIONS AGAINST DIRECTORS

Immense Loss Through Mismanagement and Waste Laid to Them—Board Called Criminally Negligent and Evidence Is Sent to Prosecutors—Sees One Bright Ray.

WASHINGTON — In one of the harshest reports ever handed down by a government bureau the interstate commerce commission held the directors of the old management of the New Haven railroad criminally negligent and subject to prosecution under the Sherman anti-trust and other laws.

The commission has put the matter of criminal proceedings to Attorney General McReynolds by referring to him a complete record of testimony taken. The committee also has called the attention of District Attorney Whitman to possible violation of state laws. The commission estimates that between $70,000,000 and $90,000,000 has been lost to the New Haven stockholders through waste and impairment of values under the old management. It expresses the opinion that a part at least of this amount should be recovered from the individual directors and others.

"The result of our research into the financial workings of the former management of the New Haven system," says the report, "has been to disclose one of the most glaring instances of maladministration revealed in all the history of American railroads."

The commission finds that the late J. P. Morgan and Charles H. Mellen dominated the affairs of the New Haven road and that the other members of the board of directors subordinated themselves to the will of these two. The commission refers repeatedly, however, to the New Haven directorate and officers as the "Mellen-Morgan-Rockefeller management."

Men Attacked.

The New Haven directorate so harshly attacked by the commission was made up as follows:

Wm. Rockefeller, Charles F. Brooker, Edwin Milner, Wm. Skinner, D. Newton Barnes, Charles S. Mellen, Robert W. Taft, James S. Elton, James S. Hemingway, A. Heaton Robertson, Frederick P. Brewster, Henry K. McHarge, Alexander Cochrane, John Billard, Geo. F. Baker, T. Dewitt Cuyler, Theodore N. Vail, Edward Milligan, Francis T. Maxwell, Sidney W. Winslow, Samuel Rea, Laurence Minot, Morton F. Plant, D. M. Warner, the late J. P. Morgan and John D. Pratt.

The report contains one bright ray, however, for the future. It says:

"The splendid property of the New Haven railroad itself will be called upon for many a year to make the drain upon its resources resulting from the unpardonable folly of the transactions outside the proper field in which its stockholders supposed their money was invested. But honesty and efficiency of management of this property of the railroad only will undoubtedly in time restore its former standing."

WOLVERINE BASTILE DECLARES 'DIVIDEND'

Michigan Convict Labor System Brings Profit of $50,000.

JACKSON, MICH. — Fifty thousand dollars over and above all expenses was declared by the board of control and wardens of the Michigan state prison, in session here, as a dividend to the taxpayers of Michigan for the fiscal year closing June 30, 1914.

The figures of the fiscal report show an increased saving in the current expense account over that of last year of $28,10[illegible], and an increase in the receipts of the state industries over running expenses, depreciation of buildings, etc., for the same period of $21,[illegible]. This makes a total surplus earning of $50,624.24.

The financial showing is the result of the practical working out of the theory of the warden that useful, instructive and profitable labor is necessary to the reformation of prison inmates, it being his idea that it is impossible for men to advance, morally or intellectually, in idleness or the doing of unprofitable or useless labor. Through the warden's efforts and the work of Governor Ferris and members of the prison board, the Michigan prison stands today in the front rank of the penal institutions in the United States.

FIREMEN AND LIVE STOCK FIRE VICTIMS

Several Fighters Caught Under Falling Wall; Animals Perish.

DETROIT, MICH. — Fire destroyed the five-story brick building in East Woodbridge street, occupied by the Chope-Stevens Paper company, and several smaller concerns. The loss is estimated at $200,000. The blaze was caused by lightning.

Several firemen were caught by a falling wall, but it is believed none was seriously hurt.

A large number of cattle, sheep and hogs were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the live-stock sheds of the Sullivan Packing company.

Soon after the blaze started employes of the company broke down the fences surrounding the pens and drove many of the animals into the street.

All of these had not been recaptured and the exact number killed was not known tonight. Estimates varied from 150 to 1,000.

TAX FOR G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT

Not a Dollar to Be Raised by Subscription or Advertising.

DETROIT, MICH. — Not a dollar will be raised by popular subscription for the forty-eighth national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Detroit, Aug. 31 to Sept. 5, and not a cent will come in from advertising schemes or concessions. The $30,000 required for a national encampment is being raised by taxation, a small levy having been made for the purpose. This is the first time this plan has been adopted for the raising of funds for any large convention or gathering.

Not a line of advertising will appear in the official program to be issued free by the committee. Permits to concessionaires for exclusive rights in the city during that week have been refused.

Cashmore, having been spurned by Mrs. Campbell in the afternoon, is alleged to have followed her home and shot her on her own doorstep as she was returning from a dance. Mrs. Campbell was accompanied home by Miss Cora Keefer and J. W. Butts, and three shots were fired at the latter.

Cashmore denies the shooting although several who witnessed it, have identified him as the man who fired the shots.

35 YEARS AGO.

July 17, 1879

This spell of hot weather is terribly trying on our editorial shears. They have done an immense amount of work during the last ten days.

Wm. Stocking of Dowagiac, son of Amos Stocking is visiting at his fathers for a few days.

The weather has been on a spree since Sunday last. Three such excessive hot days as Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday are seldom experienced.

This excessive hot weather has rendered it about impossible to run our presses in the day time. We have had to do our press work at night. Our forms were closed last night and the inside of the paper was ran off at 4 o'clock this morning, "in the cool of the day."

Prof. Spencer and family left Tecumseh last Tuesday for their old home in Allanburg, Ont. They expect to remain through the summer vacation.

BASEBALL NOTES.

The Adrian and Tecumseh clubs will play a return match in this village tomorrow afternoon. The game will be called at 2:30 p. m. Admission 10c. Ladies free.

A grand stand is now being erected on the grounds and it will probably be completed in time for the game.

There is talk of a tournament to be held here about the middle of August. The secretary is now corresponding with several other clubs and a definite decision will be made in regard to the matter soon.

THEN AND NOW.

In opposition to the tight skirts worn by the ladies of today, forty years ago they were wearing hugh hoop skirts.

Thirty years ago the more pronounced the bustle, the more fashionable the wearer. Twenty-five years ago the fashionable young man was wearing spring bottom pants, and as for wearing a negligee shirt, no suspenders, and a generally free and easy costume, his collars were stiff as a board and nearly sawed his ears from his head, his shirt front was stiff and highly polished and his suspenders were taut.

Daily Thought.

Never be unemployed, never be triflingly employed, never while away time.—John Wesley.

In accordance with the foregoing estimates the Board recommends that there be raised by taxation upon the taxable property of this district as follows:

For teachers' wages	$4000 00
For general fund	5500 00
For library fund	1500 00
Total	$11000 00

The Board also recommends that the school year shall consist of thirty-eight weeks and that tuition for foreign pupils shall remain as heretofore viz: High school, $20,00; grammar grades, $16 00; primary to 4th grade, inclusive, $12.00.

During the past year the Board has added to the equipment of the schools one of Bausch and Lomb's latest pattern projecting lanterns with strong microscopic attachment. This lantern with easy adjustment can also be used to project post cards, annimal studies or any opaque matter in natural colors upon the screen.

In connection with this lantern 600 educational slides and a like number of stereopticon views have been secured. These views cover a wide variety of vocational and geographic topics and are of particular value to the student.

At the last session of the Legislature a school law was passed requiring that nature studies be taught in the lower grades of all Michigan schools. That this study might be an interesting and instructive one to the pupil, two large nature book charts have been purchased picturing animals and birds in their nature tints also our native trees with sectional views of their leaves and bark.

In the East Branch a large hanging globe with sun and moon attachments has been added for use in fifth and sixth grades.

C. F. PATTERSON, Secretary.

Naval stations have been established at Tutuila, Samoa; island of Guam; Guantanamo, Cuba; Honolulu, Cavite and Olongapo, Philippine Islands. The latter has become an important naval base for the Asiatic fleet.—Philadelphia Press.

First Opera Glasses.

The single opera glass was first used in the time of Louis XIV. It became the rage, and everybody used one. The double opera glass (Jumelle) was invented in 1825, but did not at first find favor with women. A treatise was written in the early part of the nineteenth century on l'art de lorgner, in which it was shown that a woman with fine arms would hold the glass with both hands, if she were blessed with fine hands she would take off her gloves, if her neck were long she would recline back in her chair, and so on. It was quite a treatise on coquetry.

Look always on life and use it as a thing that is lent to you.—Spanish Proverb.

The National Advertising Committee of the National Association of Macaroni and Noodle Manufacturers met at Chicago on July 9th They are just proposing a plan for advertising American Made Products. The plan carries with it an expenditure of not less than $50,000 per year for four years. H. T. Dunn was elected a member of the executive committee C. L. Cuthbert was elected chairman of the National Advertising Committee. This gives Uncle Sam's Macaroni Factory the distinction of being the only manufacturers in this country to have two represenatives in official positions which goes to show that Uncle Sam's Macraoni factory is forgoing to the front. Uncle Sam's Macaroni Co. has just closed the largest contract ever let for macaroni with the VanCamp Packing Co. This contract was let purely on the ability of Uncle Sam's Macaroni Co. being able to deliver quality and service. This is the first season that the company will be required to run its plant through the whole summer season.

A MYSTERY CLEARED

About three weeks ago a man giving his name as James Murry and accompanied by a little girl Margeret Murray aged 9 years stopped at Lee McConnell's. They were in a two wheel cart, drawn by an old grey horse, had two suit cases with them, and claimed they had been on the road two days and nighs The man claimed that several children of the family had been disposed of by the authorities in Jackson, in schools and homes but he was going to put this girl in a convent in Toledo. The girl said her mother's name was Wycoff and they had lived in Ann Arbor up to two years ago when they moved to Jackson.

The man disappeared and has not been heard of since. Last week Dept. Smith was notified and he set to work to find a clue to the transaction. Tuesday he called up the Sheriff in Jackson who thought the man described by Dept. Smith was one that he was looking for.

Tuesday afternoon County Agent John Crowcombe of Jackson arrived on the 3:01 train. He recognized the girl as one they had been looking for, having been missing several weeks, Mr. Crowcombe had the papers showing that she had been committed to the Coldwater school with the other children, but had disappeared. He returned to Jackson with the little girl on the 5:35 train, and she will be taken to Coldwater later.

J. Wesley Tilly of (Box 673,) Selma, Cal., writes:

Gentlemen:—"It gives me much pleasure to be able to send you a testimonial, if by its reaching some sufferer your medicines will do as much for him as they have for me. At the age of fourteen I was troubled a great deal with malaria and biliousness, accompanied with the worst sort of large boils. I was persuaded by my parents, who have always been strong believers in Dr. Pierce's remedies, to try the Golden Medical Discovery. I took one bottle and the boils all disappeared, but I did not stop at one bottle, I took three and the malaria all left me and I have had no more boils to this day, thanks to the 'Golden Medical Discovery' for my relief.

"Following an operation for appendicitis two years ago I was troubled very much with constipation and I have been trying Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets and they have rid me of the troublesome gas and have aided me in conquering the whole trouble; thanks again for the 'Pellets' and for the advice I have obtained from The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." Possibly Too Frank.

A clergyman recently told his audience that young ladies and gentlemen should be entirely frank in their courtship—they should tell each other their weak points. Twenty-two engagements have been broken off in his congregation.

A king once said to a minister, "Do you believe in luck?"

"I do," said the minister.

"Can you prove it?" asked the king.

"Yes, I can."

So one night he tied up to the ceiling of a room a bag containing peas mixed with diamonds and let in two men, one of whom believed in luck and the other in human effort alone. The one who believed in luck quietly laid himself down on the ground on his blanket; the other after a time found the bag and, feeling in the dark the peas and stones, ate the peas and threw the diamonds to his companion, saying, "There are the stones for your idleness."

The man below received them in his blanket.

In the morning the king and the minister came and told each man to keep what he had found. The man who believed in trying got the peas which he had eaten; the other got the diamonds.

The minister then said, "Sire, there may, you see, be luck, but it is as rare as peas mixed with diamonds, so let none hope to live by luck."—Eastern Fable.

Concerning Two Sounds.

When Joseph Henry Lumpkin was chief justice of Georgia a case was brought up from Columbus in which a wealthy citizen asked for an injunction to prevent the construction of a planing mill across the street very near his palatial residence. His grounds for complaint consisted chiefly in the proposition that the noise of the mill would wake him too early in the morning.

"Let the mill be built," said the chief justice in rendering his decision. "Let its wheels be put in motion. The progress of machinery must not be stopped to suit the whims or the fears of any man. Complainant's fears are imaginary. The sound of the machinery will not be a nuisance. On the contrary, it will prove a lullaby. Indeed, I know of but two sounds in all nature that a man cannot become reconciled to, and they are the braying of an ass and the tongue of a scolding woman."—Atlanta Constitution.

How Attraction Acts.

Attraction acts very curiously. Thus if there were a man in the moon and if he were like the men on the earth he would be able to leap over a three storied house with as much ease as an ordinary jumper springs over a three foot fence, in consequence of the forces of attraction being much less at the moon's surface than at the earth's. An elephant there would be as light footed as the deer here. A boy throwing stones might easily land them in an adjoining county. On the other hand, the reverse of all this would happen in Jupiter and Saturn. They being so much greater than the earth, their attraction would so impede locomotion that a man would scarcely be able to crawl, and large animals would be crushed by their own weight.

Anchored.

"You are not very happy in this house," friends remarked to the renter.

"No, I can't say we are."

"Your ceilings are falling."

"They are, and that isn't all. Our roof leaks, our cellar fills with water every time it rains, our radiators thump, our furnace is too small for the house, its appetite is too large for our income, our gutters have rusted away, the porch sags, the house hasn't had a new coat of paint for seven years, the wall paper hangs loose in every room, and the chimney is shorter after every wind storm."

"Why in the world don't you move?"

"Because we can't find another house with a hall that our long oriental runner will fit."—Newark News.

Insurance From Italy.

Insurance came from medieval Italy. It is believed to date from the sixteenth century, and at that time it was known in Florence. The Romans did not know insurance. The nearest they came to it was the practice of a company supplying the army to require a guarantee from the state against the loss of ships. But this was soon abandoned, because damages had been collected for sunken ships too worthless to float.

An Odd Perquisite.

One of the most curious perquisites in connection with English coronations is the right of one of the peers to claim the bed and bedding used by the heir apparent on the night preceding the coronation. In olden times this was a perquisite of considerable value, as the "bedding" usually consisted of richly embroidered coverlids of velvet or silk, with priceless hangings of cloth of silver and gold.

Warm Retort.

"Do you know, John, there are times when you show signs of actual human intelligence."

"That's all right, Charles. If you knew twice as much as you do now you'd be half witted."—Minnesota Minnehaha.

BRYAN OFFERS $3,000,000

Costa Rica's Opposition to Nicaraguan Treaty Leads Him to Plan Payment.

WASHINGTON — Opposition by Costa Rica to the proposed Nicaraguan treaty, it became known, has been met by Secretary Bryan with an offer to pay $3,000,000 for any rights it may have in an interoceanic canal route by way of Lake Nicaragua.

The Costa Rican opposition is based on a claim to jurisdiction over a small portion of the proposed route. As the treaty provides for an allowance of $3,000,000 to Nicaragua, the state department, without according full recognition of any claim, decided that Costa Rica should be placed on the same basis as Nicaragua.

No. 28, Diplomat

She Won Success In Her Role as Cupid

By WALTER L. W. DISTELHORST

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Little did No. 28's first customer that Monday morning realize how much of her happiness she was going to owe to those six silver plated teaspoons.

No. 28 had just returned from the jewelry department, where with her slender savings she had bought the spoons for her widowed mother's silver wedding anniversary, less than two weeks off. She was returning from her locker, where she had left them, when the young stranger with wistful brown eyes approached her counter in the art department.

"Good morning," the stranger began timidly, holding out a photograph. "I should like to have this framed."

On the back of the photograph in a man's hand was written "Jack Dawson." Just above the signature there had once been something else—as if the picture had been inscribed to somebody—but the words had been erased.

No. 28 was passing the picture along the bits of molding when the girl stopped her with:

"There, that ought to do, don't you think? I want something plain."

She stepped to the window with the photograph and the bit of polished wood to view the effect in the light, while the girl behind the counter reached for her order book.

"I'll call for it. When will it be finished?" asked the customer.

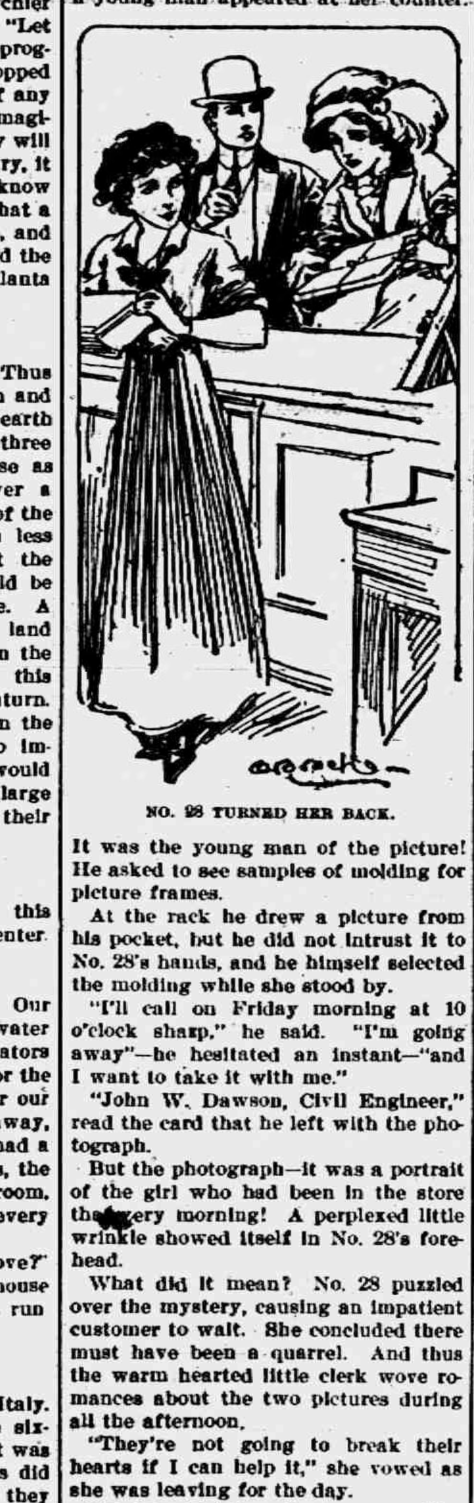
"Wednesday afternoon."

"Not before?"

With those brown eyes on her No. 28 almost promised to get the frame made that same day.

"We're very busy now, you know," she replied in her most businesslike manner, however. "It may not be ready even then, but we'll do our best."

No. 28 sent the picture to the shop upstairs. Soon she was so busy with other customers that she forgot about the girl with the wistful eyes and about the photograph with the erased inscription. But it all came back to her very vividly after lunch time when a young man appeared at her counter.



NO. 28 TURNED HER BACK.

It was the young man of the picture! He asked to see samples of molding for picture frames.

At the rack he drew a picture from his pocket, but he did not intrust it to No. 28's hands, and he himself selected the molding while she stood by.

"I'll call on Friday morning at 10 o'clock sharp," he said. "I'm going away"—he hesitated an instant—"and I want to take it with me."

"John W. Dawson, Civil Engineer," read the card that he left with the photograph.

But the photograph—it was a portrait of the girl who had been in the store that very morning! A perplexed little wrinkle showed itself in No. 28's forehead.

What did it mean? No. 28 puzzled over the mystery, causing an impatient customer to wait. She concluded there must have been a quarrel. And thus the warm hearted little clerk wove romances about the two pictures during all the afternoon.

"They're not going to break their hearts if I can help it," she vowed as she was leaving for the day.

But how to bring about a reconciliation between two utter strangers? No satisfactory solution suggested itself as she clung to a strap in the crowded street car on her way home, and none suggested itself to her after she arrived there. The riddle was too much even for the resourceful Mrs. Dolan at first.

"There ye go ag'in, darlin', worryin' yer little head about others' troubles when, goodness knows, ye have a-plenty av yer own," that matron said, wiping her hands on her apron and giving her daughter's cheek a playful pinch.

"I know, mother, but"— And the rest of the sentence was lost in a hug and a kiss.

"Molly, dear," the mother confided, ...g over her iron rimmed glasses, "at yer age I was just as bad. I worried about Tim's troubles, and thin I married him, Lord rest his soul! Troubles is good for us, specially the troubles av others. Sometimes I think if yer father hadn't let me carry all his he might be livin' yit. But the Lord knows best, an' it's not for the likes av me to be findin' fault with his doin's."

She resumed the subject while the two were busy over the supper dishes.

"Ye're sure ye're not wantin' to take this young man's troubles like I took yer father's?" Mrs. Dolan hinted.

"I don't want to marry anybody, mother, and you know it," replied Molly—"at least not for a long time. You know well enough that Tom's more than likely to go off on his new job without saying anything and that he's likely to find some girl there he likes better than me. It's the girl I want to help."

The mother nodded and continued to wash her dishes in silence. A half hour later she nodded again as she closed the door on Molly and Tom—a sunny faced fellow with Malone for his last name—bound for a little dance given by the locomotive firemen's lodge. But while Molly forgot all about borrowing trouble over the photograph mystery the mother crooned a little love song over her sewing and planned to bring together the two young hearts.

When Molly knelt at her mother's bedside late that night and whispered a little secret into her ear Mrs. Dolan first said:

"Darlin', I'm glad, for Tom will make ye a good man!"

Then she told her daughter how she could make the brown eyed girl happy too.

Late on Tuesday afternoon the young woman's picture, which was not to have been ready before the following day, was sent down from the shop.

"John W. Dawson," No. 28 said to herself as she gazed at the face behind the glass, "if you knew what fate has in store for your photograph you wouldn't be in such a hurry to get away!"

No. 28 was nervous all the next day and looked up apprehensively at every customer who approached her counter. Afternoon came at last and with it the girl who wanted to take home the picture. No. 28 recognized her the instant she appeared in the aisle. She kept her eyes fastened on her order book, however, and feigned surprise when the customer asked:

"Is my picture ready?"

"I'm sorry, but it won't be finished till 10 o'clock Friday. Will you call then or shall we send it?" said No. 28.

"I'll call."

No. 28 heaved a sigh of relief. That the customer should call just fitted in with her plan.

If there was ever a worried girl in the world it was No. 28 of the art department on Friday morning as the hour of 10 approached. At that time John W. Dawson was coming to get the framed picture of Miss Helen Davis, and Miss Helen Davis was coming to get the framed picture of John W. Dawson. Of course, neither knew about the other. No. 28 was sure that they had quarreled and that neither wanted the other to know.

Ten struck, and no sooner had the last stroke sounded than the two came toward No. 28's counter along different aisles. Molly's heart was in her mouth. She intercepted the young man first.

"Take a seat, please," she said, pointing to a chair. "I'll get your picture in a moment."

Then she flew to the other side and met the girl just as she was about to come around the corner.

"Take a seat," she said to the girl. "I'll get your picture in a moment."

Then from her desk she took the two pictures. "For Miss Helen Davis" were the words on a card fastened in the frame of Dawson's portrait. "For John W. Dawson" were the words on the picture of the brown eyed girl. No. 28 handed them face downward to the two young people—after interchanging them, however—so that when they were turned right side up Miss Davis found herself looking at her own likeness marked "For John W. Dawson," and Dawson learned that his picture was inscribed "For Miss Helen Davis."

"There must be some mistake," murmured a perplexed young man, approaching No. 28's desk from one side.

"There must be some mistake," murmured an equally perplexed girl, approaching from the other side.

No. 28 turned her back when they discovered one another.

"Helen!" she heard.

"Jack!"

Then she went to another part of the art department. Fifteen minutes later Dawson called her:

"I say, you made a bad mistake here."

"I know it."

"You"— cried the girl.

"I mixed them on purpose," interrupted No. 28.

"It's lucky for me you did," grinned Dawson.

No. 28 looked at the girl.

"It isn't a pleasant feeling when one thinks somebody's going far away without saying 'goodby'—and something else, is it?" said the girl behind the counter, her eyes suspiciously moist. "I was afraid, too, but"— And No. 28 interrupted herself, smiling and holding up her left hand to show the little diamond that sparkled on her third finger.

The girl at Dawson's side flushed and looked down.

To the art department a month later there came a small registered parcel. It contained a heavy gold locket with "No. 28" engraved on the front and two pictures in it—photographs of Mr and Mrs. John W. Dawson.

REFRIGERATOR CLAUSE VOID

Railroads Must Pay for Goods Damaged in Shipment.

LANSING, MICH. — Several weeks ago Grand Rapids shippers appealed to the state railroad commission for an order requiring the Pere Marquette, Grand Rapids and Indiana, Michigan Central and Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee railroads to eliminate from the shipping contracts the clause which removed the liability of the carriers when fruit and other perishable products was not consigned in refrigerator cars.

An order to this effect was issued by the commission.

MISTAKE MADE IN CUSTOMER

Sold "Near Beer" to Deputy and Is Arrested.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Because analytical tests made at Lansing showed that "near beer" sold at the Lake Goguac resort on Independence day was the real thing, one man is under arrest and at least one liquor retailer is likely to lose his license.

Harris Mouzes, who sold the beer without a license, made the mistake of handing a bottle over to Deputy Sheriff Charles Corwin.

Lad Swept Over Ionia Dam.

IONIA, MICH. — There have been two near-drownings in Grand river here this week, two boys being pulled from the water as they were going down for the last time. A third near fatality has just occurred. A youngster swimming in Prairie creek was caught by the swift current and carried over the dam.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD

Governor Malcolm R. Patterson, The South's Greatest Orator

MALCOLM R. PATTERSON OF TENNESSEE.

GOVERNOR PATTERSON is undoubtedly the greatest orator the south has produced since the death of the golden mouthed Henry W. Grady. He will appear on the Lincoln Chautauqua program in this city on the second day, night only. Here is a man who has held spellbound and breathless audiences from a few hundreds to tens of thousands under every possible condition. The Lincoln Chautauquas are very proud of their record in presenting him to the people of this community. The Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger of Jan. 7, 1914, declares that Jackson audiences "never heard a more eloquent speech than that delivered in the house of representatives last night by ex-Governor Malcolm R. Patterson, in which he grandly and graphically told the story, 'Why I Changed Front on the Liquor Question.' It was a great speech. No other word can properly describe it—a great speech, delivered by a great orator, on a great subject."

MAKES "HINDU" DISGORGE

Woman Recovers Money She Gave to Fake Clairvoyant.

Laporte, Ind., July 20.—Thomas W. Conroy, a "Hindu" clairvoyant, who came here two weeks ago from Fort Wayne, but who previously had been driven out of Chicago, left Laporte suddenly after he had been forced to return $50 to Miss Rilla Robertson, a dressmaker. The woman complained to the police that Conroy had induced her to give him the money to invest in a New York company, which he said he controlled, with the assurance that on Aug 28 Miss Robertson would receive $14,000 in return.

Conroy told the woman it was a sort of lottery plan, but, as he controlled the company, he would "fix it."

CHINESE EVADE EXCLUSION ACT

American Grafters, of Course, Are at Bottom of It.

TONG SOCIETIES PAY BRIBES

Orientals in United States Through Underworld Politicians Able to Name Many Interpreters in Immigration Department—Young Chinamen Helped in as Sons of Merchants

Philadelphia, July 20.—Conducting a country-wide investigation, the Bureau of Immigration has unearthed a Chinese immigration scandal which is assuming large proportions. So far the government's investigation has revealed the fact that the Chinese exclusion act to an amazing extent has been nullified by graft.

The On Leong Tong and the Hip Sing Tong gamblers, grafters, opium smugglers and vice promoters, who have established Chinatowns in every large city of the country through the connivance of grafting police, have also invaded the immigration service.

Tongs Name Interpreters.

Through such influence as the Tongs have been able to exert over tenderloin politicians, the Chinatown Tongs have named the Chinese interpreters of the Bureau of Immigration. Immigration of this kind has been at the mercy of the crooked interpreters in the pay of the Chinatown Tongs. Between the Chinatown Tongs and the interpreters they have managed to get into the government service, evidence has been manufactured freely to obtain the admittance of Chinese.

The Tongs are said to have paid a standard rate of $500 for every Chinaman smuggled in through the connivance of their interpreters, and the Chinamen brought into the country in this manner are in turn declared to have been turned over to the Tongs to work for them in a sort of bondage for a number of years to repay the Tong leaders for importing them.

Loophole in Exclusion Act.

The wiley Chinatown Tongs found a loophole in the Chinese exclusion act which made possible their recently discovered plot. The law permits minor sons of Chinese merchants to enter this country and join their parents. The Tongs therefore sent to China for young men. They were brought to Canada and the Canadian government was furnished with a $500 bond as required of every Chinaman entering the Dominion. Traveling east through Canada, the imported Chinese laborer would reach a point in Michigan or New York when they would claim the right to enter the United States as the minor sons of some Chinatown grafter in one of the larger eastern cities. A Chinatown Tong member, posing as a merchant, would appear as the father of the imported Chinaman and the Chinese interpreter would establish the alleged parentage to the full satisfaction of the immigration officials.

Joe Lee, Chinese interpreter, connected with the federal immigration office in Philadelphia, has been suspended and his brother and six Chinamen have been arrested in Saginaw, Mich., on the charge of having been interested in the smuggling trade. So far thirteen young Chinamen, imported as "sons" of merchants in Philadelphia's Chinatown, have also been arrested.

MOHENO BITTER AGAINST BRYAN

Huerta's Secretary Also Says Villa Is Impossible.

NEVER COULD BE PRESIDENT

In Interview Former Mexican Foreign Minister Says Mexico's Troubles Are Just Beginning—He Declares Bryan Has Two Sides—Describes Him as Clown in Circus.

New York, July 20.—The plan ascribed to Pancho Villa of having himself elected constitutional president of Mexico after General Carranza has served a short time as provisional president is scouted as impossible of fulfillment by Querido Moheno, Huerta's secretary of foreign affairs.

"Villa as president is impossible," Senor Moheno said. "The people of Mexico would never permit it. A man to be president must have some support. Villa is a bandit. As a fighter he commands a following, but not as president of Mexico. He would not even attempt such a thing."

The general substance of Senor Moheno's talk with interviewers is that trouble in Mexico is just beginning; that the resignation of General Huerta is only the end of the first stage of the present chaos in the country. Senor Moheno believes that General Huerta himself will return to Mexico before a great while and will take part in the revolutionary movement which already has started in some five different localities against the constitutionalists. Senor Moheno does not consider it likely that ex-President Huerta will visit New York or any part of the United States.

Senor Moheno went on to tell what he said was the view of Mexican people regarding the attitude of the United States toward the republic to the south.

Bryan Disappointment.

"Bryan was a great disappointment to us," he said. "You remember he came to Mexico some eight years ago. At that time he talked much about Pan-American friendship. He ate Mexican food, bought and wore a suit of Mexico clothes while he was with us; tasted—just took a sip—of Mexican drinks. While in Mexico Mr. Bryan was a Mexican.

"We hoped that Mr. Bryan would be nominated by the Democrats and that he would be elected, or after his visit to us we were sure that he was our friend and would be fair to us. Then President Wilson was nominated with Mr. Bryan's support. We knew of Mr. Wilson through his book on government. When Mr. Bryan was chosen by Mr. Wilson as secretary of state we said: 'Now we have a friend in Washington.'

"But Mr. Bryan, as we see him now, has two sides. He is a Mexican—is one of us, and we are a great people, when he is with us. When he is in Washington we are merely a lot of Indians. The feeling toward Mr. Bryan in Mexico has changed in the past months. The Mexican people now call him—wait until I get the English words—a clown in a country circus."

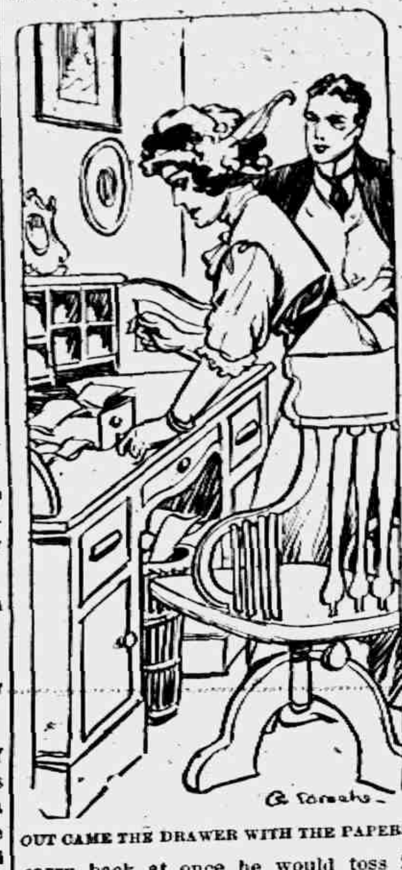
His One Useful Act

Puttering Turned Out to Be of Value

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

One day Edward Carr, who was always on the lookout for odd articles, attended an auction of furniture in the house of a man who had recently died. An antique desk, said to be 150 years old, was put up, and Carr resolved to buy it if he could secure it at a reasonable price. Among the bidders was a young lady of attractive appearance who seemed to be very desirous of buying the desk, but when the price was run up over $50 she dropped out and with evident disappointment. The desk was finally knocked down to Carr for $100.

One of the pigeonholes he used for pencils, erasers, penholders and other small articles. At times when he brought some little instrument from his workshop that he didn't care to carry back at once he would toss it into this pigeonhole. One day he put a pocket compass in there. In taking it out he noticed that the needle was deflected. There was not a bit of metal near enough to affect it sensibly, and Carr was at a loss to understand the deflection.



OUT CAME THE DRAWER WITH THE PAPERS.

The young man moved the compass to the right and to the left, the needle holding the same position—toward the pigeonhole. Putting his hand into the latter, he discovered that it did not extend the full depth of the desk. But on examining the other pigeonholes in line with it he found that none of them extended farther back. He tried the magnet on them all, but without any noticeable effect except on the one in question.

Now, what Edward Carr did not know about old desks was not worth knowing. He was aware that many of them contained secret drawers. He was also aware that some of these drawers instead of being made of wood were made of metal. He believed that the needle of his compass was attracted by a metal drawer. At any rate, there was some metal substance there that influenced it. Taking up a penholder, he began to poke about on the back of the pigeonhole. After doing this for some time he struck the upper right hand corner, and the whole surface comprising the end of the compartment pressed forward against his penholder. When it had come as far as it could he took it out and found it to be a drawer made of steel. It was filled with papers yellow with age.

Carr fell to examining the contents. The first paper he opened contained a flower that had evidently been there for many years. Carr wondered what the story was connected with it and passed on to the next. It was a letter from a son to his father promising, if forgiven for past sins, to mend his ways.

On striking the next document Carr assumed that he had come upon something of importance. It was the will of one Peter Carson, executed fifty years before, making a few small bequests and leaving the rest of his estate to Emily Marston.

Here was a will that had been locked up for half a century. Doubtless the testator had died long ago and the estate had gone to the heirs at law, the real heir getting nothing. Possibly there was a later will. If so this one was of no value. Quite likely the property involved had passed into certain hands, and would it not be better that the will should be destroyed? Might it not be better that the possessors should not be disturbed?

Then suddenly the remembrance of the young woman who had bid on the desk and seemed greatly disappointed at not getting it popped up before Carr's mind's eye. Might she not be Emily Marston? He smiled as it occurred to him that Emily Marston could not be less than fifty years old. But the girl and the desk and the will all got tangled up in Carr's brain and he could not separate them.

Carr was not long in deciding on the right way to treat this case. He went to a lawyer and asked him to look up the estate of Peter Carson. It was found that Peter Carson had died forty years before without a will. The heir at law was a son, Nicholas Carson, who had gone to the bad. An effort had been made to find him at the time of his father's death, but it had been unavailing.

There being no proof of Nicholas Carson's death, the estate had remained in chancery for ten years, when the next and only heir at law, Mary Cowdry, spinster daughter of Peter Carson's sister, succeeded in obtaining from the courts a document declaring Nicholas Carson legally dead, and the property was turned over to her. The report made no mention of Emily Marston, but upon inquiry Carr learned that she was a young woman who had taken care of Carson, who was old and feeble. At the time of his death surprise was manifested that he had made no provision for her.

Of all these persons the last named was the one in which Edward Carr was most interested, though it appears that at Peter Carson's death she was given no special importance. He learned that ten years after his decease she had married. She, too, had died, leaving one child, a daughter, who would now be about twenty years of age.

On learning this Carr was at once struck with the idea that the girl who had tried to buy the desk might be this daughter of Emily Marston and the real heir to Peter Carson's estate, which had been considerable at his death and in the forty-six years that had elapsed since had doubled. It was now in possession of Mary Cowdry, an old woman and still unmarried.

To look for the girl who had bid on the desk would be like looking for a needle in a haystack, but it was not difficult to get the name of Emily Marston's daughter, and it was found to be Emily Peck. Her address was obtained from a directory.

One afternoon Miss Peck, who was a schoolteacher, had just returned from school when a maid brought her the card of Edward G. Carr. Never having heard of Mr. Carr, she thought there must be some mistake, but went down into the parlor.

Carr saw before him the girl who had tried to buy the desk. She did not recognize him, though he recognized her at once.

"I think I have seen you before," he said.

"Indeed! Where?"

"At an auction where I bought a desk."

"Oh, you bought that desk, did you?"

"Yes. May I ask you why you wished it?"

"The desk belonged to an old gentleman, Peter Carson. My mother, as a young girl, took care of him. He told her that he had provided for her in his will, but no will was found. She expected to find it in his desk, but it was not there. The desk was bought by the person whose effects were sold at the auction I attended. I recognized it from my mother's description of it and thought I would like to buy it, since my mother told me she believed there was a secret drawer in it and that secret drawer might contain a will."

"I should be happy to assist you in examining the desk," said Carr, who had a scheme of his own for imparting the information he had for her. "I am living with my mother, and if you will come to our home we will make an investigation."

The young lady brightened up and assented joyfully. Carr kept her talking about the situation till her dinner was announced, when he left her. The next day she called at the Carrs', was received by Mrs. Carr and taken to Edward's room, where stood the desk. Carr began to tap here and there for a secret spring, but, gaining no result, took up his pocket compass. Then he showed his visitor that the needle was deflected and told her that there was metal near it. Following this up with the poking as he had done when he made the discovery, out came the drawer with the papers in it just as he had found them. Handing the drawer to the excited girl, she ran over the papers till she found the will and opened it and saw that she was the possessor of a splendid estate.

Then she fell back in a state of collapse.

Mary Cowdry was not especially sorry that an heir had been found. The estate was of no especial use to her, and she had no one to whom to leave it. She agreed, in consideration of Miss Peck's settling an annuity upon her sufficient for her support, to turn the property over without any process of law. This arrangement was carried out, and Emily Marston's daughter stepped from the position of schoolteacher to millionairess.

When the beneficiary came to ask Edward Carr what she could do for him to show her appreciation of what he had done for her he said that she had done a great deal—all she could do—already. He had been told and had believed that he would be nothing but a putterer and would never be of use to himself or any one else. He had the satisfaction of having brought a rightful heir to her estate, and that was quite enough for a man of whom nothing whatever had been expected.

Whether or not the heiress was caught by this frank modesty, whether she considered that there was but one way to pay the debt she owed, she finally discharged it by giving herself to the man who had made her rich. She takes great pleasure in humoring her husband's taste for old things, and, as for the desk in which the will was found, she has had it inlaid with gold.

The Trained Voice.

Lawyers, clergymen and doctors all fail to secure the influence with the people with whom they come in contact because of inability to express their thoughts in an impressive way. Had the voice been trained the same as the eye and the intellect, had the exterior qualities been trained to express like the voice the best and the clearest facts, they would all have been successes. The melodious voice of Henry Clay always charmed his audience everywhere. Wherever he went people flocked to hear him, while the heavy bass tones of Daniel Webster failed to attract and actually drove people away. They preferred to read what he had to say, but wanted personally to hear Clay's pleasing voice.—Medical Record.

Fuller's Great Memory.

Thomas Fuller, the author of "The Worthies of England," possessed the useful accomplishment for a clergyman of being able to repeat a sermon verbatim after hearing it only once. Fuller once succeeded in naming backward and forward and without a single omission every shop sign on both sides of the way from Temple Bar to the eastern extremity of Cheapside. This appears a remarkable feat when it is remembered that Fuller lived before the practice of numbering houses was adopted, so that every shop he passed bore a sign.—London Chronicle.

Savage Game In India.

In the province of Sind, India, there are more than 3,513,000 people, and yet there are occasional tigers, panthers, leopards, wolves and hyenas. The gad, or wild sheep, the ibex, the chinker, the black buck and the hog deer are comparatively common.

Still Possible.

"Uncle, can't I be a pirate when I grow up?"

"Sure you can, son. What do you want to pirate—books or plays?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MARK R. BACON OF WYANDOTTE OUT FOR NOMINATION FOR CONGRESS.

Mr. Bacon lives in Wyandotte and believes that Wayne County is entitled to the congressional honors this year as Wayne County has not had a candidate on the ticket for about 24 years.

He stands for a tarrif based on scientific investigation, one that will benefit the farmer, the laborer, the mechanic and the whole people, a policy that will build up and not tear down, not for any policy that would kill prosperity or put your finances on the wrong side of the ledger. A policy that will give the laborer plenty of work at good wages and the farmer a good market for all the crops he can raise and also get good prices.

The primary election is to be held on Friday, August 25.

HENRY O BAILEY

Henry C. Bailey passed away at his home in Adrian township Sunday at 2 o'clock in the afternoon after an illness of several weeks in his [illegible] yr. The funeral will be held from the home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Heinzman officiating. Burial in Tipton cemetery. Mr. Bailey is survived by his wife and six children. John of Franklin, Nathan of Jackson, Mrs. H. Tidley Tipton, Bert of Denver, Col. Anna and Grant who are at home. He was identified with the interests of Tecumseh being one of the stock holders in the Lilley State Bank and was a familiar figure on our streets.

NOTICE.

The second annual basket picnic of The Southern Michigan Masonic Picnic Association will be held at Clark's Lake August 6th. One of the features of the day will be a ball game between Tecumseh and Clinton. Both lodges are boasting the best team in Southern Michigan and a good game is expected.

BICYCLES THAT WILL RUN ON THE SIDE WALK

For some time the authorities have been annoyed by bicycle riders who would persist in riding on the side walk. There is a village ordinance which positively prohibits the riding of bicycles on the side walk. Friday afternoon, officer Smith discovered Louis Kozel violating this ordinance. Kozel's bicycle was such a slick easy one, that it simply could not stop running on the walk. So officer Smith had to make an example of Louis. He was taken before Judge Hosmer and the usual fine imposed. After some little delay Mr. Kozel found friends who helped him out of his diffculty. His friends advice was that when his bicycle simply would run on the side to dismount and kick h—l out of it

SNELL'S HOTEL.

Way back in 1850 on the corner now occupied by the Barrett House, stood an old frame structure which was known as Snell's Hotel. It was a two story building with two windows in the front and three on the side, in the upper story.

On the corner of the ground floor were two windows with 16 panes of glass making a light corner for those who made that a loafing place. A single door another window and a double door completed the front, and a door and two windows the side of the main building. A two story annex was built on the west side, also one on the north side. The town pump was just in front of the building with a plank walk leading to it.

As we remember it in later years, the siding was dilapidated and hugh placards adorned the side next to the railroad. The barroom had many a visitor for in those days Tecumseh was not dry and a trip to Manchester was not necessary.

But the march of improvements reached this corner and the old building was moved away in sections one is now the second hand store, and the old house on the corner is a second section, the third one collapsed as it was being moved, and Hiram Snell an old resident picked up several gold pieces out of the ruins (that he had dropped from his own pocket for the occasion) and a raft of men and boys dug faithfully, but failed to find any more.

John Gaston has a post card picture of the old building which is quite interesting.

MOTORCAR PROGRESS.

Standardization of the Parts and What That Means.

Ask any engineer what feature of modern motorcar construction represents the greatest improvement and advancement in design, and he will say not the automatic engine starter, the six cylinder engine, but standardization.

That may be a word which means but little to the car owner, but he unconsciously derives untold benefit from it every day that he runs his automobile. By reason of it he has only to ask for a certain kind of spark plug and he knows it will fit the cylinder, he has only a dozen or so different sizes of tires from which to select the one adapted to his car, and even the carburetor may be replaced by one of a different make without any change whatsoever in the bolt holes or attaching flange.

A vital part of the motor or running gear may be replaced by a blacksmith or local machine shop from the ordinary sizes of stock carried on hand, and the screw thread sizes as now used conform to a certain standard that renders replacements exceedingly simple. Grease cups, nuts or bolts that may have been lost may be replaced at the nearest supply store or garage, for no longer does each manufacturer work only to his own specifications on these minor parts.—H. W. Slauson, M. E., in Leslie's.

LAWN PARTY.

A merry party of young ladies gathered on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rosacrans Saturday afternoon, in response to invitations from Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans and Miss Marian Rosacrans.

The lawn was a charming background for the pretty gowns and the bright faces of the guests.

Cards and music furnished the amusements of the afternoon. Dainty refreshments were served and were accompanied by music on the Victrola. The afternoon was a delightful one and was enjoyed by every one present.

BREAKFAST PARTY

Friday morning dawned bright and beautiful and at an early hour, a bevy of beautiful young girls gathered on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Wood to celebrate the 21st birthday of Miss Dorothy Wood of Palo Alto, Cal. A large table charmingly decorated with snowwhite napery dainty china and silver and white pond lilies were the central attraction, on the lawn and at 9 o'clock a three course breakfast was served, covers being laid for 24.

Following the breakfast, cards, music and dancing furnished amusement for the merry crowd.

The home was prettily decorated, nasturtiums being the chosen flower. Miss Dorothy has been spending several years in California, and her visit to Tecumseh this summer is a source of pleasure to her host of friends who hope to keep her here for an indefinite time. The out-of-town guests were Misses Albertine Boyce, Iva Kalbfleisch, Helen and Winnifred James of Detroit, Kathryn Milliken of Chicago, Lulu Brown of Deerfield and Miss Frances Exelby of Britton.

The morning passed all to quickly, and as the guests departed, they congratulated Mrs. Wood on the charming entertainment she had given them.

MORE THAN A BILLION DOLLARS IS THE ESTIMATED VALUE OF MICHIGAM FARM PROPERTY.

Lenawee County Stands First, Crowding out Kent County.

The Michigan Agricultural College has been making investigations in regard to the value of Michigan Farm Property and have placed the total valuation at $1,083,000,000.00.

The figures have swithed the agricultural honors from Kent county to to Lenawee. Kent was found to have the greatest number of farms, but from a standpoint of the value of the agricultural property Lenawee was in the lead. The value of Lenawee county farms is estimated at $41,839,763

Wayne County is second, due largely to the fact that its agricultural districts are closely allied to Detroit. It is placed at $38,712,788. Kent county is third, estimated at $34,625,818, Berrien county is fourth with $34,518,200, while Keweenaw county has the least estimated at but $95,131.

WAGNER'S "PARSIFAL."

Its Cold Reception at First Moved Hans Sachs to Fury.

When Wagner's "Parsifal" was first performed in Baireuth, the critic Hans Sachs was almost the only one of all the writing fraternity to welcome it as a great work of genius. To the ears of the others its rude realism sounded unmusical. They wanted melody like that Verdi was turning out in Italy, Bizet in Paris and a few minor composers in their own Berlin.

But Sachs was a man of broader mold. He heard the great music of "Parsifal" with unprejudiced ears and recognized the genius of the man. He shouted it abroad in his writings and became furious at a world that would not, perhaps could not, find pleasure in the dramatic voices of the orchestra, its vivid emotionalism and marvelous appeal to the aesthetical nature that is in every man and woman. He knew that the Germans were merely refusing to listen, save for melody, and finally he told them that even in the melodic field Wagner was the greatest of them all.

Sachs has written eloquently of Wagner's melody, beside which the melody of the Italians is pallid, anaemic, insignificant. Only now and then, he said, were the Italian melodists other than artificial. Wagner's melody was the spontaneous song of a musical heart. The "Good Friday Spell" was the most exquisite song of praise ever written by any man, no less a song because it was wordless, sung only by the violin and woodwinds.—Detroit Free Press.

THE TOMB OF TUSITULA.

Samoan Natives Keep Stevenson's Grave Buried In Flowers.

It was in December, 1894, that Stevenson died at Vailima, near Apia, on the Island of Upolu, in the Samoan group. Lovers of this quaint character—the modern who was an ancient, the ancient who was a modern, the contemporary who became a classic because he translated new things into thoughts for all time—will be glad to know that since then he has slept in a distant grave, but not in a neglected one. For the natives of that island keep his tomb on the lonely mountainside fragrant with flowers. "The tomb of Tusitula," they call it—that was the great Scot's Samoan name.

Stevenson went to live in Samoa in 1887. He was a comparatively young man, but he had seen the vanities of the world, and, captivated by the climate, the scenery, and the kindly character of the natives, he at once determined to live out whatever space of life might remain to him in that fortunate island. And there he did live for seven years. Long ere he died he wrote his own epitaph, and that epitaph is graved on the brass tablet that was put there in 1896:

Under the wide and starry sky
Dig the grave and let me lie.
Glad did I live and gladly die
And laid me down with a will.
This be the verse that you grave for me:
"Here he lies where he longed to be.
Home is the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter home from the hill."

More Wheat

and better can be raised to the acre if a good commercial fertilizer is used. The reason is apparent. Every pound of milk, butter, live stock, grain or vegetables that is sold from the farm removes just that much from the soil. When you sell more plant food from the soil than you put back, there is but one result—poor land, poor crops.

Darling's Fertilizer

is an Animal Matter Fertilizer and will return this lost plant food. This returned energy will produce big, healthy straw and grain and repay the investment many times over on the wheat alone, to say nothing of the lasting effect on the following crops. Get your supply of us and watch results.

Getting Rid of Bot Flies.

The United States department of agriculture has thoroughly tested a very unusual cure for the disease of horses called bots. Bots are the larvae of the horse bot fly and live in the stomachs of horses. They interfere with digestive processes to such an extent as to cause loss of flesh, general poor condition and often death. Dislodging them is extremely difficult.

In the treatment tested the horse was fed a little hay and oats in the morning and allowed to go without food the rest of the day. In the evening a purgative was given. Next morning the horse was given three drams of carbon bisulphide in a gelatin capsule three times at intervals of an hour. When the capsule reached the horse's stomach it dissolved, and the carbon bisulphide, a liquid that is extremely volatile at the temperature of a horse's body, evaporated rapidly. The gas suffocated the bots and other parasites in the horse's stomach without injuring the horse in the least. The remedy was tried with complete success on a large number of affected animals.—Minneapolis Journal.

Power of the Opium Habit.

In the American Magazine a former newspaper man, who became a victim of the opium habit and is now a convict in a penitentiary, writes a dramatic account of his experiences with the drug. He gives as follows his idea of the power of the habit:

"I do not believe that any man with an opium or morphine habit of years' standing can deny himself the drug if it is within reach.

"I do not believe that any man, no matter what his previous character may have been, can use opium continuously and not have the impulse to be crooked. He may not be crooked, he may lack the nerve or the necessity to steal, but the impulse will be there, and if it ever becomes a question of theft or a 'habit' he will thieve. This is the history of every opium smoker I have ever known."

Physical Energy.

Perhaps you do not know it, but when you walk a distance of ten miles you expend enough force, could it be all collected, to raise 800 tons one foot from the ground. Of this enormous quantity of energy the legs are responsible for 150 tons, the heart for 100, the lungs for twenty-two and the bulk of the remainder is wasted in the heat given off from the body.

In severe athletic competitions, such as running, rowing and boxing, you must be in such a condition as to be able to exert, by your limbs alone, each minute as much force as would lift 5,000 pounds one foot above the ground.

When a powerful man works for twenty-four hours with all his might the energy he expends is equal to lifting a third class cruiser, and during his life he dissipates enough power to carry his body at death to the sun. These statements may at first sight seem extraordinary, but will not seem so when it is remembered that two ounces of bread contains the potential energy of 150 tons.—Pearson's.

Buying an Island.

The story of the settlement of Tangier island, in Chesapeake bay, as told by J. M. Church in his book about the island and its isolated inhabitants, outdoes that of the famous sale of Manhattan:

"You gentlemen ain't never heard how Tangier got settled? It were by a man from the eastern shore settlements back in 1707—more'n 200 years ago. The island were the home of a tribe of Indians, and this here man Post got the idee of raisin' stock on it. So he runs over and tells the Indians that the colonists are goin' to come and massacre them and they'd better get outen the way. That scared the Indians, all right, and they sailed over to the western shore of Virginny. But before they went Post said, as the island wasn't goin' to be any more use to 'em, he'd buy it off them. The chief agreed, so Post gave him two old overcoats, and the island was his. Then he brung over five families and a passel o' horses and cows."

Where Is Europe?

The man who motors from London to Brighton would never dream of telling his friends next week that he had spent the holiday motoring in Europe. But the man who motored from Calais to Boulogne would.

Europe doesn't mean England to the average man. Try it on him and see. Europe he conceives only as the continent.

The Scilly islanders are much the same. They greet newcomers with inquiries as to affairs in England. I have known old country folk in the Isle of Wight speak in the same way, and the people of the marsh country at the back of Dungeness used to and may even now regard themselves as extra territorial. They were the marshmen; other people were foreigners and Englishmen.—London Mirror.

REVENUE CUTTER SERVICE.

How It Came to Be Placed Under the Treasury Department.

The United States revenue cutter service is a military arm of the government attached to and under the direction of the treasury department. The service was organized in 1790 and constituted the original naval force of the country. There was at that time no navy department, and the service was placed under the treasury department, where it has remained ever since.

It is charged with the enforcement of the navigation and customs laws of the United States, the assistance of vessels in distress, the protection of the sealing industry in Alaska, the enforcement of the quarantine laws, the destruction of derelicts and other floating dangers to navigation and numerous other duties appropriate to its class of vessels. Each winter, by direction of the president, a number of the cutters patrol the coast for the special purpose of assisting vessels in distress.

The service co-operates with the navy when directed by the president and has so co-operated in every war in which the United States has been engaged. It is sometimes called the revenue marine service, but revenue cutter service is the proper name. There are forty-three cutters in the service, and they carry from one to five or six guns each.—Philadelphia Press.

HYGIENE IN THE DESERT.

Our Latter Day Methods Were an Open Book to Moses.

Nothing under the sun is new. Facts have proved that even the pitch which hygiene has reached at the present day was equaled and in many instances excelled under the laws of Moses.

The particular and careful manner in which animals are slaughtered according to the laws of the Talmud is acknowledged today to be the most sanitary method possible.

Professor Koch gave to the world the valuable results of his investigations in bacteriology, but several thousand years before that the Mosaic law pointed out the danger to humanity from tuberculosis in cattle, but did not forbid poultry as food. It was not many years ago that specialists discovered that fowl tuberculosis was harmless to man.

The yearly exodus to the country and seaside is no new innovation. Moses, the great lawgiver, prescribed not only feasting at certain seasons of the year, but the removal of whole families to great camping grounds in the open spaces, where they could live near to nature.—Pearson's Weekly.

Oodles, the Avenger

He Was Half Witted, but Faithful

By M. J. PHILLIPS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"The New York attorney, he goes tomorrow," said Frederic, the fat French landlord of Pere Chene.

His wife, a thin little woman, with a sharp voice and a heart of gold, blazed into sudden anger.

"He stayed too long, and he goes too soon!" she cried.

Frederic took his pipe from his mouth and turned ponderously.

"You mean—what?" he questioned.

"I mean that our Therese"—

Frederic gazed uncomprehendingly, and she made a gesture of impatience at his stupidity.

"Tchk! Can't you see? She likes him too well."

Her husband's mouth sagged open. He held the pipe in his pudgy hand. His black beard rippled over his breast. His eyebrows were raised in amazement and something of dismay. He looked like a wondrously carved statue, for he sat very still.

But one's mouth cannot stay open indefinitely. Frederic's closed reluctantly. He peered into his pipe and drew forth his buckskin tobacco pouch. "Chut!" he commented.

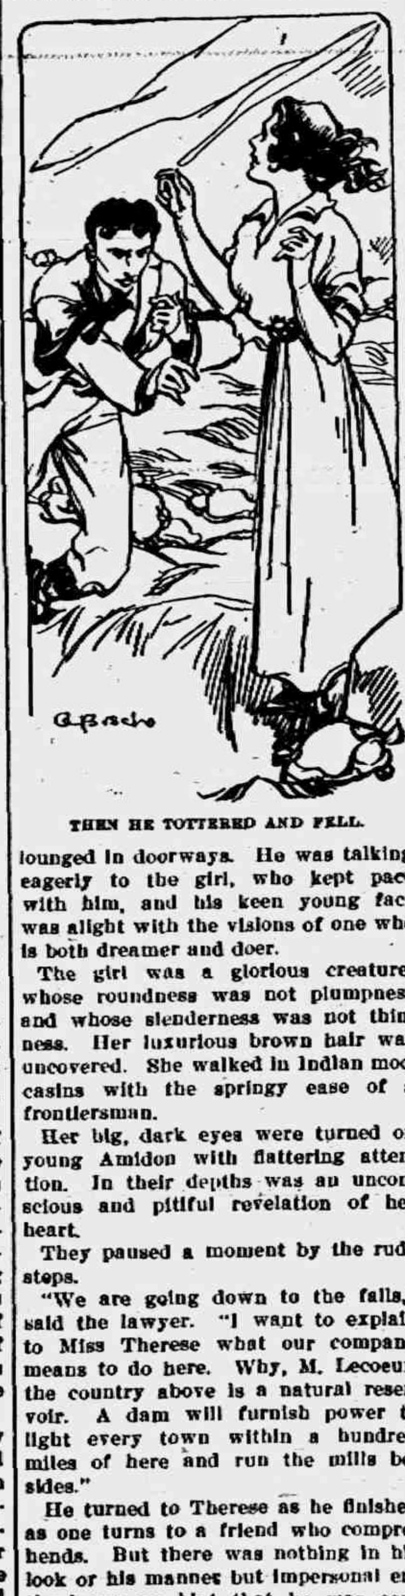
Mme. Lecoeur ceased her agitated rocking.

"'Chut!'" she snapped. "'Chut!' And our only child is breaking her heart. Look for yourself. They are coming."

She inclined her head sideways. Her husband turned in his stout chair, all [illegible] looked up the one street of the backwoods Michigan town.

It was a pretty sight that Frederic saw—one that appealed to the quick sentimental perceptions of his race.

A man and a girl were coming toward the hotel on the veranda of which they sat. The man was of the city, and his neat, fashionable clothing was in striking contrast to the Mackinaw garb of the few woodsmen who lounged in doorways. He was talking eagerly to the girl, who kept pace with him, and his keen young face was alight with the visions of one who is both dreamer and doer.



G. Bache

THEN HE TOTTERED AND FELL.

The girl was a glorious creature, whose roundness was not plumpness and whose slenderness was not thinness. Her luxurious brown hair was uncovered. She walked in Indian moccasins with the springy ease of a frontiersman.

Her big, dark eyes were turned on young Amidon with flattering attention. In their depths was an unconscious and pitiful revelation of her heart.

They paused a moment by the rude steps.

"We are going down to the falls," said the lawyer. "I want to explain to Miss Therese what our company means to do here. Why, M. Lecoeur, the country above is a natural reservoir. A dam will furnish power to light every town within a hundred miles of here and run the mills besides."

He turned to Therese as he finished as one turns to a friend who comprehends. But there was nothing in his look or his manner but impersonal enthusiasm; no hint that he was conscious of her sex or of her loveliness.

"Your company is rich, M. Amidon?" queried the landlord.

A smile came to the lawyer's boyish face.

"They have barrels of it," he replied.

Mme. Lecoeur turned to her husband when the young people had gone on.

"You see, you see?" she demanded. "She cannot get enough of looking at him. And he—his head is full of dams and electric lights and mills. Tchk—men!"

"My daughter," she continued, "is worthy of any man in the land. She has graduated from the Grayling high school. She can bake and sweep and sew. She is as merry as a robin. She can walk from here to Tahquemena in four hours, and it is twenty miles.

"She has taste, too, Frederic—a taste she did not inherit from the Lecoeurs. Faith, no.

"She has the high heeled, small shoes and a gown no bigger around than your trousers leg—great, fat—oaf! She has even been three times to Bay City. She is as innocent and unspoiled as a babe. Why does he not see?"

She had spoken rapidly in French. Her husband removed his pipe in order to shake his head slowly.

"I will tell you why he does not see," she said, switching to English to answer her own question. "He has had no time but to bargain and plan and buy the land.

"If he could stay here for two weeks more, with his mind free of business, he could not help loving her. But he will go without seeing or speaking, and it will kill her."

She sighed wistfully. "If he would but fall sick. She is a splendid nurse."

They turned guiltily at a sound behind in the doorway, but at sight of the queer face looking down at them Mme. Lecoeur spoke relievedly. "Oh, Oodles! It is you!"

Oodles Nanner was one of "God's innocents," a silent young half wit who roamed the wilderness, flitting here and there as the errant fancy took him. The door of every settler from the straits to Saginaw bay was open to him. No one dreamed of charging him for food and lodging.

But he paid in his own way nevertheless. He was a mighty hunter. He always carried a rifle, and his aim was of the deadliest. Birds and squirrels and deer in season he brought to the homes of his friends.

Now the wide, thin, upturned mouth was doleful; the small blue eyes were dull.

"You heard, Oodles?"

Mme. Lecoeur and all of Pere Chene knew that he loved Therese, as the dog loves his mistress, with a dumb love that asks nothing but the privilege to serve.

The half wit nodded.

"Yes," he murmured. "Sorry—sorry." He looked to the north after Therese and Amidon.

"Where to, Oodles?"

Frederic had noted that he carried rifle and pack.

"Tahquema—south."

Without another word or look he turned toward the blue hills. Soon he disappeared in the scrub at the end of the street.

When the village had been shut off by tag alders and bushes Oodles' long strides shortened. Unconsciously he [illegible] He stood for several minutes in an indecision that was painful. His lips moved soundlessly.

Evidently it was a time of intense mental agitation, for the sweat burst out on his forehead, and his hands clinched until the knuckles showed white through the brown skin, and the tendons in his wrists drew like cords.

At last a resolution was reached. Heading west, he began to run swiftly, but with great caution.

He slipped through the brush like a wild thing. His face took on a new expression—queer and terrible.

As he ran he bore to the north in a half circle. Presently he came out on a little knoll, threw himself flat in the long grass and peered between the trunks of a clump of jack pines.

Yes, there they stood on the bank of the river, near the rapids. The lawyer, his face alight, was pointing as he explained the plans of his company to Therese.

The girl was looking up at her companion. Even at that distance the half wit read the unconscious pathos of her attitude.

With swift fierceness he drew the rifle to his shoulder, sighted carefully and fired.

Therese's scream echoed high above the bur of the rapids. The half wit ran away, more like a wild thing than ever.

* * * * * * *

Therese and her lover, who was also her husband, stood on the porch of the Lecoeur house in the gloaming. Her dark eyes were pools of brooding happiness.

The man, mimicking a shy schoolboy, edged over and took her hand. She laughed and leaned against him.

"It's good to be here," he said.

"Do you know what day it is?"

He looked down at her, eyes round with recollection.

"By Jove!" he cried. "It's just a year—a year ago today."

She nodded. They were silent a moment, and then he went on:

"If it hadn't been for that I'd never have discovered how much I cared. I was going away without a word to you. Think of that!

"But you hadn't finished binding me up before I was crazy about you, and the longer you nursed me the more I loved you."

His arm went round her.

She nestled against him and sighed contentedly.

"The chap who did it was a marksman," he continued. "There I was, gesticulating like Mark Antony, and along comes a bullet and breaks my arm—snip—like that. I wonder who it was?

"I'd like to know so I could thank him. The fellow did me a good turn."

She shuddered a little.

"I was frightened—at first. But it did come out all right, didn't it?"

"It certainly did," returned Amidon. "And now let's talk of something more serious. Kiss me," he said severely.

A chuckle came from the doorway behind, and they turned guiltily, like children.

"Oh," said Therese, relieved, "it's only Oodles!"

INDIAN HOSPITALITY.

A Brand of Their Own, Not "Stingy Like the White Man."

The early experiences of the white practitioner among reservation Indians make a chapter of encounters with aboriginal prejudice not wholly finished. Even his own life was not safe if the doctor ventured too near the borderland of prejudice, and if a death occurred at the beginning of his practice he was likely to be avoided for the rest of his sojourn. Many an Indian came for the first dose and was never seen or heard of afterward—whether death or distaste was the result of his visit the doctor might never know. Or an entire bottle of cough sirup would be consumed at once, on the theory that if a teaspoonful was good a bottleful would be better.

The constant hospitality practiced by Indians, and the custom of sharing the last crumb, is a phase of the food question difficult to be appreciated by whites. As long as an Indian has any subsistence, his neighbors and friends come a-visiting, to remain as long as the food holds out. To be inhospitable or "stingy like the white man" is an opprobrium which only the hardiest Indian can socially survive. This Indian virtue bars the way to an equalization of any distribution of food, and is the cause of many of those cases of "Indians starving."—Southern Workman.

Congressman Fred S. Jackson, Embodiment of "Kansas Spirit"

CONGRESSMAN FRED S. JACKSON of Kansas typifies the state. He represents the best that Kansas has produced. He is the embodiment of the "Kansas spirit." He is the man who hushed forever the insinuation, "You can get anything you want in Kansas." He made the laws of that state mean just what they say, and, in a sense, that justifies the use of the term. It is universally conceded now that Kansas is "dry." Fred Jackson believes in his state, in her people, in law and the order that law is intended to promote everywhere. There are thousands of people in the Sunflower State who are looking toward the day when Jackson will be their governor, because not all the work that requires strong, red blooded men has been completed in that famous western state.

CONGRESSMAN FRED S. JACKSON.

On the afternoon of the sixth day of the Lincoln Chautauquas he will discuss the subject, "You, I and Uncle Sam," which is merely another way of saying "government by the people." In the evening he will answer the widely asked question, "What Is the Kansas Spirit?" Both events are exceptionally important because in each case a man of unusual qualifications and spirit is to discuss a subject that involves the happiness and success of every person under the stars and stripes. But, withal, Mr. Jackson's remarks will not be made in the spirit of the politician nor yet in the cold manner of the philosopher. He is a gripping, interesting, delightful speaker who makes his subject as live as the people who hear him. An hour is but a moment in length when Jackson is on the platform in the Chautauqua tent.

Chinese Immigration Scandal Is Unearthed.

TONG SOCIETIES PAY BRIBES

Orientals in United States Through Underworld Politicians Able to Name Many Interpreters in Immigration Department—Young Chinamen Helped in as Sons of Merchants

PHILADELPHIA. — Conducting a country-wide investigation, the Bureau of Immigration has unearthed a Chinese immigration scandal which is assuming large proportions. So far the government's investigation has revealed the fact that the Chinese exclusion act to an amazing extent has been nullified by graft.

The On Leong Tong and the Hip Sing Tong gamblers, grafters, opium smugglers and vice promoters, who have established Chinatowns in every large city of the country through the connivance of grafting police, have also invaded the immigration service.

Tongs Name Interpreters.

Through such influence as the Tongs have been able to exert over tenderloin politicians, the Chinatown Tongs have named the Chinese interpreters of the Bureau of Immigration. Immigration of this kind has been at the mercy of the crooked interpreters in the pay of the Chinatown Tongs. Between the Chinatown Tongs and the interpreters they have managed to get into the government service, evidence has been manufactured freely to obtain the admittance of Chinese.

The Tongs are said to have paid a standard rate of $500 for every Chinaman smuggled in through the connivance of their interpreters, and the Chinamen brought into the country in this manner are in turn declared to have been turned over to the Tongs to work for them in a sort of bondage for a number of years to repay the Tong leaders for importing them.

Loophole in Exclusion Act.

The wiley Chinatown Tongs found a loophole in the Chinese exclusion act which made possible their recently discovered plot. The law permits minor sons of Chinese merchants to enter this country and join their parents. The Tongs therefore sent to China for young men. They were brought to Canada and the Canadian government was furnished with a $500 bond as required of every Chinaman entering the Dominion. Traveling east through Canada, the imported Chinese laborer would reach a point in Michigan or New York when they would claim the right to enter the United States as the minor sons of some Chinatown grafter in one of the larger eastern cities. A Chinatown Tong member, posing as a merchant, would appear as the father of the imported Chinaman and the Chinese interpreter would establish the alleged parentage to the full satisfaction of the immigration officials.

Joe Lee, Chinese interpreter, connected with the federal immigration office in Philadelphia, has been suspended and his brother and six Chinamen have been arrested in Saginaw, Mich., on the charge of having been interested in the smuggling trade. So far thirteen Chinamen, imported as "sons" of merchants in Philadelphia's Chinatown, have also been arrested.

F. M. Gunter Knocks Hat Off Harber Master at Christiana.

LONDON, ENG.—The Times Christiana correspondent says: "The reports of a deplorable incident involving an American diplomat are eclipsing public interest in the great international regatta here.

"It appears that the American steam yacht Pauline, belonging to a Mr. McCullough, defied the harbor master's orders to change its anchorage, the space where it lay being reserved for the German emperor's sailing yacht Meteor. Notice had been given some days ago but F. M. Gunther, secretary of the American legation, who was a guest on board the Pauline, abused the harbor master violently when the latter made his request and ended by knocking his cap from his head. The diplomatist in question is likely to be recalled."

Directors Expect Attorney General to Proceed With Suit.

WASHINGTON — A series of conferences between Attorney General McReynolds and a committee of the New Haven directors failed to bring about any change in the determination of the government to file an anti-trust suit against the railroad.

Late in the afternoon President Eustis issued a statement in which he said that the directors had found it impossible to yield to the restrictions placed by the Massachusetts legislature upon the sale of its Boston and Maine stock and that he expected the attorney general would proceed to file a suit.

Representative Britton Introduces Bill to Abolish Plucking Board.

WASHINGTON — A bill providing for a merit system in the navy, which will abolish the "plucking board" and make both promotion and retirement dependent upon an officer's record and standing under examination, was introduced by Representative Britten of Chicago. Mr. Britten has steadily waged war upon the "plucking board" system, which, he asserts, has resulted in the retirement of many able men.

He also introduced a bill providing for the reinstatement of Captain Frank K. Hill, who was retired by the "plucking board" July 1. Captain Hill will appear before the committee on naval affairs Monday.

VILLA EXECUTES

French Charge Rushes to See President Wilson.

EUROPE'S ATTITUDE FORECAST

Two of Clergy Killed at Zacatecas Were French Subjects as Were Many Imprisoned—Huerta's Regime is Divided Into Sheep and Goats at Washington.

WASHINGTON — An indication of what will be the attitude of Europe in the final day of reckoning in Mexico was had here when Charge Clausse of the French embassy arrived in Washington from the summer embassy and insisted on seeing President Wilson in regard to the killing of two French priests at Zacatecas, supposedly by General Villa.

The French charge called also at the state department on his arrival and informed the secretary that his government required him to see President Wilson.

Action of Serious Import.

It is unusual for a charge d' affairs to ask for access to the ppresident, a privilege supposedly only accorded to ambassadors except on extraordinary occasions. Similarly the promptness with which the French government is moving in the matter led to the conclusion here that the Paris authorities intend to insist on arrangements being made for immediate reparation.

The killing of the two priests occurred immediately after the capture of Zacatecas by General Villa. The men killed were members of the Order of Christian Brothers. Eleven other members of the order were thrown into prison at Zacatecas.

The state department has made frequent representations to the constitutionalists regarding their treatment of members of the Catholic church and the church property, but has received little satisfaction. It is believed the treatment of the clergymen by the constitutionalists particularly in Mexico City will constitute one of the gravest problems facing the Washington government in regard to the Mexico situation.

Huerta Had Good Days.

It has become known that the administration has divided Huerta's acts into the sheep and the goats. It will not consider legal any act of the Huerta government committed after Oct. 10, which was the day on which President Huerta imprisoned the Maderista members of congress and assumed to himself practically dictatorial powers. It will not raise any objections to the constitutionalists repudiating such of Huerta's acts as were committed after Oct. 10.

It is understood, however, that this attitude of the United States will affect the general situation regarding foreign interests but little, as Huerta had practically no dealings with Europeans after last fall. The foreign loans and other obligations undertaken by the Huerta government were all concluded before Oct. 10, according to records here.

Student Drowns at Camp.

LUDINGTON, MICH. — David M. Barrow of Lexington, Ky., student military camp, Lincoln Fields, was drowned while canoeing on Lake Michigan.

Barrow, in company with another student named Edward Leavenworth, went out at 4 o'clock. The lake was rough and the boys capsized two miles out. Leavenworth, a strong swimmer, swam ashore, leaving Barrow clinging to the canoe. Help was sent at once, but the canoe came in without the boy. Life savers dragged for the body and have begun to patrol the beach.

BRIBERY IS CHARGED IN RAILROAD DEAL

Prosecutor Is Ready in Case Against Detroit Alderman.

DETROIT — Alderman Thomas B. Glinnan is face to face with most of the men whose testimony the prosecution will use in an effort to convict him of having accepted a $1,000 bribe two years ago in connection with the Wabash railroad deal, which resulted in the aldermanic "graft" scandal.

Prosecuting Attorney Frazer has subpoenaed all the state's fifteen witnesses to appear and, with the exception of Andrew H. Green Jr., who is in Europe, and William J. Burns, the detective, who is now working on the Carman case in New York, the witnesses will probably all be in court.

Walter J. Burns, who posed under the name of Brennan as the representative of the Wabash railroad and was the agent in the deal which was the means of the alleged "graft," will also be on hand. Burns was in court Saturday for a few minutes and will be back again.

DETROIT PRIEST INHERITOR

Rev. Charles J. Hutter Among Heirs to $1,000,000 Estate.

DETROIT — One or more than a score who will share the million dollar estate of Karl Hutter, New York inventor who took his own life June 15, 1913, Rev. Charles J. Hutter, pastor of St. Anthony's Roman Catholic church, will receive an interest of $37,500 in his deceased uncle's business, according to word from New York.

Karl Hutter, who invented a porcelain bottle stopper used by many bottling concerns, was proprietor of the Hutter Porcelain company, at 241 Lafayette street, New York, and lived at 116 West Fifty-ninth street. He lay in a bath tub filled with water and sent a bullet into his brain.

SINK HOLE AGAIN MENACES

State Engineer to Inspect Soft Place in Eaton County Highway.

EATON RAPIDS, MICH. — The Grehe sink hole in Bellevue township, which has given that town a great amount of trouble for the past sixty years, by the roadway across it sinking out of sight, is again causing trouble, and this time State Engineer Cox, of Kalamazoo, has been called upon to give expert instructions as to filling up the place.

Thousands of dollars have been spent in an attempt to fill up the sink hole, and each time after the filling in, the road would sink under water within a few days or weeks, and become impassable.

BREWERIES IN DRY COUNTIES

Liquor Interests Said to Plan Attack on Local Option.

LANSING, MICH. — Intimations have reached Lansing that the next legislature would be called upon to tackle a bill allowing breweries to run in "dry" counties, but not to sell their produce except in "wet" counties.

The measure, it is said here, will be introduced by the brewing interests on their own hook, and there will be no affiliation with the other "wet" interests.

Raspberries Abundant.

EATON RAPIDS, MICH. — Although the raspberry season is not yet over, the fruit growers here have already harvested more fruit from their acreage than in any previous year.

BOYCOTTS ERIE ROAD; FIRM RESENTS KNOCK

President of Line Blamed Hard Times on Craze for Autos.

DETROIT, MICH. — When President Underwood of the Erie railroad company arrived at Milwaukee he said in an interview which has received widespread publicity that he blamed the moving picture shows and what he termed the "automobile craze" for the hard times experienced in some sections of the country of late.

Some of the local automobile manufacturers are taking exception to Mr. Underwood's view of the situation.

The Abbott Motor Car company has issued an order to its traffic department that "from now on and until further notice all freight and express shipments shall be routed by the way of lines other than those of the Erie Railroad company."

FOREST FIRE VICTIMS MEET

DETROIT — Former residents of Oscoda and Au Sable, towns destroyed by forest fires two years ago, gathered 1,000 strong at the athletic pavilion on Belle Isle, for the purpose of organizing a permanent association representing the ill fated cities.

It was decided to hold semi-annual meetings and the following officers were elected: President, Harry Solomon; secretary, John Eagan; treasurer, John Doyle. Charles E. Pelton, vice president of the Crescent Brass & Pin Co., presided at the meeting.

SUNDAY AUTO MEET STOPPED

Protest of Thirty Ministers at Calumet Postpones Track Meet.

CALUMET, MICH. — The concerted uprising of thirty preachers and their threat to complain to Governor Ferris resulted in Sheriff Cruse and Prosecutor Lucas forbidding the holding of the automobile races in which such noted pilots as Louis Disbrow, Johnny Raimey, Fred Horey, Eddie Hearne and Elmer MacDonald were to participate at Laurium track yesterday.

The races have been postponed until Wednesday next.

The case against him was dismissed for lack of evidence.

FLINT BOY IS HIT BY AUTO

Harold Moran Run Down and Perhaps Fatally Hurt.

FLINT, MICH. — Harold W. Moran, a thirteen-year-old youth, of Flint, was struck by a heavy touring car.

F. P. Alexander turned out to pass a D. U. R. car when the Moran boy who was going the opposite way turned out, too. The auto's wheels passed over his abdomen.

No Place For Ladies.

A famous foreign newspaper correspondent, a German, was stopping at a seaside hotel where the dining room helpers, following the New England custom, were nearly all college girls, working during vacation in order to keep themselves at school the rest of the year.

The spectacled young person who presided over the table where the German newspaper man ate was undoubtedly of excellent breeding, but she never seemed to remember whether the eggs were to be fried on one side or scrambled on both.

Finally, one evening after he had been served with a meal entirely different from the one he had ordered, the foreigner lost his temper and spoke rather sharply to the young woman.

"Easy there!" admonished his table mate, an American writer. "She's a lady, you know, old man."

"But I do not vant a lady," said the German plaintively. "I vant a waiter!" —Saturday Evening Post.

The Ax In the Glacier.

Zurbiggen, one of the celebrated mountain climbers of the world, in scaling a peak of Les Anglaises, near Chamonix, accidentally let his ice ax fall from near the summit of the peak. It fell some thousands of feet. In the normal course of things it was buried in snow and swallowed up in the glacier, being covered deeper and deeper each year, and at the same time being carried slowly downward as the ice flowed on. Seven or eight years afterward Hon. C. G. Gruce and Harkbir, a sepoy chief, in descending a peak in the Alps just as night was falling and a great crevasse barred the way, being unable to find the bridge over it, cut a path down to the bottom, where Harkbir stepped on an ax which had "M. Z.," Zurbiggen's initials, on the handle. There could be no mistake as to the identity of the ax, as Harkbir had seen it and used it before.—Christian Herald.

A Heroic Slave.

There was a humble slave in the palace of the Caliph Haroun al Raschid. The caliph had in his audience chamber twenty rare vases, and it was written in the laws of Bagdad that he who should have the misfortune to break one of these would pay the penalty with his life. This slave one day broke a vase. He was instantly seized, tried and condemned to death. But the caliph had no sooner pronounced sentence on him than the slave turned, and, walking calmly to the other nineteen vases, with one sweep of the arm destroyed them all.

"Wretch," the caliph thundered, "why have you done that barbarous deed?"

"To save the lives of nineteen of my fellow countrymen," the doomed slave replied.

A Fashion Garrick Killed.

Women of England in the eighteenth century wore large hats. Samuel Rogers once traveled to Ranelagh in the same coach with a woman who was compelled to sit on a stool on the floor of the coach on account of the inconvenient height of her headdress. Hannah More, who was all for simplicity in costume, writes in her diary that she has seen women wearing on their heads "an acre and a half of shrubbery, besides slopes, grass plats tulip beds, clumps of peonies, kitchen gardens and greenhouses." The credit of killing this fashion is given to Garrick. He appeared one night on the stage with a mass of vegetables on his head and a carrot suspended from each side, to the shame and confusion of many fair members of his audience.

Artillery.

Until the time of Charles XII. of Sweden the artillery was not considered a part of the army. The men serving in it were not soldiers, but regarded as mechanics. The officers had no army rank. Charles XII. gave artillery officers a rank and regularly organized the artillery into companies. The battle of Pavia demonstrated the superiority of the gun in the hands of the Spanish infantry. The musket carried a two ounce ball and sometimes brought down at one fire two or three mailed knights. The French sent a flag of truce to remonstrate against the use of such barbarous weapons.

The Colossus of Rhodes.

The gigantic Colossus of Rhodes was one of the seven wonders of the world. It was erected in honor of the sun by Chares of Lindus, a disciple of Lysippus, and was thrown down by an earthquake about 224 B. C. The figure stood upon two moles, a leg extended on each side of the harbor. A winding staircase led to the top of the figure, from out of the eyes of which were visible the coast of Syria and the ships sailing on the coast of Egypt. The colossi were the peculiar characteristic of eastern art and were of common occurrence, many of them being over sixty feet in height. The most celebrated is the statue of Memnos, on the plain of Thebes, described by the historian Strabo.

Widows' Caps.

The widow's cap is a survival of an old Roman custom. Widows were obliged to wear their weeds for ten months, and the bereaved woman shaved her head as a token of mourning. Naturally the widow could not very well appear in public with a bald head, so dainty caps were made in order to hide the disfigurement. The cap still remains, though the immediate necessity for its existence has long passed away.—Pearson's Weekly.

Faulty English.

A slipshod use of English has been a favorite charge against American writers by their English cousins. The latest accusation is that we have gone so far as to force the English themselves to use our slang. But Dr. Rossiter Johnson has no difficulty in showing that even classic English writers are guilty of clumsy and incorrect usages. If this is the case with makers of English in the slow and careful process of book writing the critic should not be quite so captious concerning the slangy or faulty English that creeps into the American newspaper and periodical produced under a degree of pressure entirely foreign to a writer of books. Dr. Johnson ranges over the field of literature and shows by striking examples how Macaulay, Ruskin, De Quincey, Tennyson, Lecky, Thackeray, Hallam and many others have split their infinitives, separated verbs by modifying words put in the wrong place and dotted their writing with various awkward, ill contrived and ambiguous expressions.—Leslie's.

Marvelous Coincidence.

The following story was told by a famous New York wit recently: A party of skaters were once progressing at considerable speed down a certain frozen river in Canada when, to the horror of his companions, one of the party was seen to skate straight into a hole in the ice. Before he could stop himself he had fallen through it, and the sharp edge of the ice cut his head clean off his shoulders. The speed at which he was going, however, caused his head to skim along the top of the ice, while the rest of his body traveled at an equal speed beneath it, until, by a stroke of good luck, the severed portions met at another hole farther down and joined so exactly that the unfortunate man came out of his accident with nothing worse than a severe cold. —London Strand.

A Nabob.

"Rich as a nabob," is an expression not infrequently heard, but why a "nabob" should thus be associated with wealth and who he was precisely is not so generally known. Under the great moguls the provinces of India were administered by deputies known by the designation of "nawab," who commonly amassed much money and lived in great splendor. The office and the title continued under British rule in the orient, but gradually the word became corrupted into "nabob" and was applied generally to all natives who had grown rich. More latterly it was bestowed—often in a derisive sense—upon Europeans who, having made large fortunes in India, returned home and spent their money in a luxurious and ostentatious way.—London

JULIA A. SNELL

Wednesday morning the many friends of Miss Julia Anna Snell were shocked to receive word of her sudden death, from heart failure, at her home in Washington, D. C.

Miss Snell who was born in Tecumseh, October 30., 1863, was the daughter of Hiram J. and Elizabeth Snell.

She received her education in Tecumseh schools and graduated in the class of '80. For several years after graduation she taught in the Jackson and Grand Rapids, and twenty six years ago, she received an appointment to a position in the office of The Comptroller of Currency in Washington, D. C., which position she held at the time of her death July 19th, 1914.

Miss Snell left a sister, Mrs. James Murray of Washington, D. C and a brother, Mr. H. H. Snell of Birmingham, Ala., and a wide circle of friend to whom the loss of a sister or a friend will be irreparable, for Miss Snell by her many qualities of mind and heart that go to make the perfect woman, endeared herself to all who had the privilege of her friendship and acquaintance.

The simple and impressive Episcopal Service was rendered by Dean Channer of Adrian.

FIRE

A disastrous fire was discovered Wednesday afternoon in the barn of John Bushrow, northwest of town. The barn and contents including 50 tons of hay were totally destroyed. This was a new building and the men had been working on it through the day putting on lightning rods The origin of the fire is unknown. The barn and contents were insured for $1200.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT.

It was the old story of the lion and the mouse when Hayden's Big "Six" and Charlie Jones' little Saxon came in collision last night.

The accident accurred about 9:30 halfway between Tecumseh and Clinton. Hayden's car was going toward Clinton and Jones' car coming from. Both cars swung to the right, evidently meaning to give plenty of room in passing, but for reasons unknown Briggs who was driving the Saxon car became confused and swung his car in front of the Hayden car, but was turning his car from the danger, when the big '6' struck it. No one was hurt but both cars were badly damaged.

We clip the following from the Adrian Telegram of July 23, 1914, as Dr. Tom Miller, Jr. has many friends here who will extend congratulations. "Cards are out announcing the marriage of Dr. Thomas Miller, Jr. of Washington, D. C., a nephew of J. F. Miller and a visitor here frequently to Ouida Taylor, a Washington girl. The marriage occured Monday, Dr. and Mrs. Miller, following a trip up the St. Lawrence and into Canada will visit their Adrian relatives. Dr. Miller graduated in medicine this year."

Yes, Yes!

A girl with a face as pretty as a picture may be spoiled by an ugly frame of mind.

COST OF STREET LIGHTING IN TECUMSEH

About the first of June of this year the Tecumseh Electric Co. had finished the installation of Mazda lights in all the lamps being used for lighting purposes on the streets of Tecumseh. This completed one of the terms entered into by a contract with the village of Tecumseh last spring. The books of the Village Clerk show that in June 1913 there was paid out of the funds of the Village Treasury for street lighting exclusive of the ornimental post lighting the sum of $334.55 for the same month 1914 there was paid $257.00 which represents a saving to the Village the sum of $77.55 or an amount equal to a sum of $900 per aunun.

The latest connundrum—If the Adrian base ball club are compelled to hire a $50 pitcher and catcher every time they play a match game, how long will it take to drain their exchequer.

ADRIAN VS. TECUMSEH

Last week was rather an eventful one for Tecumseh. On Thursday we had old John Robinson's circus, and on Friday occurred the return base ball game between the Adrian and Tecumseh clubs. Below is the score, which will show the run of the game:

ADRIAN	R	O
Navin 1 b	1	4
Clark 2 b	2	2
Preston p	0	4
Keenan l f	1	3
Dodge 3 b	0	5
Hall c f	1	2
Murphy c	2	2
Reynolds s s	2	2
Hanler r f	1	3
	10	27

TECUMSEH	R	O
Burton 3 b	0	4
Nivermore s s	2	3
Bostwick 2 b	2	2
Root 1 b	0	3
McKinney l f	1	2
Freeman p	0	4
Rosacrans c f	0	4
Tray c	0	2
Anderson r f	0	3
	5	29

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Tecumseh	2	0	0	0	0	0	1	2	0	—5

Although the result was different than the boys had anticipated, they have no reason to feel chagrined over it They did not expect to meet a picked club from Adrian and Chicago. How the result was a criterion whatever of the comparative merits of the Tecumseh and Adrian boys we cannot see. That question will have to be decided by another game.

A young lady connected with the Herald office was made the stake holder of a one dollar bet on the base ball game. Last Friday after the game she relieved the parties of all further trouble and annoyance by appropriating the money herself and donating it to the Sunday School fund. She took it for granted that the parties who bet were anxious to part with their money and hence she thought best to devote it to some good use.

Heesen Bros. & Co have lately shipped a large batch of their celebrated Wolverine Hog Ringers to Higo, Ireland. They propose to follow the example of the Tecumseh Millers and start a direct trade to the old country.

The Tecumseh boys say they are willing it pit nine men against nine, but nine against ten is a game they hadn't counted on.

The native members of the Adrian baseball club are very fair players but it is astonishing what an impetus a little foreign pitching gives them In the Adrian base ball market the duty on imports has reached $50 a man with an upward tendancy.

A match game between the Saline and Tecumseh clubs was played on our grounds yesterday and resulted in a victory for the Tecumseh boys The Saline boys are fine young men, and they have good material for a club, but they lack practice. Practice boys, practice

Drs. I. S. Hamilton and L. G. North have formed a business co-partnership in the practise of medicine and have opened an office in the rooms over Wimple's Shoe store. Dr. Hamilton is now the oldest practitioner in Tecumseh, and Dr. North has already gained a very creditable position in his profession, we have no doubt they will receive a large practice. Their professional card appears elsewhere.

FELL FROM A TREE

Perry Lampkin met with quite a severe accident last Monday. He was standing on the top of a long ladder picking cherries at his home when the limb broke on which the ladder rested and he was thrown to the ground striking his back, painful His wife and mother heard his groans and ran to his assistance finding him rolling on the ground in great agony and were frightened fearing he was nearly killed but managed to get him to the house and telephoned Dr Conklin. He foundno bones broken but suffering greatly. He paid him three visits before he seemed much better but by his aid and the good care given him isdoing as well as can be expected.

STACY MEMORIAL APPROACH FOR BROOKSIDE CEMETERY

As announced in the colums of this paper the late Gertrude A. Stacy in her will set aside funds for the erection of a granite approach to be placed at the entrance of Brookside Cemetery to be the gift to the people of Tecumseh from herself and husband, George N. Stacy.

For some months past her executrix; Mrs. Frank S. Turner has been working on plans for this approach and she takes pleasure in announcing that the contract has been let to the Harrison Granite Company of New York for a $4,000.00 approach to be erected early next spring.

A representative of the Harrison Co., Mr. George Simpson of Detroit was in town a few days ago and the papers closing the deal were signed.

The material used in this approach will be the best grade of Barry Granite, It will be 40 feet long and will consist of an arch or gateway which will have a span of 14 feet and two small entrances on either side of the gateway. The construction will be massive, only large blocks of granite being used. One solid piece of granite 21 feet long will span the archway and four massive colums will help support it, two on each side of the entrance.

Mrs. Turner, Mr. Simpson and the Cemetery Board visited the cemetery a few days ago to take up the matter of location The approach will probably be located at the south end of the cemetery not far from the small gate and will be set in a diagonal position.

A wide driveway leading from the roadway through the approach will connect with the main drive inside the cemetery. In locating the approach at this place it will be plainly seen as you approach the cemetery from the south.

Mr. Harrison, together with an expert landscape man will be here probably the latter part of August to locate the entrance, and at this time the concrete work to be used as a foundation will be put in. As soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring the work of erection will be started and it is hoped to have it all completed by Decoration Day.

TECUMSEH BUSINESS MEN TOUR THE COUNTY IN THE INTEREST OF THE CHAUTAUQUA.

Tecumseh business men 85 strong accompanied by a band numbering about 20 pieces, left town about 9:30 Wednesday morning with 18 autos in line. Each auto was numbered showing its position in line and these positions were maintained during the trip, thus avoiding any confusion. The automobiles were all decorated with Chautauqua signs a few were also decorated with bunting and flags. The band played several pieces before leaving Tecumseh.

The first stop on the trip was Tipton, then Clinton, Macon, Ridgeway, Britton, Cone, Mooreville, Milan, Saline, Bridgewater and Pleasant Lake. At each place the band played two numbers. At Saline where a longer stop was made, they gave a concert in front of the hotel. At Pleasant Lake a chicken supper was enjoyed. This manner of advertizing the Chautauqua was very effective and many favorable comments were heard at the various places where the stops were made

'Billy' Fisher was the clown and kept the crowd in good humor and had no end of fun himself. Banker Temple relieved them of all the money couldn't carry. Dr. Hendershott took care of all the broken bones and cured the various ills. Barrett Bros. looked after the feed. Officer Smith watched close to see that the law was being enforced and Dr. Hartzog took a fatherly interest in every one.

It was a hot dusty ride, but every one seemed to enjoy it and no doubt it will result in much good for the coming Chautauqua.

Twenty autos, about eighty men and a band from Tecumseh visited Milan yesterday, they being the business men of that town out for a day's automobile tour and to advertise their coming Chautauqua. They had made previous arrangements and partook of fish dinner at Chas. Schmitt & Son's Cafe.—Milan Leader

Twenty auto loads of boosters, including a band, were over from Tecumseh Wednesday afternoon, advertizing their chautauqua. The band played several fine selections on the lawn in front of The Tavern and succeeded in attracting quite and audience. From here the party went to Pleasant Lake, where they took supper.—Saline Observer.

Don't forget the horse races tomorrow

Tickets for the Chautauqua are now on sale You will find them at the banks and business houses along the street or in the hands of any of the ticket selling committee. Remember the price for the entire course is only $1.50 for adults and $1.00 for children between the age of 8 and 15 years. You can't afford to miss the chautauqua The committies in charge are striving to make this a great success. You can help by buying a season ticket for yourself and family.

MAN WHO MURDERS THE "BLUES" COMING

Irishman Peddling Comforts of Fun, Good Cheer, Happiness, on Chautauqua Program.

PHILOSOPHY, FACT, HUMOR.

"A truly cheerful lecture was heard last night by a laughing audience from Mr. Thomas McClary at the Y. M. C. A. The lecturer spoke for two hours on the ministry of mirth and the gospel of cheerfulness and never allowed a dull moment to cloud his uninterrupted flow of humorous yet instructive words," says the Saskatoon Phoenix, 1914.

"The ministry of mirth, said the lecturer, helped to produce good health; beauty aided men and women over the hard places in life and was the best possible advertisement and business getter. By thinking they were sick, people were doing the very thing to bring on sickness. 'Be cheerful; happiness is a great magnet. People will pay to be made happy, but never a five cent piece will they part with to be made miserable.'

"An atmosphere of friendly good humor radiated from Mr. McClary, and his jokes had a humor all their own in the way they were told. One of the best proofs of insanity is the inability to laugh."

Mr. McClary will appear on the Lincoln Chautauqua program in this city on the first day, afternoon and night His prelude will be played by the University Players, a seven piece orchestra.

YOU'VE GOT TO SHOW ME SPIRIT

The Price Concert Company gave most excellent satisfaction to an audience of 1,500 who came in the Missouri spirit of "You've got to show me." They render a unique, versatile, popular and more than satisfactory program. We want the Price Concert Company for a return date Lafayette Bliss, Superintendent Independent School District, Virginia, Minn.

More Wheat

and better can be raised to the acre if a good commercial fertilizer is used. The reason is apparent. Every pound of milk, butter, live stock, grain or vegetables that is sold from the farm removes just that much from the soil. When you sell more plant food from the soil than you put back, there is but one result—poor land, poor crops.

Darling's Fertilizer

is an Animal Matter Fertilizer and will return this lost plant food. This returned energy will produce big, healthy straw and grain and repay the investment many times over on the wheat alone, to say nothing of the lasting effect on the following crops. Get your supply of us and watch results.

Motor Driving In Germany.

It is an astonishing fact that a blind man may drive a motorcar in the United Kingdom. Any one who has a driving license, which can be obtained on the payment of 5 shillings without any test of qualification, is entitled to drive a car whether he is able to do so or not.

The German method is in strong contrast to that of England. If a German wishes to drive a motorcar he must first take out a one-month's tuition license, which permits him to learn to drive. At the end of the month he is taken into the heart of a large city and, with an official by his side, is made to drive in and out of the traffic.

One little slip, a slight hesitation in slowing up, and back he is put for another month of tuition. There are many cases in which even three months' tuition is insisted on, and there are others in which licenses are refused altogether. The result of this is that the accident percentage in Berlin is only half that of London.—Manchester News.

Beginning Early.

With the following story Margaret's father supports his opinion that adroitness is congenital in women:

One Saturday Margaret, aged four, was in deep disgrace. Four times since 2 o'clock she had run away to visit Mrs. Gilbert, her favorite neighbor, and was now paying for her crimes by detention in the house.

At 5 her father returned and sat on the porch reading his evening paper. To him in a few minutes Margaret sauntered out, her mind intent on carrying out her plans, and shortly suggested:

"Daddy, let's play you are the baby, and I am the mother."

Daddy agreed on condition that it must be a very little baby and one that would not be expected to move.

Thereupon Margaret, after a silence in which one could hear her brain currents crackle, said, "Now, honey, you be a good little baby and don't run away, while mother for a little while goes over to Mrs. Gilbert's."—New York Tribune.

Not the First.

Pat was servant of a farmer, and in his charge was a donkey, which was kept to amuse his employer's children. The donkey was following the farmer's wife round the yard one day, and the farmer, turning to Pat, said:

"I think that donkey is taking a liking to my wife."

"Och," said Pat, "shure, and it's not the first donkey that's took a liking to her, sir."—Exch

A Round Trip.

The attorney for a street railroad company in a Kentucky town was examining a skinny sixteen-year-old negro boy who had sued for injuries ostensibly incurred in a collision on the highway.

"You say," he asked, "that when this street car hit that wagon you were riding on the front seat of the wagon?"

"Dat's whut I said," answered the little darky.

"And you say the force of the blow knocked you up in the air?"

"Yas, suh—'way up in de air."

"Well, how long did you stay up there?" demanded the attorney.

"Not no longer dan it tuck me to git down!" answered the truthful complainant promptly.—Saturday Evening Post.

Rays From a Searchlight.

The paths traversed by rays from a searchlight depend on the form of curvature of the mirror. If flat, the paths of reflected rays would be the same as those of the rays received; if the arc of a circle, the rays will be reflected to one bright focus. To have a band of parallel rays leave the mirror it must be the arc of a parabola. Then straight rays will be reflected all parallel to each other. In air, the intensity of this beam of light would diminish, but in absolute vacuum would be as intense at any distance.—New York American.

LOST HIS BAROMETER.

Count Zeppelin Says General Butterfield Sneaked It Away.

Count Zeppelin, the inventor of the dirigible balloon, is not a stranger to the United States, for he saw service with the Union army in the war between the states. In his recently published reminiscences he tells this amusing story of General Butterfield, who was chief of staff in the Army of the Potomac:

In planning operations General Butterfield attached special significance to knowledge of the probable weather conditions, and for this reason he became especially fond of an excellent aneroid barometer that I had obtained from London and paid a lot of money for.

He saw this instrument in my tent, borrowed it from me, then found it impossible to give it up. He kept it a longer time each time he borrowed it until at last he failed to return it at all. When I was about to leave the army I asked him again and again to return it, and I finally became so pressing that he said he would go to his tent and fetch it out.

After waiting outside a long time I followed him into the tent. It was empty. With my barometer in his hand he had crawled under the canvas and disappeared.

Building to Please Everybody.

"Have you started to build your house yet?"

"No. We haven't quite decided what we want."

"You haven't? I thought you had that all planned out months ago."

"So we did, but Aunt Jane didn't like the living room, so we changed that to suit her, and Uncle Bill thought the porch ought to be different, and we changed that. Then Cousin Kate insisted that we'd never be satisfied without a music room, so we had to rearrange it to put that in, and my folks thought we ought to have a butler's pantry, and her folks were sure we couldn't get along without a room in the attic, and we're waiting now to learn what color an uncle in Honolulu thinks the roof ought to be."—Detroit Free Press.

Reading That Sticks.

An old lady, says the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, was discussing the differences between the old and the new. "We hadn't anything but the reading book to read when I was a girl," she said, "but I know the best parts of that so I can say them to myself now I'm sitting here in the dark, and my grandchildren don't know what they read last week! It soaked into me and it drips off of them." The editor concludes: "Not what drips off, but that which soaks in is of real importance, stays with the reader and affects and develops character."

Of Course He Swooned.

While the judge was giving his charge to the jury in the burglary case one of the jurymen fainted. His lordship had just impressively said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, in arriving at the verdict you must take the testimony of the witnesses for the defense into consideration and give them full weight."

At the words "and give them full weight" the juryman swooned away. He was a coal merchant.—London Mail.

LIFE TERM FOR BOND IN IDA LEEGSON CASE

Big Factor in Verdict Is Identification of Woman's Watch

CHICAGO — Isaac Bond was found guilty of the murder of Ida G. Leegson, art student and sculptress, by a jury in Judge McDonald's court. Punishment was fixed at life imprisonment.

Miss Leegson was lured to her death while seeking a position as a private nurse. Bond answered her advertisement, and Miss Leegson believed she was on her way to her place of employment at the time she was killed.

The conviction of Bond was obtained on circumstantial evidence. Witnesses for the prosecution identified him as the man whom they had seen in the company of the woman walking near and across the prairie. A pawnbroker also identified him as the man who pawned Miss Leegson's watch, which was stolen after she was slain, and it is said this watch was the main factor in determining the jury for conviction.

One of Greatest High Schools Due to Chautauquas' Influence

Township and Students Got Big "Hunch" as Celebrities Visited Community.

A town not very far away has the most celebrated high school in two states. Its equipment as well as its teaching force is the best that can be found. It has won thirteen inter-high school debates and has placed seventeen of its students in the honor class in as many leading universities of the nation within the past four years. It has produced some literature and much business service, which has been highly acceptable and well paid for. It has aroused its community to make many practical improvements such as playgrounds and other high privileges for children who otherwise could not have them. This school's interests in the political, social, religious and agricultural workings of the country are practically as keen as are its interests in the educational policies of the community. It is turning out scores of young people each year who know why and how it comes about that the economic and political influences of the east are waning, and these same influences in the middle west and far west are gradually increasing; who know why—quite distinctly why—they severally choose to farm or become merchants of one kind or another, or enter the professions, and when they choose to do these things they do so after they have made "surveys" and have given detailed attention to each of them.

It is a wonderful school. When the men who are responsible were asked recently how it all came to pass and the fact was uncovered that the school has scarcely any debt and that it turns thousands of dollars annually back into the treasury, the answer was, "It all came about through the activities of the Chautauqua people of this community. A few years ago they sent some wonderfully constructive and thoughtful men here who gave us the "hunch." We took it, and now we are just beginning to see what our possibilities are. The things we have done are not to be mentioned in comparison with the things we think we see how to do."

MARTIAL SPIRIT STIRS GERMANS

"What Will Russia Do?" Is Uppermost Question.

PAPER URGES CALM THOUGHT

Patriotic Scenes Continue in Berlin Suburban Visitors Remain in City —Government Issues Note Favoring Localizing Austria-Servian Trouble—Austria May March Tuesday.

Berlin, July 27.—All eyes in Germany are directed toward St. Petersburg. "What will Russia do?" is the question that was asked probably a million times with bated breath and hearts almost standing still in fear that the answer would mean the long dread war. This was the sole topic on Sunday in Berlin and all German cities and towns.

Wherever acquaintances or friends met the question was "Geht es les?" ("Will there be war?")

Patriotic Scenes Continue.

The scenes of Saturday night which, according to the newspapers, were patriotic ones such as have not been seen since the victorious days of 1870. They were continued until the early hours of the morning and were renewed Sunday. The city is in an atmosphere of suspense and suppressed emotions. These found an occasional vent in patriotic outbursts, but the general feeling was that the country is on the edge of a volcano. This feeling was intensified by the first war extra of the Iokal Anzeiger, which is known as the kaiser's paper, late in the afternoon. It was stated in this edition that private reports from St. Petersburg were so serious that the ppaper would not print them until they had been confirmed.

Berliners, who invariably leave the city on Sunday for the suburban resorts, remained at home waiting in suspense for news.

Germany Would Localize Trouble.

The government issued a note in the afternoon denying the reports printed in Paris and St. Petersburg papers which gave an incorrect statement as to Germany's position. The note reiterated the previous official statement that Germany considers the question wholly a matter between Austria and Servia and believes, therefore, that the conflict should remain localized. It added that Germany's entire efforts were in that direction for the purpose of maintaining the peace of Europe.

The newspapers, in commenting on the note, said it was a reiteration of the general understanding that Germany will only go to the assistance of Austria if a third power, meaning Russia, interferes.

Urges People to Keep Cool.

The Iokal Anzeiger in a later extra printed an evidently inspired leader which expressed appreciation of the wonderful loyal and patriotic spirit which the people have shown, but making an appeal to the people to "keep your blood cool and prove that you can maintain thoughtfulness, judgment, coolheadedness and dignity in grave and stormy hours." The paper urged the people to desist from their demonstrations, which it was declared, were senseless and useless and tactless and would only bring evil.

Won't March Before Tuesday.

KILLS FORMER WIFE'S BEAU

William Laughlin Shoots Thomas Ratcliff at Beardstown, Ill.

Jacksonville, Ill., July 27.—Angered because his divorced wife was going with Thomas Ratcliff, William Laughlin entered a saloon in Beardstown and shot Ratcliff three times, killing him. Laughlin and his son had been in Minnesota laying tile and just returned to Beardstown.

Laughlin was arrested. For fear of a mob he was taken to jail at Virginia.

Minister's Son Fined.

Evansville, Ind., July 27.—Van Reid, twenty-seven years old, who says he is a son of the Rev. James V. Reid of Enfield, Ill., was fined $10 and costs in the city court here for an alleged attempt to rob a friend in an immoral resort here the night before.

He Ought to Stay Put.

Battle Creek, Mich., July 27.—Arthur Lucas, who threatened to shoot his wife, will be returned to Jackson prison, from which he was paroled recently. Lucas has tried to kill his wife three times and was serving time for shooting her.

Seek Escaped Convicts in Chicago.

Chicago, July 25.—Deputy Warden William Walsh of the Joliet penitentiary visited the detective bureau and asked Captain Halpin to search for five "honor" convicts who have escaped. Two of the men—Joseph Smith and John Gromo—were sentenced from Cook county. The others are John Burke of McLean county, Louis Gavigan of Will county and Ole Oleson of McHenry county.

RATE RULING IS POSTPONED

Mistake in Statistics on Earnings of Roads Causes Delay.

Washington, July 25.—It developed that the reason why the interstate commerce commission did not hand down its decision in the 5 per cent rate cases this week was because an analysis of the increases determined on did not work out satisfactorily. It was found that there was a mistake in the statistics with regard to earnings for each ton mile and the level of the rates which had been furnished to the commission. These statistics related both to class and commodity rates. It has been necessary to get these exactly.

When they are obtained the commission will correct its decision and make it public.

GIRL IN OVERALLS ELOPES

Chester, Ill., July 27.—A girl, thought to be Irene Lienert, sixteen years old, who disappeared from her father's home in Grand Tower wearing overalls, was seen in Chester late Thursday evening, accompanied by a man about thirty years old. He borrowed a pair of scissors from a storekeeper in Lower Chester, with which he evidently cut off her hair, as the clippings were found next morning.

ORDER HELPS SMALL TOWNS

Utilities Commission Shows Discrimination in Railroad Case.

Springfield, Ill., July 27.—The state utilities commission has entered an order in the case of the Buchanan-Daly company of Joliet, ruling that it was discrimination for railroads to charge a higher rate for shipments to and from non-competitive points than from competitive points.

The order benefits the smaller communities of the state.

Bloomington, Ill., July 27.—Reports on the forward educational movement were made here at a meeting of Illinois Methodist college presidents. It was announced that subscriptions and bequests to the fund now aggregate $900,000. A mark of $1,250,000 has been set for Jan. 1, 1916.

DOVE OF PEACE COOS IN MEXICO

Representatives of Factions to Meet at Saltillo.

REBELS HAVE PRESS AGENT

He Declares That General Amnesty by General Carranza Is Impossible—Points to Threats of Diaz and Huerta to Return and Cause More Trouble.

Washington, July 27.—The state department expects that the arrangements for the transfer of the Mexican government to Carranza will be facilitated as a result of the coming conferences between representatives of Carranza and President Carbajal. According to the latest advices the conferences will be held at Saltillo, instead of at Tampico as was expected.

Will Meet at Saltillo.

Under the latest arrangement President Carbajal has instructed two delegates to proceed at once to Saltillo. Senor Cepeda, who left Vera Cruz from Tampico last week, will not figure in the conference, it is learned. He bears no plenary powers such as would be required under the circumstances and therefore could not speak authoritatively for President Carbajal.

The constitutionalist junta here has been greatly reduced by the departure of the majority of its members for points in Mexico. It has, however, taken on new life with the employment of a press agent and has a new spokesman in the person of Felicitos Villareal, sub-secretary of the treasury in the Carranza government.

Will Deny Universal Amnesty.

Villereal asserts positively that Carranza will not agree to any demand that may be made by President Carbajal for a general political amnesty in Mexico. He points out that the reported boast of General Felix Diaz in Toronto that he and Huerta would get together to lead a new revolution in Mexico is evidence of the lack of wisdom General Carranza would show if he declared a general amnesty.

ARMY WORM CAUSES LOSS OF $1,000,000

Michigan Farmers Suffer Heavily from Pest.

Detroit, Mich., July 27.—Losses totaling more than $1,000,000 have been sustained by Michigan farmers as the result of the army worm pest, according to an estimate made by Prof. Rufus H. Pettit, head of the department of entomology of the Michigan Agricultural college. He explained that he based his estimate on letters received from farmers in the affected districts.

"Although preventive methods are checking the deadly work of the pest, the crop loss is bound to be much greater before the worms are all killed off," said Professor Pettit.

WOODS' TACTICS PUT CANDIDATES IN AIR

Petition Form Still Mystery as Closing Day Nears.

Springfield, Ill., July 27.—Illinois politicians of all parties are in a state of near terror because of the tactics of Secretary of State Harry Woods.

With the final day for filing petitions for state, congressional and legislative offices just five days away, Secretary Woods has not indicated the form of petition which he will recognize as legal.

He has been away from Springfield ever since the first day of filing the required petitions and hasn't been close enough to Sangamon county to permit the sheriff of that county to serve writs issued by the circuit court compelling the secretary of state to permit the scrutiny of certain petitions which have been filed.

Candidates have become so wildly excited over the trend of affairs at Springfield that they threaten immediate proceedings by any extraordinary method which might be pursued in the supreme court to force Secretary of State Woods to appear at his office and give some official indication of what he proposes to do in certifying the official list of candidates for the Sept. 9 primaries who are forced to file their petitions at his office.

The start of the trouble was in the many amendments to the primary act passed by the last legislature, which now make the act glare with inconsistencies. To top it all now Secretary Woods refuses to divulge what form of petition he will recognize as legal.

Storm Damages Illinois Corn.

Danville, Ill., July 25.—In a terrific rain, hail and windstorm north and south of Danville thousands of acres of corn was torn into ribbons and then beaten down. South of the city old timers declare it was the worst in thirty years. A peculiar feature of the storm was that in an area one-fourth of a mile wide through the residential section of the city not a drop of rain fell.

Drinks Nitric Acid by Mistake.

Quincy, Ill., July 27.—John Wadsworth of Canton, Mo., is in a precarious condition in a hospital here from the effects of drinking ice water charged with nitric acid. It is not known whether the acid was accidentally spilled in the water or put there as a joke. Wadsworth since has been starving.

Elevator Burns at Ottawa, Ill.

Ottawa, Ill., July 27.—The elevator of the Wallace Grain and Supply company was destroyed by fire including pany was destroyed by fire including 13,000 bushels of grain. The loss is $30,000.

Moyer Again Heads Miners.

Denver, Col., July 25.—The committe which canvassed the referendum vote for officers reported to the convention of the Western Federation of Miners the election of the following: President, Charles H. Moyer; vice president, C. E. Hahoney; secretary-treasurer, Ernest Mills.

Woman Shot in Battle With Burglar.

Mount Vernon, Ill., July 27.—While struggling with a burglar in her home, Mrs. T. D. Fowler was shot through the hand by the intruder. She fired two shots at the man, but he escaped uninjured.

Victory Is Too Late.

Battle Creek, Mich., July 27.—Battle Creek's victory in the supreme court prohibiting bathing in Goguac lake has come too late, as the city has already drilled wells at Verona.

WHISKER CULTURE.

A Critic Who Does Not Like the Hanging Garden Effect.

In the American Magazine James Montgomery Flagg, writing a piece on "Whiskerculture," contributes the following permit to cultivate hanging gardens on the face.

"This is to certify that the bearer, ——— ———, has permission to stand on the grass in any part of Central park, or other city parks, during May and June and pretend he is a spiraea bush.

"If by any chance he should begin to bear currants or marrons glaces he must allow the commissioner of parks first pickings.

"He is required also to permit any uniformed official of the Long Island railroad lost and found department to enter his beard at will, without a written order, and search for lost purses, umbrellas or packages of pressed beef or coins of any denomination.

"On the 2d of February he agrees to step out from his cocoon and, if he sees his own shadow, report it immediately to the board of health and crawl back again.

"In going over his privet hedge in the fall before putting it in camphor, he must destroy all nests, he comes across.

"On national and state holidays he is permitted to string Japanese lanterns in any part of the shrubbery above Forty second street, but he is forbidden to set off any Roman candles or red light in it.

"During the open season for grouse or caribou he must have his entire beard adequately patrolled. He agrees to report to Washington if any careless tourists start fires in any portion of this tract, especially near any ranches. He agrees to see before retiring that no lighted cigar butts are left smoldering in the underbrush.

"If all these regulations are faithfully carried out his beard will be set aside as a national park in January of the following year."

THE HILL OF TARA.

Where In Ancient Times the Kings of Ireland Were Crowned.

In the county of Meath is supposed to have stood the hall of Tara, celebrated as being the palace of the ancient Irish kings. There seems to be no doubt that on the hill of Tara the national assemblies met once a year to consult on the affairs of the kingdom and to make laws. The lawgivers were a class of druids called Brehons, who acted as magistrates and judges. They did not hold their courts of justice in any hall, but seated themselves on the top of a hill in the open air, where they heard all complaints that were brought before them and decided every cause according to their own ideas of right and wrong.

The hill of Tara is also famous in Irish history as the spot on which the kings were crowned. The throne, or seat of inauguration, was a black stone, which was called Lea Fail, or the fatal stone, said to have been brought in the early ages from Spain, and it was therefore held in high veneration. It was either borrowed by Feargus the Great, an Irish chief, or else it was carried away, among other spoils, by the Scots in one of their invasions of Ireland and was ever afterward used as a coronation seat of the kings of Scotland at the abbey of Scone until it was conveyed away by force of arms, together with the crown and scepter, by Edward I. to England, who placed it in Westminster abbey, where it still exists and forms the basis of the coronation chair to this day. —Argonaut.

Roosevelt as a Woodchopper.

When he owned a ranch in the west Theodore Roosevelt, as he says in his autobiography, "could chop fairly well for an amateur," but he admits that he could not do one-third of the work that his men did.

"One day," he writes, "when we were cutting down the cottonwood trees to begin our building operations, I heard some one ask Dow what the total cut had been, and Dow, not realizing that I was within hearing, answered, 'Well, Bill cut down fifty-three, I cut forty-nine, and the boss, he beavered down seventeen.' Those who have seen the stump of a tree that has been gnawed down by a beaver," adds Mr. Roosevelt, "will understand the exact force of the comparison."

Jimmy, aged four, had been sent up stairs by his mother to get 10 cents, which she intended to use for the purchase of postage stamps.

"Yes, Jimmy, the smallest piece of money in my purse."

"Oh, I know now, mother! Church money."—Judge.

Steam and Gas.

True dry superheated steam has every property of a true gas save one—it is not permanent. When heat disappears what appeared to be gas soon becomes water. Heat oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen as hot as possible in any expansion container and they will become rare, occupy more space, but allow the heat to vanish and the gases will resume their original temperature volumes. Freeze these gases down to liquid or solid, when the cold is so intense that it cannot be imagined. Restore the heat and the solids or liquids will be gases again—that is, they are permanent gases at terrestrial temperatures. But steam is not permanent at these temperatures and is therefore a vapor of water.—New York American.

Built From the Coliseum.

Many of the important palaces of Rome are made from stone taken from the ruins of the Coliseum, which, in spite of the ravages of two earthquakes, remained intact until the eighth century. The Barberini, Farnese, and Cancellaria were all built from the walls of this edifice, but the spoliation is not so unworthy when we realize the stone had fallen from repeated earthquakes, thus suggesting its transportation.

TECUMSEH WINS SERIES

By defeating Clinton in a fast game. This makes three out five games for Tecumseh Score 5 to 1.

'Dutch' Lenardson pitched airtight ball after his own error in the first inning gave Clinton a score, allowing the Clintonians only five hits. He also displayed good control, walking only one and hitting none.

This one score looked exceedingly large until the sixth inning as the home team couldn't push across a run. In round number six they got next to Martin, the Clinton southpaw, and by hard clean hitting scored two runs. Thinking that two wasn't enough they came back with three more in the seventh.

A crowd of 215 attended the game Sunday. The home team journeys to Albion next Sunday.

Contrasts In Mexico.

Perhaps nowhere else in the world is there a country so full of contrasts as Mexico. Here you will see a Mexican halfbreed barefooted wearing a dollar pair of trousers, a fifty cent shirt and a ten dollar sombrero. There at a single glance and within the length of a single city block you may see an Indian cargador, a donkey cart, an oxcart, a carriage, a railroad train, a street car and a motorcar—almost every type of locomotion since Adam. You may tread the burning sands of a tropical desert with a wet of perpetual snow of towering mountains still upon your shoes. You may take a single railway journey of thirty-six hours in which the people you see at the railroad station will be dressed in four different weights of clothing. Everywhere you turn there is contrast, high lights and deep shadows.—William Joseph Showalter in National Geographic Magazine.

To Multiply by Division.

Everybody knows that learning the tens in the multiplication table is as easy as "pie" and that the fives are not much harder; but, slight as is the mental effort required in multiplying any number by five, it may be lessened still more by discarding the multiplier entirely and substituting a divisor instead. This may sound paradoxical, but by experimenting you will find that dividing by two will bring the same result as multiplying by five, provided you add a cipher to the quotient if the dividend be an even number or five if it be odd. For instance, if you multiply 2,734 by five the product is 13,670. What is still easier, divide 2,734 by two, which is done almost instantaneously; then tack on your naught and you have 13,670.

Where Women May Not Pray.

In some parts of the world the women are not even allowed to pray. Certain Hindu congregations deny their women this privilege, and among the Ainus women can pray only in very rare cases as the deputies of their husbands. The natives of Madagascar, however, stretch a point and permit their women to intercede with the powers of evil, but prayer to their supreme being is strictly a masculine prerogative.

Some German Taxes.

Among the curious taxes imposed in Germany on various objects are those on baby carriages, where the amount is 40 cents each and $1.50 tax on caged nightingales, of which there have not been any for many years, and tourists for whom the hotel keeper is taxed 2½ cents, which is added to the bill.

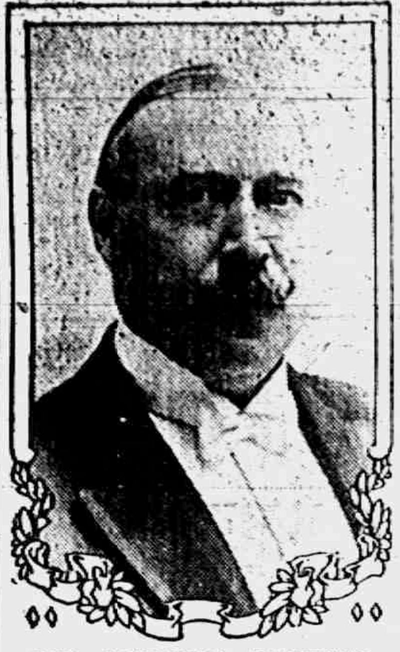
He Had the Bill.

Tom (in restaurant)—Excuse me, old man, but would you mind paying my check? I haven't anything but a forty dollar bill. Jack—A forty dollar bill! Why, I never heard of a bill of that denomination. Tom—Here it is—a bill from my tailor!—Chicago News.

JOEL MOSSBERG IS GIFTED AND FAMOUS

To Sing on Chautauqua Program In This City This Season.

Worcester (Mass.) Svea. March.—"The next number on the program belonged to the prominent baritone, Joel Mossberg of Chicago. He made his Worcester debut with the prologue from 'Pagliacci.' Greeted by storming applause upon his entrance on the stage, the applause after the song became an ovation. Of a singer with so stately an appearance one expects stately things; and the audience was not deceived. The way Mr. Mossberg rendered the prologue has never before been heard in Worcester. The delivery of this difficult aria was dramatic, effervescent with life and color, and Mr. Mossberg's voice was resonant in all its registers, his brilliant high tones ringing and bell-like in a way one seldom finds in the most gifted baritones of international fame. In one word, the prologue was sung Friday evening in a way that could only be done by a great singer and an artist, who has the advantage of voice resources extraordinary, and the public rewarded him with tremendous applause, to which he responded with the 'Toreador' from 'Carmen.' To sing so taxing an encore after such a big number as the prologue was almost too much to expect, but we by this time expect almost anything of Mr. Mossberg, and the 'Toreador' was greeted with a storm of applause well deserved."



JOEL MOSSBERG, BARITONE.

Mr. Mossberg will appear in this city on the Lincoln Chautauqua program on the sixth day. He is a member of the National Grand Opera Company, which will sing the preludes to Congressman Fred S. Jackson's addresses.

TENOR OF MUSICAL NOTE ON BIG PROGRAM

"While Mr. Hamilton has the physique and the voice to be classed emphatically as a dramatic tenor, he yet has such a beautifully lyric quality as to place him also in the list of purely lyric voices," says the Music News, Chicago. "His range is remarkable, and the power of his voice is amazing. At the same time this power in nowise interferes with quality, and he is able to sing steadily, suavely and with great leeway in modulatory effects. Mr. Hamilton has temperament in abundance, and withal his taste in readings is pronounced and varied absolutely to the requirements of each work given."

JAMES HAMILTON, TENOR.

Mr. Hamilton will appear in this city on the Lincoln Chautauqua program on the sixth day. He is a member of the National Grand Opera Company, which will sing the preludes to Congressman Fred S. Jackson's addresses.

At Tecumseh, August 16-21.

Mastery of Music.

The mastery of music never just "came naturally" to any human being. The world has never known a more industrious worker than the illustrious Franz Schubert. Yet, if to any one in the world music "came naturally," it seemed to come so to him. When the school principal asked his harmony teacher how young Franz Schubert was progressing, the teacher said: "He is a wonder. Whenever I explain anything new to him, he always seems already to know it. He must have received his knowledge straight from heaven." Yet, in spite of such superb gifts, there was never a harder worker than he. And don't you think that we with our lesser gifts, should follow his example? If he with all his heaven sent genius could not succeed without strenuous daily labor, how can we hope to accomplish anything worth while without ceaseless, patient and conscientious toil?—Woman's World.

Your Castle of Thought.

Your Castle of Thought is the most sacred possession you have.

It is your real estate, your house of prayer.

You are the agent. Shall you let in disorderly tenants?

Shall you harbor Doubt, a sickly tenant, to infect well meaning tenants? Doubt is about the worst tenant you can admit. Turn him out.

Doubting some one, any one, never gets you anything.

If the one you doubt is unworthy, then that is his problem, not yours. Give him this to read and let him come and take treatment.

Come and get your thought changed, and all things will be made new.—New York Sun.

Our County Infirmary

THE FOLLOWING ARTICLE WAS SENT US FOR PUBLICATION.

Editor of the Herald:

I have just read the article in the Jackson Patriot criticising the Lenawee County farm, and I am ashamed to say that every word of it is true.

I have visited the County farm a great many times and I have seen its terrible condition. At one time the inmates were using flour out of a bin that showed evidence of being alive with rats and mice. I have seen half cooked salt pork served to the inmates, very thin skimmed milk and oleomargarine were also served them.

I have seen an old lady, paralyzed so she could not move either hand, lying in bed with flies in swarms about her eyes and mouth, and fairly eating her up. One old lady lay helpless praying to God to take her and a fearful stench came from her bed and when I examined it I found it was alive with bed bugs. I found another bed where a poor afflicted inmate had slept and the bed was made up for the day. I opened it and found the space between the old pad and straw tick foul with vomit and bed bugs ran in all directions, the floor was covered with vomit, though it was supposed to have been cleaned up for the coming day. I never saw the county farm in better condition than when Mrs. Blain was matron, but Lenawee county was so poor they would not allow her an extra dollar to fix things up, so she had to leave.

Lenawee county people better visit the Jackson county and see the differ- in the places.

I was also told by the inmates of a poor helpless man who was strapped and punished because he did not go to bed—and to such a bed. I do hope steps to have the county house made sanitary will be taken

Mrs. R. Hastings,
Jackson, Mich

[Ed Note]—From time to time we have noticed in various county papers reports of the deplorable condition of our County Infirmary and if the conditions reported are true, it is high time that our good people should bring pressure to bear upon our Board of Supervisors to have these conditions corrected.

The committee in charge should lose no time in making a thorough investigation. We cannot understand why such conditions could possibly exist in Lenawee county for our people are ready and anxious to provide ample clean, and wholesome quarters for her unfortunate people.

We sincerely hope that there will be no delay on the part of the Board of Supervisors in taking up this matter and that they will make their investigation thorough and if necessary provide ample funds for placing this Infirmary in the best of condition.

ALEXANDER PETERS

Alexander Peters died at his home in Tecumseh Saturday at 5 o'clock p. m., July 25, after an illness of three years of heart trouble, in his 67th year.

The funeral was held Monday at 2:30 p. m. with burial in Brookside. Mr. Peters and family moved here from Britton last spring. He was a veteran of the Civil War, and a number of the G. A. R. post attended his funeral.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

A number of our Tecumseh people were at Wamplers lake Sunday and were greatly shocked by the accident which happened to Dr. Spafford, dentist, of Adrian. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon he had prepared to take a swim and made a dive from the spring board at the Ives dock, it is thought that he struck his head with such force on the sandy bottom that it paralyzed his whole body. The doctor retained consciousness through out and was able to tell of his sensations while in the water. Medical aid was at hand. Dr. Seffron of Metamora, O., who was stopping at the lake rendered first aid and Dr. Treat of Adrian who was at Sand lake was called and a brother of Dr. Spafford of Detroit a physician was called at once. He has hopes that the paralysis may not have a permanent effect. At last accounts he was still at the lake but his friends hoped to take him to his home in a day or two.

THE DISCOURAGED PHILANTHROPIST

Sir Thomas Lipton, who when first starting in business was very poor was commenting on American charity.

"It requires a vast amount of courage and charity to be a philanthropist such as Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, and numerous other noted men in America," he said. "When I started in business I was very poor, and making every sacrifice to enlarge my little shop. My only assistant was a youth of some fifteen years, faithful and honest. One Saturday morning I heard him complaining, and with justice, that his clothes were so shabby that he was ashamed to go to church the following morning. 'All chances of my getting a new suit this summer are over, as my Dad is out of work, and it takes all my wages to pay the rent,' he said.

"I felt sorry for the lad, and, after thinking the matter over I took a sovereign from my carefully hoarded savings and bought the boy a comfortable, new suit of blue cloth. He was so overwhelmingly grateful that I felt amply repaid for my sacrifice. The following morning, however, he did not make his appearance at the accustomed hour, and later in the day, as his mother was passing the building, I inquired the reason of her son's absence.

"'Well, Mr. Lipton,' said she, with a bland smile and curtsying, ''Arry looks so respectable, thanks to you, sir, that I thought I would send him about town a little today and see if he couldn't get a better job.'"

Restless Flat Dwellers.

The restlessness of the flat dweller is a national mystery. Why does he go forth inevitably in the spring to find another flat and to insert his family and furniture therein? As likely as not it is the flat which he abandoned five years before. Since then he has occupied four other flats, each a vast improvement over its predecessor, and he is now delighted with the new flat which he left in disgust five years before. He has spent hundreds of dollars in arriving at this stage of happiness, but he will abandon the flat again next year and flit on in a moving van as large as a small chapel.

We falter, appalled at the task of discovering the flat dweller's purpose until we consider the strangely similar restlessness of the sick man who lies on one side until he can't stand it any longer and then, with the assistance of his devoted family, is turned over on the other side. The change is a delightful relief, although a few hours before he couldn't endure to lie on that side a minute longer.—George Fitch in Collier's Weekly.

The Sewing Machine.

The invention of the sewing machine is one of the most interesting evolutionary romances in the history of human progress. Stone, Henderson and Greenough had experimented extensively with the double pincer idea, one to seize the needle below and one above. Heilmann used a double pointed needle, with the eye in the center, and Thimmonier and Ferrand had invented a chain stitch machine. In 1834 Walter Hunt originated the extension arm idea with a needle similar to the one now in general use, but before he applied for his patent in 1854 he had been forestalled by Elias Howe, who will always be known as the inventor of the sewing machine. If Hunt had not been so great a laggard he might have won fame as an inventor, but Howe is entitled to all the credit that has been given him. Like all great inventions, however, the sewing machine was the product of many minds.

POSITIVE PROOF

Should Convince the Greatest Skeptic in Tecumseh

Because it is the evidence of a Tecumseh citizen. Testimony easily investigated. The strongest endorsement of merit, the best proof. Read it.

George D. Chaplin, carpenter, N. Ottawa St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pill's at Wright & Son,s Drug store and began using them. The results were very satisfactory. I am in hopes that our kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience. I willingly confirm the statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills."

The above statement must carry conviction to the mind of every reader. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Chaplin had the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c, all stores. Worshiping a Turtle.

At a place called Kotroo, on the French Ivory Coast, the natives believe that to eat or destroy a turtle would mean death to the guilty one or sickness among the family. The fetich men, of which there are plenty, declare that years ago a man went to sea fishing. In the night his canoe was thrown upon the beach empty. Three days afterward a turtle came ashore at the same place with the man on its back alive and well. Since that time they have never eaten or destroyed one of that species, although they enjoy other species.

If one happens now to be washed ashore there is a great commotion in the town. First, the women sit down and start singing and beating sticks; next a small piece of white cloth (color must be white) is placed on the turtle's back. Food is then prepared and placed on the cloth, generally plantains, rice and palm oil. Then, amid a lot more singing, dancing and antics of the fetich people, it is carried back into the sea and goes on its way rejoicing.

ILLNESS NOT COMPENSATORY

Court Holds Occupational Diseases Not Covered by State Act.

Lansing, Mich., July 27.—Employes taken ill with occupational diseases caused by the character of their work are not entitled to compensation under the Michigan industrial accident law, according to a ruling of the state supreme court.

This decision was taken in the case of Augustus Adams, whose widow sought compensation from a Detroit paint manufacturing company. Adams was an employe of the paint manufacturers and contracted lead poisoning and died. The state industrial accident board took the stand that the widow should be paid by the employers.

AN UNLUCKY BRIG.

Once Abandoned, the Marie Celeste Came to a Bad End.

There are few people who have not heard of the case of the American brig Marie Celeste, which in 1872 was inexplicably abandoned in calm weather off the Azores by a crew never after heard from. Few, however, know that it ended its career many years later at the hands of the barrator.

On its last voyage it cleared from Boston for Port au Prince, Haiti, ostensibly with a cargo of valuable general merchandise, insured for $30,000. When within a few miles of its destination it went ashore near Miragoane and became a total wreck. The captain, Parker, promptly sold the cargo, sight unseen, to American Consul Mitchell for $500. Mitchell saved it at some trouble, but lived to wish he hadn't.

When the underwriters' agent arrived on the scene to investigate, he found several funny things about the cargo. One case shipped as cutlery and insured for $1,000 contained dog collars worth $50. Barrels supposed to contain expensive liquors were full of worthless dregs, a consignment of salt fish insured for $5,000 was rotten, and other articles mentioned in the bill of lading proved to be in keeping.

Consul Mitchell, not only duped, but outlawed, stood not on the order of his going, but cleared out for tall timber. The captain of the brig was tried in the United States district court in Boston, convicted and sentenced to a long term in prison, where he died three months later.—David A. Wasson in Outing Magazine.

A LEGEND OF MEXICO.

Origin of the Eagle and Serpent on Its Coat of Arms.

The coat of arms of the republic of Mexico, which occupies the center of white bar of the flag and consists of a beautiful device representing an eagle perched upon a cactus (what in Mexico is called nopal) devouring a serpent, is intimately connected with the history of the people. In the beginning of the fourteenth century the ancient Mexicans, or Aztecs, after wandering for a long time around the Mexican valley looking for a place to build their city, arrived after terrible sufferings and adventures on the southwestern border of Lake Texcoco in 1325.

There they halted, for in front of them they beheld what naturally they considered an auspicious omen from their gods. An immense royal eagle of extraordinary size and beauty stood upon a cactus growing in the crevice of a rock washed by the waves of the lake. In its talons it held a serpent, and its broad, beautiful wings opened to the rising sun.

Obeying the mandate of their oracle that there they should build their city, they set to work, and by driving piles into the marshes with no other material at hand but frail reeds and rushes the foundations of the great Tenochtitlan, the chief city of the Aztecs and the site of the modern City of Mexico, were laid.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE "ENTENTE CORDIALE."

Bismarck Once Gave a Striking Definition of the Term.

In the newspapers of today we very often find the words entente cordiale. Most readers understand the meaning of the expression, but it is rather difficult to make a translation that expresses the exact meaning of the original French. Prince Bismarck gave a good explanation when his daughter asked him what the entente cordiale really was.

"Well," he said, "it is not so easy to define literally. It means a cordial understanding, but it also has a little different significance. For example: You were in the courtyard this morning when I came from the garden with Nero. Diana was in the yard, gnawing a large bone. My Nero saw her and ran to seize the bone. Then there was a little fight, until I struck them a few sharp blows with my cane.

"After that the bone lay in the middle of the court, while both dogs stood off at some distance and looked eagerly at it. Each dog, in fact, was as anxious to keep the other away as he was afraid of my cane, and therefore neither ventured to seize it. You see, that is what they call in diplomatic circles an entente cordiale." — Youth's Companion.

Thirteenth Century Fire Prevention.

One wonders what fate would have overtaken the captured starter of fires in thirteenth century London, for after the blaze of 1212, which lasted ten days, swallowed up part of London bridge and was the cause of over 1,000 deaths, every precaution was taken against fires. For instance, all builders of houses were ordered to roof them with tiles, shingle boards or lead, and to stop an outbreak any house could be pulled down. Thus, Mr. H. B. Wheatley on the safeguards: "For the speedy removal of burning houses each ward was to provide a strong iron hook with a wooden handle, two chains and two strong cords, which were to be left with the bedel of the ward, who was also provided with a good horn 'loudly sounding.'" And, moreover, every householder was ordered to keep a barrel of water before his door.—London Standard.

Sinking of the Caspian Sea.

Geologists claim that the Caspian sea is continually sinking. Known to all schoolboys as the largest interior body of water in the world, the Caspian is about 730 miles in greatest length and 330 miles in extreme width. Its area is estimated to be 170,000 square miles, while the area of England and Wales is 58,000 odd square miles. These figures give a clear idea of the size of the Caspian. Notwithstanding its size, parts of the sea are very shallow. In the southern portions, however, a depth of over 3,000 feet has been registered. Our physical geography tells us that the present sea is part of a vast oceanic water which at one time extended to the Arctic ocean.—Westminster Gazette.

The One Speech M. P.

No member ever impressed the house of commons with his gift of silence more than General Forester. This sensible man represented Much Wenlock for forty-six years and never made a speech. One member, Sir Charles Burrell, sat for sixty years, restraining himself nobly. He made one speech only in order to introduce a bill providing that housemaids should be forbidden to clean windows from the outside.—London Chronicle.

Odd Death Certificates.

Certificates of death are not documents where one usually seeks for humor, but there is frequently to be found in them much of the unconscious variety. Here, for instance, is how the cause of death is stated in the case of a laborer:

"Died from injuries received through a bull accidentally kneeling on his chest."

The consideration shown for the feelings of the bull is a fine touch and suggests grave questions on the moral responsibility of the lower animals.

Again, a man is stated to have "died from the effects of injuries received after being run over by a railway train in motion owing to a misunderstanding between deceased and an engine driver." This description of a rather ordinary railway casualty is excellent.—London Express.

A Strange Deadlock

And How It Was Broken

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

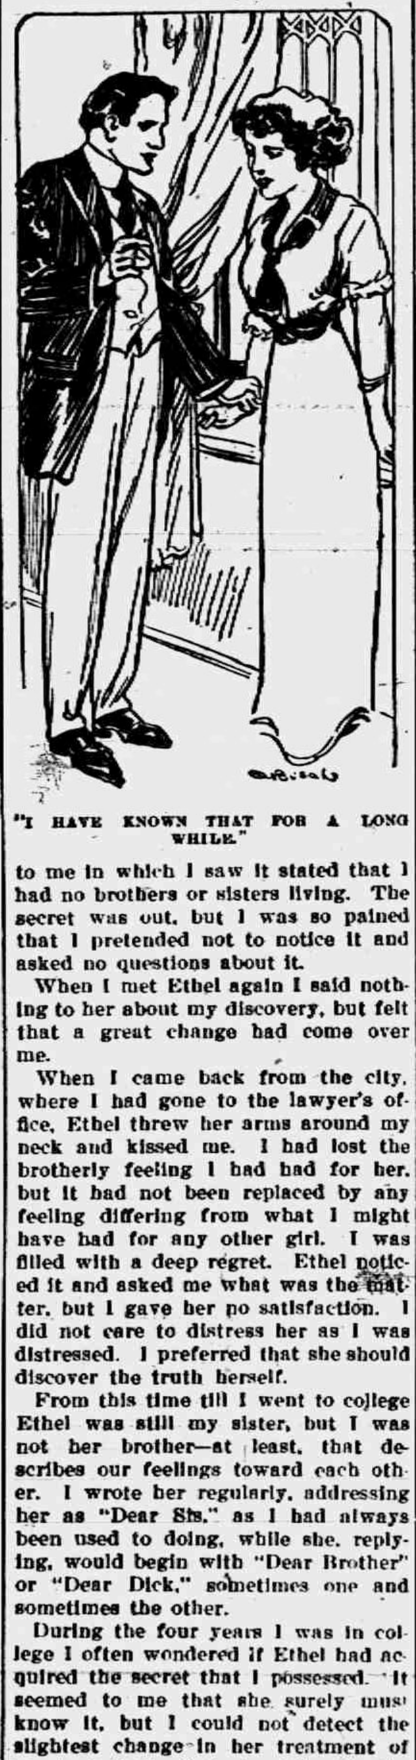
My childhood till I was six years old is very hazy. I cannot go back of that period except for a dim remembrance of my mother. I must have been without any child to play with, for I remember my aunt, by whom I was brought up, coming into my lonely playroom one day leading a little girl and saying:

"Here's a little sister for you."

My childhood from Ethel's coming was very different from what it was before. Why we did not meet other children I do not know, but I think it was because my aunt lived in the country, with no one of her own class living near her. But neither Ethel nor I seemed to need other associates, studying together under a tutor, and playing together in perfect contentment. From this continued association with a girl I did not become effeminate, but Ethel formed a taste for boyish sports. Indeed, as a girl she was quite a tomboy, rivaling me in tree climbing, horseback riding and other exercises pertaining rather to boys than to girls. One of our favorite sports was to toss a baseball to each other, Ethel being as good a catcher as I. But she never learned to throw a ball like a boy. I presume that this peculiarity in a woman is owing to the difference in the masculine and feminine figures.

There was no well defined reason why Ethel and I were permitted to grow up with the understanding that we were brother and sister. My aunt was responsible for it, and she never made her reasons clear to either of us.

The supposed relationship certainly gave us a freedom when we were emerging from childhood into youth that we would not otherwise have experienced. Up to the time when I was sixteen and Ethel fourteen there was not the faintest suspicion that we were not brother and sister. Then I was required to go to a lawyer's office about some property of which I was possessed, and a paper was presented to me in which I saw it stated that I had no brothers or sisters living. The secret was out, but I was so pained that I pretended not to notice it and asked no questions about it.



"I HAVE KNOWN THAT FOR A LONG WHILE."

When I met Ethel again I said nothing to her about my discovery, but felt that a great change had come over me.

When I came back from the city, where I had gone to the lawyer's office, Ethel threw her arms around my neck and kissed me. I had lost the brotherly feeling I had had for her, but it had not been replaced by any feeling differing from what I might have had for any other girl. I was filled with a deep regret. Ethel noticed it and asked me what was the matter, but I gave her no satisfaction. I did not care to distress her as I was distressed. I preferred that she should discover the truth herself.

From this time till I went to college Ethel was still my sister, but I was not her brother—at least, that describes our feelings toward each other. I wrote her regularly, addressing her as "Dear Sis," as I had always been used to doing, while she, replying, would begin with "Dear Brother" or "Dear Dick," sometimes one and sometimes the other.

During the four years I was in college I often wondered if Ethel had acquired the secret that I possessed. It seemed to me that she surely must know it, but I could not detect the slightest change in her treatment of me to indicate that she did. By the time I came home for my vacation between my sophomore and junior year she had grown to be a lovely girl, between seventeen and eighteen years of age.

I had recovered from the shock I had received in learning that I was not her brother and was now beginning to be rather pleased that some other fellow need not take her away from me. Indeed, if we chose we could enter upon a far closer relationship than brother and sister.

But I found myself in rather a peculiar position. I knew that there was no obstacle in the way of Ethel's being my wife, but she did not. At least, if she did she gave no evidence of such knowledge.

Meanwhile I was desirous of acting toward Ethel as a lover and not as a brother. But how could I do that while she supposed our relationship to be what we had grown up to consider it? She treated me precisely as she had always treated me. There was the same freedom that had always been between us—anyway, on her part.

Another year passed. I was twenty years old and had one more year in college before me. Ethel was eighteen and had returned from a seminary with her education completed. I was no longer able to treat her as a sister, and since I did not dare treat her as a lover I fell, so to speak, between the two. My treatment of her, being neither the one nor the other, was constrained. She made no complaint, but it seemed to me that the change in me had produced an equivalent in her. We played tennis and took long walks together, getting on well enough at the tennis, but on our walks there was none of that easy chat, mingled with jokes and laughter, of former times. I walked beside her with the secret between us, talking in that philosophic vein one is apt to fancy about the time he leaves his teens, while Ethel seemed at times a trifle bored.

Why did I not break the ice by telling her the secret? There were many reasons from one point of view and none from another. Why are certain events in families never referred to? For the same reason that I shrank from telling Ethel that I was not her brother, and, as to telling her that the spark of love for her had been kindled within me, how could I say such a thing to one who believed herself to be my sister?

This condition continued during my senior year in college. My letters to Ethel were bereft of either brotherly or lover-like expression, and hers to me were also neutral. But when I returned home a graduate a new element had been injected into the problem that was bound very soon to change the situation. I found a young man hanging about Ethel whose intentions were as plain as the sun in heaven.

His presence threw me into a fever at once. I found it difficult to treat him with ordinary civility. If Ethel had been my sister I should doubtless have freely discussed the matter of the attentions of this young man with her. As it was, I did not feel the right even to mention the matter. Besides, I was so inordinately jealous of her suitor that I should have doubtless spoken offensively.

In Ethel there was no change toward me. She was the same as she had been for the past two years. She must have known that there were fires burning within me, but she did not appear to notice them. She said nothing to me about the attentions of Mr. Jackanapes, as I considered him, but a sister is not likely to speak of a suitor to a brother until the brother first speaks to her.

My pentup feelings kept rising until the dam burst. One day, coming unexpectedly upon Mr. Jackanapes pleading his suit with Ethel, I lost my grip on myself and blurted out:

"What do you mean, sir, by wooing my—my sister without first asking permission from me, her natural guardian?"

He looked at me in astonishment, then said: "I beg a thousand pardons. If it is not too late may I now have that permission?"

"I prefer before giving my permission to consult with her."

"That being the case, I will withdraw."

Rising, he left Ethel and me together. I stood with my back half turned to her, scowling. I should have been conscious of having made a guy of myself, but I was not.

"Dick," said Ethel, "what's the matter with you?"

"Don't you think I should be consulted in a love affair of yours?"

"How do you know that this is a love affair of mine?"

"It certainly is one if this fellow who has intruded upon"—

"I can't help what he may feel for me. I have not accepted him and don't intend to."

"Thank God!"

"Why are you so concerned about whom I marry? For some years past you have acted coldly toward me."

"That was because"—

"Because what?"

"I discovered"—

"What did you discover?"

"That you and I are not brother and sister. We are no relation."

"I have known that for a long while."

"You have known it a long while! Why didn't you tell me?"

"Why didn't you tell me?"

I went to Ethel. Now that the barrier between us was broken down, my former brotherly treatment of her was a help. Sitting beside her, I took her to my arms, and, beginning as a brother, I rapidly developed into a lover.

Ethel and I were the children of two bosom friends. My mother died when I was a baby, and I was turned over to my aunt. Ethel's mother died when Ethel was four years old, and my aunt, being a near friend of her family, was prevailed upon to take the child, being chiefly moved by a desire to furnish me with a playmate. She gave me in addition a companion for life.

I have never been sure but that Ethel encouraged Mr. Jackanapes in order to break the deadlock there was between her and me.

TRAPPING ELEPHANTS.

In India Tame Animals Aid In Capturing the Wild Ones.

In view of the vast strength possessed by full grown elephants, it seems at first sight almost incredible that they can be captured in herds and quickly subdued to the will of their masters.

At the present time, in Mysore, the regular method of capturing wild elephants is for a large number of natives to go into the jungle, some mounted on tamed elephants and many on foot, and to make a great noise and hullabaloo, which results in driving herds of the wild elephants into stockades, or often into ponds of water, which have previously been surrounded on all sides, except at the approaches, by immensely strong palisades. As soon as the herd is cornered the passages that had been left open are securely closed, and then the trained elephants are brought into play to cajole and subdue the perplexed prisoners.

In India elephants are no longer captured, as they still are in Africa, by means of huge pitfalls in the ground. In these traps they are often seriously injured or killed. The Indian elephant is somewhat smaller than the African and differs from it in other ways—as, for instance, in the fact that tusks are possessed only by the males, while both sexes are provided with them in Africa. In general, also, the tusks of African elephants are nearly twice as large as those of their Indian relatives, a single pair sometimes weighing as much as 250 or 300 pounds.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Hon. William E. Mason, Who Will Speak at Chautauqua

HON. WILLIAM E. MASON.

SENATOR MASON has served in both branches of the Illinois legislature and in both branches of congress and all of the time during the past thirty-four years has been a recognized power in state and national politics. From the day he entered the legislature on up to his service in the United States senate he has made one continuous fight against grafters, more modernly known as "jackpotters." Mr. Mason makes no claim to oratory, yet the late Speaker Thomas B. Reed stated that the "World's fair was located in the city of Chicago by a ten minutes' speech made by Mason of Illinois," and ex-Congressman Boutell, ex-minister to Switzerland, is authority for stating that the late Senator Hoar of Massachusetts said at a banquet in Washington that the most effective speech he had heard in his twenty-five years' service in the senate was a speech made by Senator Mason.

Senator Mason will appear on the Lincoln Chautauqua program in this city on the afternoon of the fourth day. The prelude will be played by the Royal Black Hussars Band.

Miss Mabel Cleveland, Raymond Fuller, fourteen, and Andrew Fisher, twelve, who were on the front seat of the picnic car were instantly killed. Frank Nagry, thirteen, another excursionist, died before the Norwalk hospital was reached, and Harold Nadin, motorman, is expected to die.

WAR DECLARED BY AUSTRIA

Nations of Europe Are Arming For Battle.

COSSACKS FIRE ON GERMANS

Advices at Washington From St. Petersburg Are That Russia Regards War as Certain—Bear Is Mobilizing All Empire's Troops, Notwithstanding Statements to Contrary—Servians Blow Up Bridge—Servian Minister Leaves for Belgrade.

Vienna, July 29.—Official notice of a declaration of war was sent to the Servian government by Austria-Hungary.

BERLIN — The German government returned an unfavorable reply to the British proposal for a conference of the ambassadors in London of the European powers, in an endeavor to bring about a settlement of the Austro-Servian difficulty. Germany makes the counter suggestion that negotiations for peace be conducted between the cabinets instead of by a conference.

BERLIN — The German admiralty ordered the concentration of the German fleet in home waters.

VIENNA — War between Austria and Servia is now in progress. The danger that it may spread throughout the continent is causing grave concern in all the capitals of Europe.

M. Jovanovitch, Servian minister to Vienna, has left for Belgrade, completely severing relations between the two countries.

These developments show the opening of hostilities, though without a formal declaration of war:

Servian troops blew up the railroad bridge spanning the Lave at Semlin. It is at Semlin that Austria has concentrated the greatest force for the invasion of Servia.

Reports of Servians firing on an Austrian boat bearing troops on the Danube are confirmed. The fire was returned and a hot engagement followed.

Reports were received here that an engagement was in progress near the mouth of the Temes river, east of Belgrade.

Shots Fired Across Border.

EYDTKUHNEN, GERMANY—Shots were fired by a Cossack patrol across the German frontier on the alleged ground that an attempt was being made to cross the border at a wrong place.

Germans say that the group fired upon by the Russians were army officers. Much feeling has been caused by the incident.

England Offers Peace Plan.

BERLIN, GERMANY — Sir Edward Goschen, British ambassador at Berlin, called at the foreign office and communicated Great Britain's proposals for mediation.

Germany, it is understood, expressed an unwillingness to offer any suggestions to Austria to abandon or alter her policy toward Servia.

The governments of France and Italy have accepted the proposal that a conference be called with the object of finding a solution of the situation.

"Hands Off," Says Germany.

BERLIN — That there will not be peace if it is to be obtained only through Germany calling off Austria was further evidenced by what is undoubtedly the government's warning which is printed in the Cologne Gazette. This article says:

"The conflict is a personal matter which the Austrians will have to settle with the Servians. Let it alone till reparation has been made for the Sarajevo murders and then let diplomacy enter.

"Should Austria, against its European duties as well as good judgment, seek to turn reparation into political advantage the possibility is that we would reject them even now and then let the justified claims be heard.

"The German people, and certainly the German government, will deal with this matter with the same uprightness and honorableness that it is doing today in the protection of its own national interests, by covering the rear of her ally. Until then, hands off."

WRITES HIS FUNERAL HYMN

Henry Spencer, Murderer, Says He Is Glad He Is to Be Hanged Friday.

AURORA, ILL. — The unusually eccentric Henry Spencer, condemned to die next Friday for the murder of the tango dancer, Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, said he was working on a funeral hymn he will sing as he walks to the gallows. His composition will be in blank verse, Spencer says, but its air and words he intends to keep secret until the last day.

"I am perfectly happy in the certainty that I am to be hanged next Friday," Spencer said. "I'm glad these lawyers got to the end of their rope. Get that, 'End of their rope?' I don't want any commutation of my sentence. I'm tired to death of [illegible] life."

TWO PERISH IN CLOUDBURST

Ten Foot Wall of Water Does Much Damage at Telluride, Col.

TELLURIDE, COLO — Two persons were drowned, fifty families were rendered homeless, and fifteen business blocks, comprising 100 buildings, were partially wrecked when a wall of water ten feet high, originating in a cloudburst at the top of the range, descending through Cornet canon, broke through the dam, and flooded the town.

The damage is estimated at $150,000. Several hundred residents are encamped in public buildings. The town is still partly inundated, but the danger of a further rise is believed past.

M'ADOO WILL REPEAT CROP LOANS TO BANKS

$34,000,000 Will Be Offered to Help Farmers.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo is going to repeat his crop loan "stunt" of last year. He announces that he has decided to offer the national banks of the country for use in the crop movement and other legitimate business $34,000,000 from the general fund of the treasury. The loans are to be available immediately. Interest at the rate of 2 per cent a year will be charged for them. The offered amount will be increased if necessary.

The crop loans this year are to be conditioned even more generously than last year. Government, state, municipal and railroad bonds, acceptable to the secretary, and approved commercial paper will be accepted as security at 75 per cent of their face value and no requirement will be made as was done last year that 10 per cent of the deposits be secured by government bonds.

Mr. McAdoo announced at the end of the last crop moving period that an immense benefit had been conferred upon the country by the government's loan.

RIOTING IN DUBLIN

Gun Runners Cause Clash with Regular Soldiers.

FOUR DEAD; THIRTY WOUNDED

Nationalists Resist Coast Guards Who Seek to Prevent Landing of Arms—Police and Soldiers Attacked in Efforts to Disarm Populace—Mob Is Fired On.

DUBLIN — There was a serious riot here during which four persons were killed and thirty seriously wounded by the bullets and bayonets of regular soldiers. The affair, which, it is feared, is the procurser of further serious troubles, may even possibly be the beginning of the dreaded internecine conflict.

The outburst was the outcome of a nationalist gun running exploit. About 1,000 national volunteers paraded early in the day and marched to Howth, about ten miles away, for the purpose of landing a thousand rifles. On their arrival at the pier signals were made to a white yacht which had been maneuvering in the bay. The yacht promptly started towards the shore, and when she came to the pier and began discharging her cargo of rifles and ammunition, two members of the royal constabulary, who tried to interfere, were shouldered aside and forced outside the lines of the national volunteers who held the pier and barred access to it.

Shoved Coast Guards Aside.

A body of coast guards got beside the yacht in their boat, but were ordered away and it is reported were threatened with revolvers. As soon as all the cargo had been landed the nationalist volunteers started to return to Dublin.

Meanwhile the authorities at Dublin had been warned of what was going on and a detachent of forty to sixty policemen and one hundred men of the King's own Scottish borderers were sent to intercept the volunteers. When the latter arrived at Nalahide road in Clontarf they found their way blocked, the police in their front and fixed bayonets behind.

The police were ordered to disarm the volunteers, who resisted, and a sharp fight ensued. Several persons were hurt by the clubs of the police and by rifle butts and bullets. The reports as to the subsequent happenings differ, but the main body of the volunteers fled and reached the city by cutting across fields, with their rifles.

Mob Attacks Soldiers.

Meantime the fighting had become known in the city which was ablaze with excitement and big mobs collected in the streets through which the soldiers were expected to return. As soon as they appeared there were shouts of rage and these were followed by volleys of stones.

The soldiers marched on until they reached the Bachelor's walk on the Quay bridge, where the shooting began. It is said that some of the mob fired first with revolvers.

Three Men and Woman Dead.

Subsequent inqueries showed that three men and a woman had been shot dead and that from thirty to sixty persons, mostly men had been wounded. It is reported that some of the wounded including a child of ten years of age are dying.

After the volleying by the troops the mob beat and kicked every soldier they saw. None of these soldiers had been concerned in the fight and most of them were ignorant of the reason for their being attacked.

Obstinacy is a parasite, living either on a strong will or on great stupidity.

MICHIGAN GIRL LOSES HER MIND IN CHICAGO

Dolly Stanley Can't Remember Recent Happenings.

CHICAGO — Miss Dolly Stanley, about twenty years old, is in the Ravenswood hospital and says she cannot remember anything concerning herself since she left Detroit six weeks ago.

She fainted in a restaurant Saturday evening and remained unconscious until 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Fred Hage, of the hospital staff, says there is no trace of drugs and he is unable to make any diagnosis of her condition. Because of her semi-conscious condition she was not closely questioned.

In her lucid periods, Miss Stanley said she does not know where she has been or how long she has been in Chicago, in fact has no remembrance whatever of coming here. She remembers departing from Detroit six weeks ago as nearly as she can estimate time. She bears no marks of rough usage but is in some inexplicable sort of stupor.

HUNTERS SHUT OFF TRACT

35,000 Acres of Forest Closed to Protect Fifty Elk.

HIGGINS LAKE, MICH. — The acceptance of the gift of fifty elk from the United States government, by the state of Michigan, will, if tentative plans of the public domain commission are followed, rob the state of one of its most alluring game sections. It is the plan of the commission to place the elk in the Houghton lake forest reserve, which will result in the complete closing to all hunters of that entire section of land.

Inasmuch as the reserve consists of 35,000 acres and is full of game of all kinds, mostly birds, it can quickly be determined that the isolation of this section will be quite a blow to the hunters who have been coming from all parts of the state every year.

MOTOR CARS CRASH; 8 HURT

ST JOHN, MICH. — Mr. and Mrs. William Landers and two daughters were in an auto driven by Austin Philips when it collided, six and a half miles north of here, with another car in which were six passengers. Mr. Landers was pinned beneath his auto with several bruises, and his daughter Orpha, ten years old, was cut and bruised.

The machine lies in a ditch a complete wreck. Passengers in the other car were all bruised, but not seriously.

The two horses were worth $350.

TO STOP THE ADVANCE OF THE ARMY WORM

Letters, telephone messages, and individual callers have been soliciting aid from the United States Department of Agriculture to stop the advance of the hordes of army worms that threaten their fields of wheat, oats, corn, timothy, blue grass, and other grasses.

The army worm is a smooth, striped caterpillar about an inch and a quarter long and a quarter of an inch in diameter. It is rather dark in appearance. While normally it feeds by night and hides by day, not being generally noticed, as son as it has increased to such a number that its food supply falls short it starts to travel and becoming bolder, feeds both night and day. The moth from which this worm hatches is brown with a white spot on the center of each fore wing. It measures about an inch and one half from wing to wing.

HOW WORMS MAY BE DESTROYED

If the worms have not yet attacked a field the most practical way to keep them out is to plow furrows in front of them, throwing the furrow in the direction toward which they are traveling. The worms will fall into the furrow and when this is full they may be killed either by dragging a log back and forth in the furrow or by destroying the worms in holes previously dug at intervals of 20 feet in the bottom of the surrow. Kerosene poured on them in the holes will destroy them.

If the worms are already in the field the following mixture which will attract the worms and destroy them should be spread about:

1 pound of paris green (poisonous)
50 pounds of wheat bran:
Juice of one-half dozen oranges.

Bring this mixture to a stiff dough by the use of dilute molasses and scatter it amongst the worms. Care should be taken to keep this dough from children and domestic animals.

Prompt action to prevent these from infesting a field is much better than later efforts to attempt to kill them in the grain. Once the caterpillars have invested a field the measures necessary to destroy them may seriously hurt or destroy the crop.

The worms at first are almost always localized in some definite breeding place in the field, and immediate efforts should be taken to eradicate them in these small areas before they have had time to spread. The normal breeding place of the army worm is in rank grass, such as is usually found along the edges of swamps or in spots of pasture land that have overfertilixed. They are practically never found in swamps because the wopmneeds apeasonably dry place in which to breed.

Clean cultivation, rotation of crops, cleaning up of fence corners, close pasturage, and the burning over of waste grassland in the spring or fall are good measures to prevent a recurrence of the army worm.

WHAT TO DO FOR LAWNS.

For small areas, like lawns and private grounds, the poison bait may be used Equally efficient is the application of a spray of 1 pound arsenate of lead dissolved in 25 gallons of water. If the powdered arsenate of lead is more easily obtaineable, 1 lb. of this may be mixed with 8 pounds of flour and dusted on the grass where the worms are feeding. It must be remembered that arsenate of lead is as deadly poison to men and animals as well as to army worms.

Certainly.

"But you told me that this would be a paying investment," complained the customer, who had taken a flier. "It was," replied the broker. "But the customers did all the paying."

Wallace Gray is the man who has been employed to take care of the village property. An excellent selection.

Why should a baseball nine be blamed for being indisposed? Why should they?

W. R. Wilson of Ridgeway threshed his wheat last week. He had one field of nearly 4 acres that yielded 37½ bushel to the acre, and this is the third consecutive season that wheat has been raised on that field

The Rubber Game

THE THIRD GAME BETWEEN THE ADRIAN AND TECUMSEH BALL CLUBS.

The return and rubber game between the Adrian and Tecumseh clubs came off yesterday on the Tecumseh grounds.

As the hour approached to call the game, people began to pour in from all points of the compass. The villagers turned out in force, while Smith, Jones and Brown from all the adjoining town came flocking in with their uncles and their cousins and their aunts.

[The writeup of this game fills nearly three columns and we would gladly print it had we space, for it is decidedly racy.

The Adrian club and their Chicago and Toledo additions were suddenly quite ill, the Chicago pitcher had a cramp in his big toe, the catcher had eaten too many cucumbers for dinner, in fact each one had some special trouble and retired from the field, later having recuperated, they returned and a game was played.

If those interested would like to read the account, the file is at the office, and it can be found in the issue of July 31, 1879. Come in.]

THEY LAUGH AND FEEL PAID FOR IT

That's Experience of Preacher Who Says Things Complimentary About Corwine.

Frederick E. Hopkins, pastor Pilgrim Congregational Church, Chicago, says: "I have heard all of the leading humorists and entertainers during the past twenty-five years, and there is not one of them that could make an audience laugh as much and feel as well repaid as after listening to Tom Corwine. All that he does is original. He imitates nobody. He does not relate a lot of old stories told for years by other people. He is not a crank nor a faultfinder, but a first class Christian gentleman. No committee need have any fear of his not making good or of having to apologize for anything he may do."

Tom Corwine will appear on the Lincoln Chautauqua program in this city the second day, in the afternoon only.

PANAMA-PACIFIC LECTURER GREAT

One of the Many Things They Say About Coming Chautauqua Man.

The nation has finished the Panama canal. Perhaps the most interested section of the nation is the Pacific coast, and of this section the most interesting state is California. The entire enterprise from its inception with photographs of men who have had to do with it will be graphically shown and highly illustrated by Frank Gunn Brainerd the evening of the third day of the Lincoln Chautauqua program.

The Fort Scott (Kan.) Daily Tribune says of Mr. Brainerd: "The audience listened with intense interest. • • • Mr. Brainerd is an orator for two reasons: He was born an orator and he has something of tremendous importance to say."

The subject is big, the interest in it everywhere is intense, and the speaker on this occasion is abundantly able to handle the entire matter.

At Tecumseh, August 16-21.

TECUMSEH VS. HOWARD AND ALEXANDER

The case of the village of Tecumseh against W. D. Howard and Stephen Alexander representing the Dayton Grocery Co of Dayton, Ohio, which came up before Judge Hosmer Thursday afternoon, was decided by him in favor of the defendants The Village sued Howard and Alexander for being peddlers and hawkers in violation of a village ordinance. J. N. Sampson of Adrian represented the defendants and Atty. Rathbun the village.

The judge decided in favor of the defendents. "No cause for action." The village to pay costs

Because of the fact that the interstate commerce law permits the shipment of goods from one state to another. And that the law being a national law, is supreme, any local law affecting this case would be null and void.

There would seem to be little justice shown the merchants of this village by such a law, as it permits peddlers to sell their wares in direct competition. But so long as the house which they represent is not located in Michigan or does not have a warehouse in Michigan, the sale of goods cannot be stopped.

Mail order houses and concerns of this nature are making big inroads in our territory, and our people are buying their goods to save a few cents on each purchase, but do they stop to consider that every dollar which is sent out of this community for these goods goes out to stay; it helps to enrich the coffers of the big mail order house, and on the other hand takes away from this community the money that should be kept in circulation here. Remember that our local merchants have the best of goods on their shelves for sale, their reputation is behind them. You have the right of inspection before buying, and if you buy at home you are helping your home folks and in helping them they are helping you, by sharing the burden of keeping up this community, and through the taxes paid.

DR. ERNEST E. STAFFORD

In the last issue of the herald an account was given of the serious account to Dr, Stafford of Adrian; at Wamplers lake last Sunday. His brother Dr. Spafford of Detroit took him to Harpers Hospital Monday night where specialists found that his neck was broken. He passed away Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, His wife and his father John Spafford of Onsted went with him to Detroit. His body was taken back to Adrian for burial where the funeral was held from St. Marys Catholic church Friday morning.

D. T. & I. SETTLEMENTS

Along with the announcement of a million dollar terminal to be built by the D. T. & I. the Detroit comes the assurance that the company will spenn several thousand dollars to improve their property in Adrian, included in the plans is definite information that work will be commenced upon a new passenger station in Adrian or complete alteration of the present building, which for years has been an eye sore on the company's property on West Maumee St. Engineers of the company were in the city last week going over the property to prepare plans for rebuilding, which will also include alteration and remodeling of the company's freight house it is stated. Work has already been commenced upon the road bed in the southern portion of the city in connection with the tract improvement now being carried on over the entire road. New ties are being put in and a large part of the steel is being replaced with entirely new material. Materials have also arrived for the rebuilding of the river works station on Merrick St.

THAT ACCIDENT

This is just how it happened, the accident funny:
The day was most fair, but most awfully sunny.
The Editor thought to get out of the sun,
With his auto, so just round the corner he run,
Drew up by the roadside, the shadows were low;
'Twas a typical place for an auto you know.
He sat for a moment in quiet reflection
The breeze was so fine and the shade was perfection.
With a rush and a whiz came a Ford from afar.
A woman presiding and driving the car.
The Editor gazed with a wondering eye
To see that machine pass him quietly by
When Fate had decreed it, the impact came quick,
The rebound was sudden, and awfully slick,
"Why didn't you stop ma'am, when you were so near?"
"I couldn't" she answered most truthful and clear.
Her speed was twenty of miles, more or less,
She lost all control, she was free to confess,
The damage was slight but the danger immense,
But all came through safely, with little expense.

CHAUTAUQUA

In the July Review of Reviews will be found an interesting article entitled the "The Chautauqua of Today."

It deals with the origin, number of Chautauquas now in the field, speakers and talent employed, expense of maintainence and some of the salaries paid for talent

The present summer marks the fortieth anniversary of the Chautauqua. There are 800 more Chautauquas in in the United States this summer than there were in 1913 which increases the total to about 2930. More that 2200 of this number are held in tents

In this anniversary year of the Chautauqua movement it will be recalled that Bishop Vincent of the Methodist Church and the late Lewis Miller of Akron, O. began their notable and far-reaching work solely as a religious gathering at or near the northern end of Lake Chautauqua, N. Y. Later a course of systematic study of the bible was inaugurated Then course of arts, crafts, domestic science and the introduction of programs of music and different phases of entertainment until we have the Chautauqua of today.

It is estimated that between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 people attend these meetings yearly. In most places especially the larger ones the price for the season tickets are from $2.00 to $2.50.

The talent is of the best, such men as Hon. W. J Bryan, Champ Clark, ex-Gov. Jos. W. Folk, Cong. Richmond P. Hobson and many others fill Chautauqua dates

The salaries of musicians are equal to those paid theatrical talent aside from the stars.

Mr. Bryan receives the first $250,00 and one-half of all single admissions over $500. Vice-Pres Marshall's fee is $300, Senator LaFollette receives $300 per lecture and lecturers who are engaged by the year from $3000 to $15,000. It is estimated that nearly $14,000,000 is annually paid for Lyceum and Chautaugua talent.

The Chautauqua usually leaves its effect upon a community. It comes into a town with an ideal and before it leaves this ideal is quite apt to be impressed upon the minds of the people.

This article is well worth reading and it will better fit our people to know what to expect in the coming to Tecumseh of the Lincoln Chautauqua. Buy your tickets early.

AT BREAKFAST.

Despite the clouds that threatened early in the morning, it was a merry party that assembled on the Satterthwaite lawn on Union st. this morning for a breakfast party honoring Miss Dororthy Word of Palo Alto, Cal., and to welcome home Miss Beth Satterthwaite from Baltimore, Maryland. Like a cloud of butterflies in their dainty gowns of many colors, they flitted here, and now there, happy to be together and greet one another on this occasion.

The table was spread on the south side of the home, and was beautiful with its snowy linen, its shining glass and silver, and boquets of flowers. Covers were laid for 24 and at 9 o'clock a dainty three course breakfast with Mrs Polly Mattis catering.

During the breakfast hour the announcement was made of the coming marriage of Miss Alice Satterthwaite to Bertram Wood of Palo Alto, Cal., to take place sometime in September.

The morning hours passed all to quickly in social visiting and when the hour of parting came their merry good-byes to their entertainers testified to the pleasure of the hour. The out of town guests were Miss Frances Exelby of Britton, Miss Lulu Brown of Blissfield and Miss Laura Comfort of Philadelphia.

KAISER WILHELM

All Europe Believes He Can Save Europe from General War.

BERLIN — The kaiser is the man of the hour. All Europe believes he can, and at least will try, by virtue of his personality and tremendous influence to save Europe from a general war. Whether or not the kaiser has the power imputed to him, today's despatches from Paris, London and St. Petersburg show plainly that there is a disposition to place the entire responsibility for war upon him if he does not prevent such a catastrophe.

This tendency of the triple entente to make Germany responsible for the action of Austria is sharply resented in governmental circles and by a portion of the press.

ARMY WORM CAUSES LOSS OF $1,000,000

Michigan Farmers Suffer Heavily from Pest.

DETROIT, MICH. — Losses totaling more than $1,000,000 have been sustained by Michigan farmers as the result of the army worm pest, according to an estimate made by Prof. Rufus H. Pettit, head of the department of entomology of the Michigan Agricultural college. He explained that he based his estimate on letters received from farmers in the affected districts.

"Although preventive methods are checking the deadly work of the pest, the crop loss is bound to be much greater before the worms are all killed off," said Professor Pettit.

CASH REGISTER CO. IS FINED

Anti-Trust Law Charge Brings Conviction of Dayton, O., Firm.

LANSING, MICH.—The state supreme court found the National Cash Register company of Dayton, O., guilty of unlawful restraint of trade and imposed a fine of $10,000. The company is restrained from doing business in Michigan until the fine is paid.

The decision was returned in the case of Henry J. James, representing the American Cash Register company, who charged that the National Cash Register company was violating the so-called Michigan anti-trust law, in that it indulged in excessive competition against certain competitors and thereby forced them out of business.

BAY CITY, MICH. — Fire broke out on the top floor of what is known as the Old Moulton house, which is occupied by a number of families who were caught unaware and had difficulty fighting their way through the dense clouds of smoke.

One little girl, about two years old, was left behind. Fireman John Crampton rescued her, badly burned and unconscious. Two attempts had failed when Crampton searched the rooms with the hose playing on him.

The Secret of Health is Elimination of Waste

Every business man knows how difficult it is to keep the pigeon holes and drawers of his desk free from the accumulation of useless papers. Every housewife knows how difficult it is to keep her home free from the accumulation of all manner of useless things. So it is with the body. It is difficult to keep it free from the accumulation of waste matter. Unless the waste is promptly eliminated the machinery of the body soon becomes clogged. This is the beginning of most human ills.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Bravery Wins Deportation.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Heroism of William T. Lane, Englishman, who came to America less than three years ago, has resulted in his deportation.

He lost his mind as the result of perils he underwent when he rushed into a burning house to rescue a little girl. Before that he and his family lived in happiness and plenty. He was employed at the Grand Trunk shops, and when he lost his mind and was sent to the asylum at Kalamazoo his family became dependents. Immigration officers took him to Detroit and he was sent back to his European home.

Mother's Efforts in Vain.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — While in bathering early in the evening Ralph Vanzant 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vanzant, who with three of her other children were in the water, was nearly drowned.

She attempted to save her boy. The boy was caught in the swift current of the Bryant paper mill pond, and before his mother could reach him he had gone down. She was also caught in the current and was nearly drowned before rescued. The boy's body was recovered in about 15 feet of water.

Liquor Men Ban Drunkards.

JACKSON, MICH. — "Come frequently, drink moderately, pay honorably, be good company, part friendly, and go home quietly."

The above advice was handed out by the Michigan State Retail Liquor Dealers' association at the second annual meeting which closed in Jackson. The association members pledged themselves not to sell to men who were in the habit of becoming intoxicated or to men whose families are in need. One hundred and twenty-five delegates were in attendance.

State Seeks Wolf Hunter.

LANSING, MICH. — The state of Michigan wants a man to shoot wolves. He must be a regular "Dick Dead-Eye" with a gun and must be willing to be marooned on Isle Royale all winter. This island, according to the game warden's department, is becoming overrun with wolves. Game is disappearing under the attacks of the ferocious animals and the department has decided that it will employ a hunter.

G. O. P. Meets September 30.

DETROIT, MICH. — The Republican state central committee, meeting here, decided to hold the party's fall state convention in Kalamazoo Sept. 30, the same date on which the state conventions of the Democratic and Progressive parties will be held.

Investigating Post's Residence.

MARSHALL, MICH. — S. D. Pepper, of Attorney General Fellows' office, was here endeavoring to get a clue to the actual legal residence of the late C. W. Post, of Battle Creek. Attorney General Fellows contended that the state was not going to get all the inheritance tax it was entitled to.

A Speculation In Sperm

How the Disabling of the Nancy Gigg Brought Good Fortune to a Sailor

By PAUL C. SCHAFFER

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

As long as there is a sperm or a right whale left wallowing in the seven seas I presume there will sail out of New Bedford a few round bellied, bluff bowed old brigs, as awkward as Chinese junks, but sailed by men who usually would be quite capable of getting around this round world safely on a log of lignum vitae.

Had the master of the Nancy Gigg not been taken seriously ill just as she was filling the last of her 4,000 barrels of sperm and gone home by steamship from Fayal this tale would not have been written, and John Pepper would like enough be knocking about the world somewhere tonight in the fo'castle of a wind jammer or at best holding the billet of second mate.

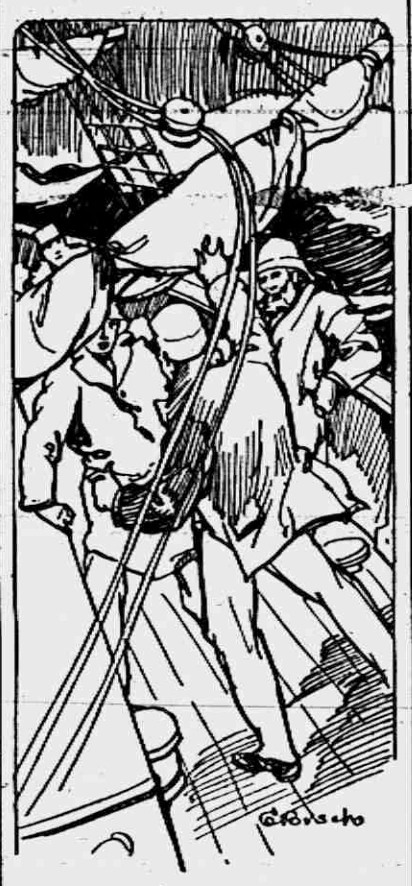
Instead he is running a comfortable ship chandlery business on South street, all the result of what looked at the time like a knockout blow from fate.

John and four other men were incapacitated by what whalemen, in ignorance of proper medical terms, call salt water blisters and were landed from the Sunbeam at Fayal when she put in there with her catch.

She was out for three years. Only half the time was up, and the five invalids could not draw a cent of pay until the ship returned to New Bedford and the owners settled with all hands.

Well, they might have starved on the beaches, only that is impossible in Fayal. They did, however, have a hard time of it until they fell in with men from the Nancy Gigg.

The brig was fitting out for home, but she was a little short handed. During the two years and a half since drifting out of New Bedford harbor she had lost, beside the captain invalided home, the first mate and his boat's crew and several odd men here and there about the world.



HE SENT A MAN TO SOUND THE PUMP WELL

Pepper and his four comrades were not much good, but they were a long sight better than dead men, and they were willing to do what they could aboard the Nancy Gigg for the sake of getting home.

The second mate was in command—a likely enough youngster, but one who got rattled easily when trouble blew his way. And certainly trouble marked the Nancy Gigg for its own on that homeward voyage.

Everything went smoothly until three weeks after leaving Fayal, and when the old brig was nigh in sight of her home coast a full blown gale burst upon her from the northwest, shifting soon to the west.

They got her hove to under a storm trysail, head on to the angry seas, and all might then have gone right and she would have ridden out the gale had not a most unlooked for accident occurred.

The kicking tiller head must needs part its fastenings, and the next minute she was beam on to the rollers, with every wave sweeping her deck clean of everything movable.

A seaman's arm was broken. Another man was carried over the rail and then sucked back by the sea and dashed senseless against the mainmast.

After her long cruise the Nancy Gigg was not very well supplied with boats, and three of those remaining, with a big liferaft, were smashed or swept away before she wallowed out of the trough of the sea.

"She's sprung a terrible leak somewhere, boys!" cried the second mate, and he sent a man to sound the pump well.

Now, all across the ocean from Fayal the old brig hadn't shown enough bilge to keep her sweet, and when the sailor man came running back with the rod wet for eight feet of its length the whole ship's company was demoralized.

And well they might be. A ship that would take in eight feet of sea at such short notice was bound on a quick voyage to Davy Jones, and nothing under heaven could save her!

Well, at such a time it is not only the survival of the fittest, but there are certain rights which all seafaring men recognize.

There was not room for John Pepper and his four friends in the boats of the Nancy Gigg. Indeed, there was scarce safety in them for the crew of the brig without taking outsiders.

Pepper had been a petty officer aboard the Sunbeam, though he was the youngest of the five. He knew something of navigation, and he was a man of keen observation.

He began to think, even before the boats of the brig were swallowed up in the darkness of the storm and night, that for a vessel leaking the way the brig was supposed to leak and with eight feet of water already in her hold she was not as low in the sea as might be expected.

Under the circumstances she could not long keep her decks above water; yet it seemed to him as though now that she was driving steadily before the gale, the Nancy Gigg was not very far down in the water.

He went to the rail and measured the distance between the rollers as best he could.

His companions were pretty silent, but somebody suggested tearing off the main hatch and making a raft of that.

"You'll have the brig filled then in no time," Pepper said.

"And what matter?" was the demand. "She's bound to go down anyway. Eight feet of water made in half an hour or so means that there's a hole in her big enough to drive an ox team through, or else every plank in her bottom is sprung."

"I dunno," said Pepper. "Let's try the pumps."

"An' try an' pump the whole bloomin' Atlantic through her!" they cried, and cursed him soundly for a fool.

So John Pepper went at it alone. He coupled on the pumps, and he worked the heavy brakes himself. It wasn't a minute before he had a stream the full size of the pipe squirting across the deck.

John looked at this and stopped pumping. He went down on his hands and knees and smelled of the overflow from the pipe. Then he tasted it. Then for a long time he squatted there on the pitching deck of the brig and thought.

By and by he went back to his shivering comrades in the galley, where the cook had left a fire.

"Got enough of it, did you?" said they. "Is she settling fast?"

"No, she doesn't settle much," said Pepper slowly.

"Well, let's turn to and knock together some kind of a raft," one of the men said. "The old ship's bound to sink soon anyhow, so we can't be much worse off."

"Perhaps," said Pepper, "and then again perhaps not. If I'll show you fellows how this brig can be saved and brought into port, providing something worse don't happen to her than has happened already, will you agree for me to have half the salvage, you four to divide the other half between you?"

They stared at him in amazement. One muttered: "He's off his chump. It's turned the man's head."

"I'm sane," said Pepper.

"But with eight feet of water in her hold?" gasped another.

"I don't care if there's eighty feet!" exclaimed John. "Answer me."

"Save my life and ye can have all the salvage ye'll ever get out of the Nancy Gigg!" declared one.

Pepper soberly got paper and ink from the captain's cabin, and while the old brig labored and pitched he drew up the document, and his four wondering comrades signed it.

"Now," he said, placing the paper in an inner pocket, "I'll tell you that that dandy second mate of the Nancy Gigg was a blarsted idiot. She ain't leaking enough to hurt."

"Get out, man! I saw the pump rod!" cried one.

"So did I," Pepper returned.

"It was wet full eight feet."

"So it was, but not with water."

The quartet stared at him blankly.

"When the brig broached to," Pepper continued, "the barrels of sperm must ha' got adrift. There's hundreds of 'em smashed, and the hold is flooded with oil. That's what comes through the pipes, and it's what wet the sounding rod. The old brig's as sound as a dollar yet."

Every man of the four had to see the pure oil spurting from the pumps before he could believe Pepper's statement. But at the sight they all plucked up heart.

They were battered a deal by the wind, for gale followed gale for twenty-seven days. Then the Nancy Gigg was nearer the Azores again than the American coast.

So under Pepper's directions an improvised gear was rigged, and thus, steering by "pulley haul," they worked her into Fayal, and Pepper went ashore and told their story to the American consul.

Well, the owners fought the case and tried to make out that the five were members of the Nancy Gigg's crew, and therefore it was their duty to save her if possible, but finally Pepper and his friends won. There probably hasn't been a speculation in sperm oil made in half a century that came out so well for the speculators.

And if you can find John Pepper's shop on South street and drop in some rainy day when business is dull he'll tell you all about it.

Love of Gossip.

One of the chief characteristics of the human race is inquisitiveness—not so much about things and places and ideas as about each other. Every proper person is a born gossip, and the accomplished scandal monger is always welcome, provided, of course, his scandal is about others. You can test this at any time by considering who are the people you like best to meet and who are always surrounded by the greatest number of idle acquaintances. Invariably you must be forced to the conclusion they are those who have made a business of acquiring information about others and retailing their knowledge in various dressings. This love of gossip is further revealed in the kind of books which claim the widest appreciation. You will find that these books are not poetry, drama, science or philosophy. They are novels, memoirs, diaries, intimate histories, recollections, letters—all of them essential gossip (and sometimes scandal) appearing by their power to attract the gossiping sense which exists in all of us.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

By the Rules of the Game.

Little Mary Lou was eager to get back to her new doll and didn't know there was going to be any dessert. She slipped quietly from her chair, hoping she would not be observed.

Out in the hall she met the cook with the ice cream, and as quietly as she had left it she slipped back to her accustomed place at the table.

"Mary Lou," said her mother reprovingly, "I thought you had finished your dinner. It isn't polite to come back."

"But I didn't excuse myself, mother," the little girl said quickly.—New York Post

Miss Kearney, Who Will Appear At Chautauqua the Fifth Day

MISS BELLE KEARNEY.

MISS KEARNEY'S success as an orator has been remarkable. In Toronto, Canada, at Massey Hall, she addressed audiences numbering more than 4,000. She received ovations and was invited to return and lecture at other mammoth meetings. Once she addressed an audience of 10,000 in Royal Albert Hall, London, England, and was cheered repeatedly. She spoke before an audience numbering thousands at Ocean Grove, N. J., where the demonstration was amazing. While delivering an address in New Orleans the audience would stand again and again and applaud. No grander compliment was ever accorded a woman in the south. At a meeting held in Convention Hall, Washington, D. C., Miss Kearney addressed an audience of 10,000. At the close of her lecture she was given a prolonged demonstration.

Miss Kearney will appear on the Lincoln Chautauqua program in this city on the [illegible], afternoon only. The [illegible] will be [illegible] this day by the Hazel Folsom-Daggy Company.

CHAUTAUQUA AT TECUMSEH WEEK OF AUGUST 16—21.

GERMANS REPULSED BY FRENCH

20,000 Defeated at Frontier Is Report.

LUXEMBURG IS INVADED

Grand Duchy Holds Treaty of 1867 Is Violated.

BRITAIN TAKES $10,000,000

Kronprinzessin Cecilie, Carrying the Greatest Treasure on High Seas, is Taken by John Bull as Starter.—War with France to Be Declared In Next Few Hours—All Wireless May Be Cut Off—Strict Censorship Established—Britain Calls for Reserves.

Liege, Belgium, Aug. 3.—A Liege evening newspaper says that 20,000 German troops crossed the French frontier, near Nancy, Sunday morning, encountering French forces, and were repulsed with heavy losses. Confirmation of the information has not been received.

Paris, Aug. 3.—German troops have invaded the neutral Grand Duchy of Luxemburg and are holding the railroad to the French frontier against the protests of Luxemburg that they are violating the treaty of London of 1867.

A trainload of German troops reached the station at the city of Luxemburg in the night, and at once seized the railroad station and the telegraph and telephone lines and established guards at the bridges of the Treves and Trois Vierges line. The possession of this line gives the Germans a clear way across the Grand Duchy into France. The present German base for this army invasion is at Metz, in the province of Lorraine, according to an unconfirmed dispatch from Brussels which says that a German army corps is mobilizing there.

It is expected that France will declare war within a few hours.

Luxemburg contains the richest iron ore fields in Europe.

British Capture $10,000,000 Gold.

New York, Aug. 3.—The Kronprinzessin Cecilie, a German ship laden with $10,600,000 American gold, half consigned to London, half to Paris, which was captured before she reached the English channel by four English cruisers, was supposed to go first to Plymouth, then to Cherbourg, and then to Bremen. She is the finest vessel of the North German Lloyd fleet.

The Kronprinzessin sailed from here on Tuesday and was called—and truthfully—"The greatest treasure ship that has ever sailed from the New World to the Old." Her voyage, which has ended in virtual capture, has been one of the most perilous and picturesque opening incidents of the European war.

The great liner was taken before she had had a chance to try to run the gauntlet of the English channel. The reports received here indicate that the four English cruisers went out to meet her, and it would appear that they must have come up with her as she was steaming under forced draught about 140 miles off Plymouth.

It is understood that when the imminence of a general European war was realized on Thursday night wireless messages from Germany were sent to the Cecilie ordering her to make straight for a German port without stopping anywhere, in any event not stopping at a French or English port. It was then too late to recall the liner which was in midocean.

Germans Capture a Ship.

London, Aug. 3.—It is reported here that the Germans have seized a steamship of the Wilson line in the Kiel canal.

Britain Calls for Reservists.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—A call for all the reservists of the British navy to return to England has been received here. There are many reservists scattered over the United States and Canada.

Strict Censorship Established.

New York, Aug. 3.—A strict censorship of cable messages from France and England has been established at Paris and London.

All Wireless May Be Cut.

New York, Aug. 3.—It is conceded by authorities in New York that Germany has taken over the two great trans-Atlantic wireless stations in the empire, one at Nauen, near Potsdam, the other on the outskirts of Hanover.

The only remaining trans-Atlantic wireless is the Marconi system, and the Marconi service will be almost entirely ended if England goes to war. England will, in case of war, take over all the Marconi stations in the United Kingdom.

England's seizure of Marconi stations would cut off all present trans-Atlantic wireless communication.

Youngstown, O., Aug. 3.—The home of S. G. McClure, owner and publisher of the Youngstown Telegram, which has been active in the temperance cause, was dynamited.

The damage to the house was not great, and no one was injured. There is no clew to the dynamiters.

FREEDOM OF SEA IS UP TO BRITAIN

Hope for American Shipping Is in Her Navy.

SHE CAN PROTECT FRANCE

This is Based on Assumption Island Nation Will Be Drawn Into War—If She Should Remain Out of War, Her Shipping Would Then Be Exempt.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Upon the power of the British navy rests the only hope that remains to the United States that ships will be available for the transportation of American goods during the war. This is the opinion of competent observers of the situation here.

This declaration is based on the assumption that Great Britain will become involved in the war through Germany's reported attack on Britain's ally, France.

In combination with the French fleet it is believed here that the British fleet will not be only able to seek out the German fleet and give it battle, but will also be able to spare enough ships to protect the commerce

Will Bottle up Mediterranean.

France today sent a fleet of twelve vessels through the straits of Gibraltar into the Mediterranean. These vessels with the British fleet will, it is believed, keep the Austrian and Italian navies from doing any great damage to the shipping of their enemies. English and French steamers will therefore be free to go anywhere they please, and particularly to the United States, solely because of the assumed ability of English and French navies to protect such commerce. German ships, on the other hand, will remain bottled up in neutral ports, since to risk a voyage during hostilities would be almost certain to result in capture by British or Frencch vessels. Italian vessels, of which many are engaged in trade with the United States, will be similarly bottled up and likewise the few vessels flying the Austrian flag which ply between European and American ports.

U. S. Must Depend on England.

The impression is growing here that the United States to move its crops over sea will have to depend chiefly on English vessels protected by the English navy, and then the question will arise whether English ship owners will take the risk.

Change Drivers: One Killed.

Decatur, Ind., Aug. 3.—Wade Andrews of Monroe, Ind., was instantly killed and his brothers, John and Jesse, were probably fatally injured when their auto turned over between Monroe and Preble. They attempted to change drivers while the machine was running at high speed and the car went into a ditch.

Aged Iowan Drowns.

Humboldt, Iowa, Aug. 3.—A. B. Nelsen aged fifty, was drowned in the Des Moines river. He fell out of a boat at the river's edge and, although rescued in three minutes, was dead. Whether the case is one of accident is not known. A search is being made for relatives.

Car Runs Down Speeder.

Anderson, Ind., Aug. 3.—Jesse Nieum, a line inspector for the Union Traction company, was instantly killed when an auto speeder, on which he was riding along the Middletown line, was run down by a freight car just east of Mounds Park.

FIREMAN DIES; CHIEF HURT

Interurban Car Strikes Fire Truck Nearly Clear of Track.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Aug. 3.—Clarence Williams, forty-seven years old, a city fireman, was instantly killed and Fire Chief John Hurley was seriously injured at noon when hose wagon No. 2 from the East End department was struck by an incoming interurban car on the northwestern division of the T. H., I. & E. traction line at the intersection of Pike street and Woodlawn place.

The hose wagon was going north on Woodlawn place, answering an alarm occasioned by a grass fire along the Monon railroad. The interurban car was going west. Frank Ezra, driver of the hose wagon, lashed the horses and succeeded in getting the wagon partly across the track. The car struck the hind wheels.

Roads Asked to Aid Safety by State Utilities Commission.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 3.—In a resolution which was adopted by the Illinois public utilities commission in Springfield all steam and electric railroads in the state were directed to remove from their rights of way obstructions interfering with the view of approaching trains.

"In view of the appalling number of accidents that have lately occurred at railroad and highway crossings in the state of Illinois," the resolution reads, "notwithstanding the efforts of this commission, by letters or suggestions, to have said crossings rendered more safe, this commission hereby directs all steam and electric railroads immediately to remove from their rights of way all obstructions of every kind which in any way interfere with the view of approaching trains at railway and highway crossings. And said railroads are further directed to make special efforts to render said crossings safe by giving warning to the public of the approach of trains at said crossings."

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrah) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Old Civil Service Examination.

Lady Dorothy Nevill in one of her books gave an amusing example of the style of examination for posts in the British civil service which prevailed before the advent of the competitive system. The young candidate was ushered into the room of the old chief clerk of the department, and this ordeal followed:

"Sit down, sir," roared a voice of thunder. Then after a painful pause: "Now, sir, attention. I shall examine you in arithmetic."

"Shall I not have pen and paper?"

"No, sir," thundered out the tyrant voice. "Attention! How much are two and two?"

Paralyzed by the voice and sudden question, the youth stared and then gasped out quite seriously:

"Four, sir."

"Quite right, sir," roared out the examiner, slapping him on the back. "You'll do, sir."

But the question surely should have been, "How many blue beans make five?"

The Earth's Interior.

That the interior of the earth is intensely hot is proved by the increase in temperature observed in deep mines and in even deeper borings. It is proved also by the emission of lava, which is nothing more than molten rock, from the craters of volcanoes. But the scientists, who maintain that the earth's interior is not fluid but of the consistency of steel, are probably correct just the same. Matter, when under great pressure, may be rigid even at enormously high temperature. The interior rocks of the earth may be heated to several thousand degrees and still be solid. When pushed up to the surface by volcanic action and relieved from pressure these solid, though superheated, rocks would become immediately liquefied. The practical deep well borers, who find that their drills are softened by the heat of the lower strata, have not got the laugh on the theoretic savants. —Philadelphia Record.

Old Time Gas Charges.

The price of gas in the early part of the last century is shown by a schedule of charges issued by the Liverpool Gaslight company in the year 1817. Instead of so much per cubic foot being levied, each individual burner was charged for, and the price varied according to the hour at which the light was to be extinguished. Thus for using one No. 1 Argand burner up till 8 p. m. £3 per annum had to be paid. For the right to keep it alight until 9 £3 18s. was the figure, while those roistering blades who sat up till 10, 11 or 12 had to disburse £4 16s., £5 12s. and £6 8s. respectively. Imagine the gas bill at a house where ten or twelve burners are flaring away until the small hours if such a method of taxation were in force nowadays!—Liverpool Post.

Kent and Burr.

James Kent, famous for his "Commentaries on American Law," was a great admirer of Alexander Hamilton, and when the great Federalist was killed by Aaron Burr in a duel he became the implacable enemy of the latter. One day long afterward when in New York the judge saw Burr on the opposite side of Nassau street. He went across the street as fast as his years would permit and, brandishing his cane in Burr's face, shouted:

"You're a scoundrel, sir, a scoundrel, a scoundrel!"

Burr proved equal to the emergency. He raised his hat and bowed to the ground and then said in his calmest professional tone, "The opinions of the learned chancellor are always entitled to the highest consideration."

Seasons Indoors.

There is nothing much more insidious in the whole net of habit that is always being wound about us than the growing claims of certain pieces of furniture to be used in certain ways. I do not mean to advocate a state of daily instability in one's surroundings, where nothing has a place of its own and you can never find a buffet or a coalbox when you want it. Still, to allow summer and winter to go by without any proper recognition within the house beyond stuffing a painted fan in the fireplace and sticking up a few muslin curtains is simply miserable.—London News.

GEORGE P. FROST

George P. Frost, for many years a blacksmith, died at his home in Macon yesterday morning. Cause of death, cerebral softening.

He was born in Pennsylvania Feb 22, 1847 and leaves the wife and one son Jessie to mourn his death. The funeral is to be held Thursday at 2 p. m. from the Macon Methodist church.

THOMAS CRAIG

Thomas Craig a resident of Britton for 49 years died Saturday night, aged 79 years. He leaves seven children to mourn, one of whom is Miss Sarah Craig of this village. The others are Mrs. John Baxter, Detroit; Mrs Ben Haight, Cone; Mrs. A. W. Lee, Wilson, John and the Misses Anna and Mary of Britton. The wife had preceeded him some three years ago. The funeral services are held this afternoon from the home with burial at Ridgeway.

MRS. KITTIE JUDSON

Friends in Tecumseh are greatly grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. Kittie Judson who passed away Saturday evening at the home of C. E. Judson at Lenawee Junction. Mrs. Judson formerly Kittie B. Goff was born in Franklin Dec 28, 1879. She became the wife of Glenn Judson December 31, 1902 and two children were born to them, both of whom have died. For several years she has made her home with Mr. Judson's parents.

The French Academy.

The French academy is one of the five academies and the most eminent constituting the Institute of France. It was founded in 1635 by Cardinal Richelieu and reorganized in 1816. It is composed of forty members, the new member elected by the remaining thirty-nine members for life after personal application and the submission of the nomination to the head of the state. It meets twice weekly and is "the highest authority on everything pertaining to the niceties of the French language—to grammar, rhetoric and poetry and the publication of the French classics." The chief officer is the secretary, who has a life tenure of his position. A chair in the academy is the highest ambition of most literary Frenchmen.

The Land of Long Words.

Humboldt once said that nothing in Mexico strikes Europeans more forcibly than the excessive length of the words. This length, moreover, does not always depend on their being compounded, as in the Greek, the German or the Sanskrit. Thus the Mexican word for that simple thing, a kiss, is tetennamiquiliztli.

But that is nothing, says Mr. Charles W. Domville-Fife in his book on Guatemala, to what the Central American can do. His best efforts eclipse even Shakespeare's often quoted "honorificabilitudinitatibus," in "Love's Labour's Lost," for if you wish to call the boy who carries newspapers, you have but to murmur "amatlacuilolitquitcatlaxahuille," and he may possibly come.

TECUMSEH INDEPENDENTS WINS AGAINST ALBION

Score 4 to 1

Tecumseh defeated Albion in a well played game at Albion. Lenardson pitched a very steady game walking only one man and allowing but 6 hits.

Albion drew first blood scoring their only run in the second. Tecumseh evened it up in the third and went into the lead in the fourth by getting two runs. Then one more in the seventh finished the scoring. Ed. Rogers leaned on a fast one for a home run.

The Jackson Eagles journey here next Sunday. A good game is expected as the Eagles are the champion independent team of Jackson. The score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R	H	E

BARNES' WILD ANIMAL CIRCUS

General Contracting Agent Murray A. Pennock of the Al. G. Barnes Wild Animal Circus was here yesterday arranging for the appearance of the Barnes Show in Tecumseh on Monday, August 17th.

Wherein does the wild animal circus differ from the old-time regulation circus was asked?"

"The Barnes circus is different because the entire entertainment offered is given by trained animals—largely wild animals," replied Mr. Pennock.

Al. G. Barnes the wild animal training wizard and proprietor of the Barnes shows, was the originator of the wild animal circus, launching the innovation nine years ago. That the new amusement idea met with approval from the public is attested by the fact his circus now ranks as the largest animal show in the world.

"For thirty-five years, Mr. Barnes has been a trainer of wild animals, and early in his career decided that the public would welcome an exclusive, clean, wholesome entertainment given by educated animals, and to that purpose he bent his efforts." Every one of the 600 acting animals, now with this great show, has been trained under his personal supervision the greatest number ever assembled in one collection."

"Big, thrilling, sensational wild animal features predominate on the program lions, tigers, leopards, jaguars, pumas, and bears being shown in great groups. 24 African lions appear in the arena at one time under one trainer's direction. Elephants, camels, zebras, seals, sea lions, kangaroos, dogs, goats, monkeys, and a troupe of 550 beautiful horses and ponies are a part of this animal-acting aggregation."

"A many sided man is our Mr. Barnes. He fondles the lions, tigers and bears and they answer his call as that of a friend. When they become unruly or "go bad," Barnes becomes the trainer and reduces the beasts to a state of tractibility again, he is known as the only circus owner in the world who can work any act in the show. Horses are his particular hobby, and with his show can be seen some of the finest bred and best trained horses known to exist."

Easily Answered.

"I'm a little short and will propound to you a question in mental arithmetic."

"All right, go ahead."

"Well, suppose you had $10 in your pocket and I should ask you for $5, how much would remain?"

"Huh! Ten dollars."—Chicago News.

Yellow Fever on the Amazon.

Iquitos is a town on the Amazon river within four degrees of the equator. An equatorial swamp not only surrounds the place, but thrusts invading swales into the city itself. Open sewers run the length of the principal streets, which are quite innocent of paving. Yet an American surgeon, loaned from the public health service and loyally supported by the Peruvian government of the place, has driven out yellow fever even under such disadvantages as these and reduced the general death rate from forty-nine per thousand per year to twenty-eight. In the face of such an achievement, what excuse has any American city for harboring preventable disease?—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Haggis as the Scotch Make It.

To make haggis take the heart, tongue and small liver of the sheep, one pound of bacon, four ounces of crumbs of bread, the rind of one lemon, two eggs, two anchovies (sardines may be used), a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Chop the heart, tongue, liver and bacon, mix thoroughly, add the breadcrumbs, the anchovies, chopped fine; the lemon rind, grated; then the pepper and salt. Beat the eggs and pour them over. Pack this into a kettle or mold, cover and boil or steam continuously for two hours. Turn it on a dish and serve very hot.

Seven Wonders of the World.

The seven wonders of ancient times were the pyramids of Egypt, the hanging gardens of Babylon, the temple of Diana at Ephesus, the statue of Jupiter by Phidias, the mausoleum of Artemisia and the Colossus of Rhodes. Seven wonders of the modern world have been given as the wireless telegraph, the telephone, the aeroplane, radium, antiseptics, spectrum analysis and X rays.—New York American.

ELECTRIC ROAD COMING?

Visit from Promoters of T., A. A. & J. Ry. Yesterday to MEET COMMERCE CLUB.

Yesterday afternoon the Commerce Club were called together to meet Messrs. Fisher of Joliet, Ill., Peters and O. H. Russell of Petersburg, who were going over the proposed route of the Toledo, Ann Arbor & Jackson Ry. which is already laid and in use from Toledo to Petersburg.

Mr. Fisher represents the Ingalls estate which is one of the main owners of the road and it was their object to determine the feasibility of going on with the project and pushing the road through to Tecumseh, the lakes and Jackson.

The club gave them their moral support and advised the visitors that in their opinion the people hereabouts are enthusiastic for the road.

History as She Is Wrote.

A text book of history, written by one Ilujavski, for Russian schools, contains some extraordinary statements, among them these, which the London Star translates:

"Louis XVI. was a peaceable and gentle monarch, who, in the course of his long reign, showed himself particularly skillful in finding expert ministers of finance. Loved and honored by his people, the aged monarch died suddenly after a glorious reign as the result of a fit of apoplexy. He was succeeded by his son, Louis XVII., who was obliged to conduct several wars, wherein the captain of his hosts, the royal marshal, Napoleon Bonaparte, conquered a great part of Europe for his king. Napoleon, however, abused his power and made a public attempt to rebel against his liege lord and to compass his own ambitious ends. Under the leadership of Alexander I., king and autocrat of all the Russias, the general was deposed, deprived of all his honors and dignities and all claims to pension. He was banished to St. Helena."

First Omnibus.

"Omnibus" was an almost brand new word in its modern sense when Shillibeer took it from the French in 1829, and in France the name possessed a special significance for those who knew their history, for from 1672 to 1676 Paris had already seen a regular service of roomy public vehicles, "carosses à cinq sous." Only these predecessors of the modern bus were not "omnibus"—for all. The letters patent which instituted them for the benefit of middle class people laid down that they were not to be used by soldiers, lackeys or any other wearers of livery or artisans and laborers. These exclusive vehicles faded out of existence, and the new ones, which were started in Paris in 1828, were named "omnibus" expressly to signify their democratic character. — London Chronicle.

Crockett Wouldn't Have Maggie.

The first school the late S. R. Crockett attended was the Free Church school in the village of Laurieston, of that parish, distant three miles from his home. When he was a very wee chap "Sam" used to be accompanied to school by Maggie—a girl somewhat older than himself, who was supposed to look after him. Their daily appearance together led one of the villagers to say to him one day as the couple passed her door: "Man, Sam, I think ye'll be mairryin' Maggie some day; ye're aye thegither." "Mairry Maggie ——," was the indignant boy's response. "She disna ken the names o' the kings o' Israel yet!" The lady whose suggestion to the future novelist was so contemptuously received often recalled the incident with amusement.—Westminster.

Ends of the Earth.

If you stand at the north pole you can look in only one direction—south. No matter how you may twist around on your heels, it is always toward the south that your eyes are directed. North as a terrestrial direction has vanished. You have arrived at the end of north. You are "where it lives." Or else we may say that north has suddenly sprung into the sky and is now at an unattainable distance directly over your head. A moment before your foot touched the pole north was straight ahead of you, and you had all the four cardinal points to choose from —east, west, north and south. Now three of them have vanished and south alone remains. The reverse is true at the south pole, where all directions on the earth's surface are alike north. In view of these facts we may speak of the north and south poles as the "ends of the earth." They are the two turning points, arrived at either one of which there is no choice left but to start toward the other.—New York Journal.

BOOSTER IS A CHAP WHO WILL NOT DOWN

Man Who Believes In Now and Is Chautauqua Fan.

A booster is a man who undertakes to do a thing that should be done for the common benefit of the people. He is a man who believes actively that things should be done and kept as well as they could be done and kept. He believes in patches on clothes, but not in dirty clothes. He believes in roads, but in good roads only.

A booster believes that children can have just as much fun and a good deal more in playing "three deep" or "handball" with his neighbors than he could have in smoking cigarettes or playing poker in the hayloft of his neighbor's barn. Of course, he knows that in the former case he must give the children a very small amount of attention, directly and indirectly.

A booster is a man who believes in himself and believes in his neighbors. He believes that it is better to live eighty happy years than to live sixty lonely and selfish ones. He is a man who knows that the heart of the average man is good and that our failures are accounted for largely in our frailty and ignorance and in our stupid contentment.

This booster man is a Chautauqua fan. He is the man who is urging you and your neighbor and your neighbor's son to attend the most delightful, suggestive, interesting, scintillating program that perhaps has ever been given in this community; one that is crammed with strong discussions, lectures and interpretations that follow a prologue of interesting, catchy music; that brings on the immortal clown with his face paint and his compelling laughter; that provides a homecoming and community reunion, a visit with John and Mary and the kiddies.

In your heart you are a booster. Here is the time and the place to let your heart out. You ought to live a long time yet and be very happy and very successful. After a week's vacation with the Chautauqua people the recipe for such life will be indelibly written in your own experience. Get a season ticket; one for every member of the family; have a vacation; have one that will be worth a million, and cheap at that.

At Tecumseh, August 16-21.

Elephant and Tiger Enmity.

One of the most interesting employments of the elephant is in hunting tigers. From the lofty back of his elephant, at a height which, increased by the howdah, may be twelve or fourten feet above the ground, the hunter can take his aim at a tiger with a coolness that he would not possess if facing the animal on terra firma. If, as sometimes occurs, the tiger makes a leap for the elephant he seldom succeeds in attaining the man in the howdah, although the driver in his exposed position on the elephant's neck, is in greater danger.

There seems to be a natural enmity between elephants and tigers, although an elephant will not attack a tiger unless cornered or compelled to do so by the tiger's own fault. But then a good fighting elephant will if he can once get his tusks to bear on his enemy gore him to death or literally crush him by kneeling on him. It is said that the mere presence of a dead tiger will drive some elephants to fury.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

The Secret of Health is Elimination of Waste

Every business man knows how difficult it is to keep the pigeon holes and drawers of his desk free from the accumulation of useless papers. Every housewife knows how difficult it is to keep her home free from the accumulation of all manner of useless things. So it is with the body. It is difficult to keep it free from the accumulation of waste matter. Unless the waste is promptly eliminated the machinery of the body soon becomes clogged. This is the beginning of most human ills.

Faded Flowers

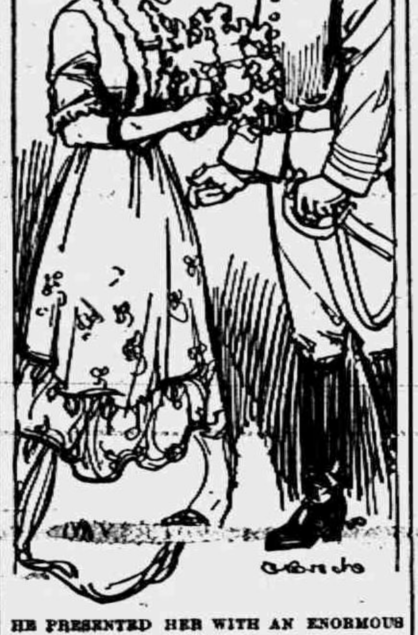
A Story of the American Age of Chivalry

By F. A. MITCHEL

Howard Huntington was graduated at West Point with the class of 18—. That was a period wherein chivalry was expressed in the old fashioned way. The cadets and officers of the army were gentlemen of the "old school." The association at the Military academy for four years under able and gentlemanly instructors, the beautiful scenery about them, the occasional visits of the softer sex to the academy conduced to make refined men of them.

Huntington on graduating was assigned to the artillery as brevet second lieutenant to await a vacancy before being made a full fledged officer and was ordered to join his company at Fort Marion, St. Augustine, Fla.

Fort Marion was then and is now calculated to inspire reveries of the days of chivalry. It takes one back four centuries—a century before the settlement of Jamestown in Virginia—to that Easter Sunday when Ponce de Leon discovered the peninsula on which it stands. Built of sea shell material it has outlived fortresses of a later date constructed of stone. To the east of it lie the same waters on which the Spaniard came, and about it is the same luxuriant tropical foliage he found there.



HE PRESENTED HER WITH AN ENORMOUS BOUQUET.

When Lieutenant Huntington was at Fort Marion there were no summer visitors in Florida, the only ladies at the post being the wives and daughters of the officers of the army. He found there the family of the commander, Colonel Wheelock, consisting of Miss Wheelock and their two daughters, Maud and Ethel. The older girl, Maud, who was nineteen, and Huntington gave evidence of being mutually pleased with each other from their first meeting. The day after his arrival they began a series of wanderings on the beach or over the paths lined with tropical verdure about the fort. Whether watching the majestic waves or listening to the mocking birds singing in the moss draped trees over their heads, the words were the same. "I love you," said the waves. "I love you," said the birds. But neither Howard Huntington nor Maud Wheelock said this with their voices—only with their eyes.

There was little to occupy either, and these strollings were frequent and of long duration. When the two came in from one of them Huntington would go to his room, take up his guitar and accompany himself singing one of the ballads of the day, either "Isabel," "Flow on, Thou Shining River" or "Will Watch." He had a sweet tenor voice which Maud could hear in her father's quarters and she knew he was singing to her.

Then came the Seminole war, and most of the garrison were ordered to fight the Indians. The day of the lovers' parting was to follow soon after the day of meeting. Youth lives only in the present. They knew that the days were growing less in which they would be together and that the lieutenant was going into danger. He might never return. Yet they were so absorbed in each passing hour that they had no time to think of the coming moment when he should leave her, quite likely to fall under an Indian rifle or tomahawk.

The army is no place for pessimism. The garrison, instead of mourning over the parting, arranged a ball, to take place the night before the troops were to march. Could the length and horrors of war be realized in the beginning it is doubtful if that early enthusiasm could be excited. The ardor of these soldiers and their families at Fort Marion would certainly have been dampened had they known that the war they were about to engage in would last seven years, and more especially that one of the companies which was to go from Fort Marion to fight the redskins would every man be massacred.

Howard Huntington was not thinking of the Seminoles or the Everglades or the scalps of his comrades that would be taken. He was meditating on something far closer to him. He wished for some delicate method of making a formal proposal to the girl he loved. When the evening for the dance came round, at the opening of the festivities he presented her with an enormous bouquet of flowers. There were few, if any, cultivated plants about the fort then, and nearly all of this collection had been gathered from those growing spontaneously. Miss Wheelock took the gift from the hands of the young officer with downcast eyes, for it as well as preceding attentions seemed to surely indicate that before the night had passed she would be his betrothed.

The dancing was kept up to a late hour, and there seemed to be no cloud on the festivities, though the older officers' wives doubtless felt the seriousness of the occasion. Maud every moment expected that her lover would draw her away from the throng and tell her what she was longing to hear; but, though he danced with her often, he made no such move. When the evening had passed and they parted without his having spoken great was her disappointment. Instead of leaving him with a kiss of betrothal it was with the ordinary inclination to which they had been accustomed.

The next morning Huntington was busy preparing for the move, which was to take place shortly before noon. Maud appeared several times on the parade, saying goodby to different persons who were to leave. Huntington watched her wistfully, evidently expecting her to call him to her. But she did not. On the contrary, she took no especial notice of him. At last the column was formed, the pioneers with their axes at the head, the wagons in the center, and at the word "Forward!" the band struck up an inspiriting air, and the march was begun.

* * * * * * * *

When the war between the states came on Major Howard Huntington cast his lot with the Confederates and became a general in one of their armies. From the time he had left Fort Monroe for the Seminole war till three years had passed he did not return there. When he did return Colonel Wheelock had been relieved from the command by another officer and had gone north with his family. The colonel died before the war of '61-5. Maud Wheelock remained a maid. She had numerous offers, but she declined them all. With her mother and sister after Colonel Wheelock's death she resided in Washington.

When the surrender came at Appomattox General Huntington retired to an estate he had inherited in Virginia and when the reconstruction period was over was elected to congress. He had not been in Washington long before he heard that his old sweetheart was there. He wrote her a note asking if she remembered a certain Lieutenant Huntington whom she had met thirty years agone when her father commanded at Fort Marion. If so he would be pleased, with her permission, to call upon her.

He received a reply that Miss Wheelock remembered Lieutenant Huntington very well and had since often seen his name mentioned as General Huntington of the Confederate army. She would be much pleased to renew their acquaintance that had been broken so long before. Huntington made the call and greeted his former sweetheart with one of those ceremonious bows to which he had from his youth been accustomed. Then they sat down and paid each other compliments, each telling the other that time had made scarcely any change, considering the falsehood atoned for by the pleasure given.

"Are you married, general?" asked Miss Wheelock.

"Married! No! I gave my heart to you thirty years ago and you have held it ever since."

"Then why did you not tell me so?"

"I wrote it."

"I received no written avowal."

"You remember the ball that took place before the departure of the troops for the Seminole war? On that evening I handed you a bouquet in the center of which was a note."

Miss Wheelock sat looking at the general with a singular expression on her face. Then without speaking she arose and went upstairs, her guest waiting for her return. In a few moments she returned with a mass of withered flowers, or, rather, stems.

"This is the remains of the bouquet you gave me on that occasion. I will show you that it contains no"—

She stopped speaking, for she drew forth a little folded piece of paper yellow with age. Opening it, she read a proposal couched in boyish, florid language, the proposer asking her to reply before he marched away.

"That is the first time I have ever seen it," she said with inexpressible sadness and a world of regret in her eyes.

"Had you found it would your reply have been favorable?"

"Certainly! I had every reason to expect your declaration."

"Then consider it repeated."

What a difference in the directness of this proposal and the one made so many years before! The one was carefully concealed under a mass of flowers as if the proposer feared to make it and did so with the expectation that it would not be found. The other was brutal in its bluntness. The first smacked of the earlier part, the last of the latter part of the nineteenth century.

FLEETS ARE FIGHTING IN NORTH SEA

France and Germany Officially at War.

DIRIGIBLES SHELL TOWN

Limburg, Holland, Invaded by Kaiser's Troops.

ENGLAND SENDS ULTIMATUM

By Today Is Is Certain Six Nations Will Be Involved in European War—English Navy Mobilizes in North Sea—Declaration of War Expected Today—Great Britain's Ultimatum to Germany Expires.

LONDON — Great Britain's ultimatum to Germany demanding by midnight satisfactory answer to matter of Belgium neutrality has expired.

PARIS — The regiment Austrian infantry comprising 10,000 men supported by heavy artillery, advanced against the Servians, but were repulsed, leaving many dead and wounded on the field.

WASHINGTON — The German embassy served notice on the United States that a "state of war" exists between France and Germany. It is tantamount to a declaration of war, but technically different.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM — Rumors were in circulation that Germany had actually declared war on Belgium. German troops crossed the frontier at Gemmenich, near the junction of the Dutch, Belgian and German frontiers.

LONDON — France and Germany are officially at war. The formal announcement was made in Berlin, where the foreign office handed the French ambassador his passports.

French aviators are reported as having attacked German air men near Longwy, where a battle is in progress. Germans dwropped bombs on historic Luneville, killing fifteen.

LONDON — The German cruiser Breslau bombarded the French naval station of Bona, Algeria, at 4 p. m., after steaming off at full speed in a westerly direction, according to a dispatch received at the French embassy here.

TOKIO — The Japanese foreign office issued a statement that if the war extends to the far East and England is involved in it, Japan may find it necessary to participate in fulfillment of the Anglo-Japanese allianee.

LONDON — Belgium has defied Germany. In the house of commons Sir Edward Grey announced that Germany had notified Belgium that she would treat her as an emeny unless the Belgians consented to maintain an attitude of friendly neutrality. Belgium refused and announced that she was prepared to resist aggression by every means in her power. The king himself has taken command of the army.

LONDON — A Central News dispatch from Brussels quotes the Belgian war minister denying that German troops have occupied Vise and saying that the soldiers there are Belgians.

BERLIN — German military officers at Stuttgart reported to the war office their seizure of $20,000,000 in gold, consigned to Rusia. The gold was part of a shipment forwarded to Russian banks for use of the czar's government.

Heavy Firing in North Sea.

LONDON — The Express says: "As we go to press we learn from high authority that heavy firing has been going on for some time in the North Sea. Firing in such volume indicates the participation of many ships."

As England and Germany are not yet at war the encounter could only be between German and French ships.

The only suggestion of any French squadron in the North Sea was contained in a dispatch from Dover stating that a French fleet had passed there Monday afternoon. This has not been confirmed.

Germans Invade Limburg, Holland.

BRUSSELS — The Burgomaster of Antwerp announced that the Germans had invaded Limburg, Holland, and that the province had been placed under martial law. Limburg has a population of nearly a quarter of a million. The people of the Dutch Kingdom, resolved to go to any extremity, are said to be opening the dykes and flooding the country, which would make the passage of an army impossible.

German Envoy Quits Paris.

"The German ambassador, Baron von Schoen, left Paris at 10 o'clock p. m. He visited the French foreign minister for the last time Monday afternoon and protested against attacks on German ships in Paris and alleged frontier raids by French troops.

"Immediately on Baron von Schoen's departure the French ambassador at Berlin was instructed to demand his passports.

Trans-Atlantic Station Closes.

NEW YORK — Rather than risk breach of neutrality laws it was decided to close the Trans-Atlantic wireless station at Tuckerton, N. J. This station, employing the Goldschmidt apparatus, communicated only with a tower at Hanover, Germany, and not with ships at sea.

England Assures France.

LONDON — Sir Edward Grey told the house of commons that he had "given France the assurance that if the German fleet came into the English channel or through the North Sea to undertake hostile operations against the French coast or shipping, the British fleet would give all the protection in its power."

LONDON. — With the state set for the world's greatest conflict, the four great nations of the European continent are at war. England, the mightiest of them all, is mobilizing.

All Europe stands aligned—Russia, France, England and Servia allied against Germany and Austria—four against two. Twenty millions of men offer their lives.

England's vast fleet is mobilized in the North Sea, ready to pounce upon the German squadrons should they venture from Danish waters.

Declaration of war is left to the British house of commons.

A German troop train traversing Alsace-Lorraine was blown up and 230 troops were killed, according to a private dispatch received in New York.

Germany violated the neutrality of Belgium, which is guaranteed by England, by seizing Arlon, and invaded Switzerland, seizing Basle.

Antwerp, the Belgian port, is reported blockaded by British ships.

BANKS ARE FIRM

Grave Crisis Is Met by Government and Financiers.

WITHOUT RULES OF GUIDANCE

Measures Resorted to Since Friday to Cope With Emergency Produce Period Free From Exciting Manifestations—Banks in Large Centers Issue Certificates—Notice on Savings.

NEW YORK — Whatever apprehension had been entertained as to the possibility of a more severe and disturbing financial reflection at the outset of the new week of the international blow dealt finance and trade by the European war has been quickly relieved. Thanks to the prompt and energetic action taken by the banking interests of the country and the government in co-operation there is a feeling in the banking community that the situation is well in hand.

The measures resorted to since last Friday morning to cope with an emergency of unprecedented magnitude and significance were continued over Sunday and Monday and the effect which they produced was manifest in the freedom of the day from exciting manifestations of any description.

Meet Unprecedented Situation.

There was general recognition of the fact that for a situation so unprecedented there were no rules to guide and that the steps taken to meet its exegencies had to be dictated by the most unintelligent estimate possible of the developments as they unfolded themselves. The prevailing opinion of the financial community is that the various precautionary processes from the closing of the stock exchange on Friday to the issuance of clearing house certificates in this and other cities will permit the country to maintain its trade and industrial equilibrium and that there remain now chiefly to be dealt with the problem presented by the dislocation of the foreign exchange market.

There is a substantial amount of money owing by us abroad on open account, the bills accruing in the next thirty to ninety days. There is entire agreement that further remittance of gold, even if possible, would be desperately unwise. It would help Europe little and hurt us more.

Will Issue Certificates.

Before the hour for the opening of the banks for business here the clearing house association voted to issue clearing house loan certificates. These permit the banks to settle their daily balances with each other without the use of gold and resort to them is not to be criticised academically but commended as a practical provision of ready facilities against the unknown contingencies of the future. The action of the New York clearing house was imitated at Philadelphia, Boston and other centers and is a part of the general plan for maintaining the credit machinery of domestic business in full operation.

Fewer Aliens Enter Port Huron.

PORT HURON, MICH. — The monthly report of the local immigration office shows a decrease in number of aliens admitted to the United States at this point, compared with last year. The number who passed through Port Huron en route to the Canadian northwest is given as 1,950.

AVIATOR FALLS 100 FEET; IS UNINJURED

Thousands Witness Spectacular Accident in Bay City.

BAY CITY, MICH. — H. M. Deremer, local aviator, had a narrow escape from death when his hydro-aeroplane plunged from a height of 100 feet into Saginaw bay about two miles off Wenonah beach.

Deremer started away from his hangar in a spectacular manner, soaring 200 feet or more in the air. He was in the air six and a half minutes when his engine stalled. He attempted to volplane to the water but the wind was so gusty that he was unable to control the planes. As he struck the water the machine turned completely over. He held on to his seat and quickly swam to the surface, climbing to the top of the upturned craft.

A spray about thirty feet in height marked the contact with the water. Launches quickly put out to his rescue, and the hydro-aeroplane minus one pontoon was towed to within half a mile of shore.

A heavy sea was rolling and the machine is almost a complete wreck. Deremer was uninjured.

MANY UNDER ACCIDENT LAW

11,000 Employers Are Now Under Compensation Act.

LANSING, MICH. — There are 11,954 employers of labor in Michigan operating under the Michigan industrial accident compensation, according to figures compiled today for the State Industrial Accident commission. Employes in the service of these employers number 479,4453.

The report indicates also that of these employers 10,267 have placed their risks in the hands of stock insurance companies, 489 carry state insurance, 404 are protected by mutual insurance companies and 468 carry their own risk. In the latter class are the railroad and big mining companies. About 300 are at present unclassified.

ONE KILLED; ONE WILL DIE

Jackson Engineer Meets Death In Wreck Near Hudson.

ADRIAN, MICH. — Engineer A. L. Baldwin of Jackson was killed and Fireman Harry Randall of Vandewert, O., so badly injured that he will die when the "cannon ball" train on the Cincinnati Northern railroad left the track about two miles north of Hudson.

The engine and tender were hurled from the track and overturned. Baldwin was flung from his cab into a nearby field and was picked up dead. Randall's collar bone was broken, and he was badly cut about the head. A broken rail is believed to have caused the accident. The engine was running backward, but at the head of the train, when the accident occurred.

AMERICANS WILL GET AID

Administration Undertakes to Send Funds to Stranded Tourists Aboard.

WASHINGTON — With the news of the precipitation of other nations into the conflict hourly expected, President Wilson and his advisers squared themselves to the task of protecting American credit, preserving American foreign trade and succoring a quarter of a million tourists in or near the zone of war.

Of momentous importance to those who have friends in Europe is the announcement that the administration will undertake at once to transmit gold or the equivalent of gold to stranded Americans abroad.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Summer Constipation Dangerous.

Constipation in Summer time is more dangerous than in the fall, winter or spring. The food you eat is often contaminated and is more likely to ferment in your stomach. Where the Road is Water.

Writing of a tour of Holland, Arnold Bennett in the Century says:

"After a few weeks I began to perceive that Schiedam and similar places, though thrilling, were not the whole of Holland and perhaps not the most representative of Holland. As the yacht worked northward Holland seemed to grow more Dutch until in the chain of shallow lakes and channels that hold Friesland in a sort of permanent baptism we came to what was for me the ideal or celestial Holland—everything done by water, even grass cut under water, and black and white cows milked in the midst of ponds and windmills over the eternal flatness used exclusively to shift inconvenient water from one level to another. The road is water in Friesland, and all the world is on the road. If your approach to a town is made perilous by a succession of barges that will obstinately keep the middle of the channel you know that it is market day in that town and the farmers are rolling home in agreeable inebriation."

Locating a Broken Wire.

When a telegraph wire is broken or damaged, say, several hundred miles away, how does the operator, sitting in his office, know exactly where the accident occurred?

The explanation is simple. It requires, as every one knows, considerable force to send electricity through a wire. The longer the wire the greater, of course, must be the force required. This force is measured in units, called by electricians "ohms." Let us suppose that a wire between a New York office and a point 150 miles away has broken somewhere. The telegrapher knows that when the wire was intact there were required, say, 2,100 ohms to facilitate the current, or fourteen ohms to the mile. He now finds that he can send a current with only 700 ohms. Dividing 700 by 14, he finds that the break in the wire is fifty miles from his end.—New York Tribune.

UNCLE EPHRAIM IS A CHAUTAUQUA FAN

Says He Is Going With All the Kiddies to Every Session.

TO HEAR AND SEE TALENT.

"Yes, sir!" said Uncle Ephraim. "It's a fact. I believe it is just as sacred to play as it is to pray. I believe it is just as much a part of the human family's needs to play some, laugh some and grow young as it is to sing some and pray some and listen to a sermon. Me for some fun every summer! I am either going to the mountains or down to the lake or over to Farmer Jones' grove to the picnic or somewhere.

"They tell me that this summer we are going to have a Chautauqua here; that it is a Chautauqua named after Abraham Lincoln; that there are people to lecture, sometimes seriously and sometimes humorously; that there are people who play musical instruments; people who sing; that some folks are makeup artists who impersoniate and imitate other folks, and that some are actors; that some make drawings with crayons; that there are bands and orchestras; that there is a lot of fun in the program; some of the greatest men and women of the country will tell us what they see and think that is worth while and that fills heart chinks with gladness and the air with merriment.

"I understand that these folks have as much fun in singing and acting and playing as you can have at a National league ball game, or when you go fishing, or play 'Run, sheep, run,' and I'll be doggoned if I ain't going to take that in if [illegible] I ever do.

"Me for the Chautauqua—to sit under that sage green tent in a good chair and listen to a man talk who knows how to talk, or a girl sing who can sing some, or somebody play a part who looks it and acts it to a fault. My neighbors and I and all the kiddies are going to take this week off to play with these Chautauqua folks and have the time of our lives. Yes, sir; you bet!"

35 YEARS AGO.

August 7, 1879

H. W. Stevens on Saturday sold eight of the Emerson, Fisher & Cole, Cincinnati buggies.

E. Van De Mark gave us a call the other day. He has been travelling for Adams, Jewett & Co. of Cleveland but will take a short vacation at his old home in Clinton.

Uncle Bill Nixon's birthday was last Friday Aug. 1st. He came out with the boys that evening with his fife, and never played better in his life. The boys picked up enough funds to buy him a new set of teeth He will soon be a young man again.

The Drum Corps and the base ball boys will please accept our hearty thanks and our most polite bow for their serenade last Thursday night. The Tecumseh people felt almost as happy Thursday night as they did Wednesday night, and it wouldn't take a man long to interpret the reason why.

Dr. R. B. House had quite a serious runaway last week. He went around with his head tied up for a day or two, but is all right now.

BASEBALL NOTES.

The Association offered the Toledo Modocs $20 to come here for a game, but they couldn't afford it.

The Cass club of Detroit expected to come here next Tuesday, but owing to other arrangements cannot come until the 22d, if they come at all.

Jehial Davison has erected a lemonade stand on the baseball grounds.

L. P. Tribou, Sec'y of the Association is corresponding with Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor and Sturgis for games at those places.

The Dundee boys want to play the Tecumseh boys a game. The Association offered them 60 per cent of the gate money by way of an inducement. They will probably come.

TECUMSEH STAR.

The Mission band of the Baptist church of Tecumseh under the above name, will hold a fair and literary entertainment Thursday evening August 14th in the church parlors. The band since its organization have been under the direction and leadership of Mrs. Frank Bryan. The exercises will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

The Young People's Society connected with the Baptist church will give an ice cream festival at the church parlors on the evening of Aug. 14, 1879. W. F. Fisher, Sec'y.

Things Fatal to Healthy Life.

If we cease to struggle or think, and are content to live a purely animal life, the activity of our brain powers quickly ceases and we are mentally dead. Struggle, action, aspiration is dying, but it means living. Introduce the poison of vice, and there is a cessation of mental life as fatal as that caused to the body by arsenic.

Proficient.

A youthful and blushing bride reduced the aged grandmother of the man of her choice to a state of collapse last week. When asked if she could cook, she replied with simple modesty, "Not very well, but I know that you bake inside the stove and boil on the outside."—Sydney Bulletin.

MRS. WOODROW WILSON

The whole country grieves with our president today in the loss of his good wife who expired yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. For some time the intimate friends of the family have known that the lady was a sufferer from Bright's disease but only this week has it become known that she was so dangerously ill.

A TRIBUTE.

The following tribute to Miss Julia Snell formerly a Tecumseh lady, was taken from a Washington paper and given to us by Mrs. Eugenia Rice, an intimate friend of the deceased:

Miss Julia Snell of the division of reports in the office of the controller of the currency, who died last Monday was regarded by her associates as a mathematical and statistical prodigy. She was credited with being the only human being who could understand and analyze the dividend reports of national banks, especially difficult and complicated statistics. The reports division anticipates much trouble to supply her place with any degree of efficiency. Her popularity in the division was attested by a large offering of flowers for the obsequies.

95 YEARS OLD

We have an article before us brought in by Edgar VanVleet which was published in a Flint paper telling of the celebration of the 95th birthday of his cousin Jas. VanVleet of Flint. Possibly some of our readers remember Jas. VanVleet as he has visited in this locality several times. In spite of his advanced years he retains his metal faculties and gets around without assistance. Mr. VanVleet is one of the early pioneers of Michigan coming to this state in 1843 locating in Genesee County where he has since made his home. Formerly a Democrat he became a Republican at the time of the Kansas trouble. He became very prominent in city and country politics holding numerous township and county offices. He was a member of board of supervisors nine years, county treasurer four years, deputy treasurer three years and Justice of piece both in township and city for last eight years.

MOORE FAMILY GATHERING

Yestedsy the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Williamson was the scene of a happy reunion when the members of the Moore family gathered for a reunion. Forty were present and all were seated at noon for a big feast. In the afternoon the hours were filled with visiting and auto rides about the country and then supper was served. Beside the families of Mr. Williamson, Charles, Floyd, and Leon Williamson, Floyd Heesen, Robt. Harry, and John Moore of this village, were present from Dundee Messrs and Mesdames John Cribbin, Frank Ellis and Setn Dixon and children and Miss Louise Ellis and Wm. Waterson of Kankakee, Ill.

Moving Upward.

There is much wisdom in these words of Emerson: "Every man takes care that his neighbor does not cheat him. But the day comes when he begins to care that he does not cheat his neighbor. Then he has changed his market cart into a chariot of the sun."

NAME THE THIEF.

There have been much petty stealing in this vicinity recently. Some of it is beyond the petty stage, too. Some one kindly (?) removed Ira Rogers' graphaphone from his veranda Saturday night. There are a few records left which Mr. Rogers thinks the present possessor of the instrument might enjoy.

Then on Tuesday evening some vile wretch entered the home of Mr. and Horace Westcott and carried off $7.00. This seems a pity as these people are along in years and in poor health.

LOSS BY LIGHTNING

Five Barns were Struck by Lightning Last Night and Burned to the Ground

During the storm of last night lightning struck five barns southeast of town. The farmers in this section have the best crop in years and it is a hard blow to have a bumper crop wiped out in a single hour. This is about what happened when a little after 12 o'clock last night lightning struck the barns of J. C. McIntyre of Raisin township, J. H. Forsythe of Palmyra township, William Stewlow of Blissfield township and Peter McMann and Thos. Macham of Deerfield township. This morning we visited the farms of the first three and found the barns completely destroyed.

Mr. McIntyre's barn, 32x65 ft., was a total loss, besides about 35 tons of hay, a buggy and cutter. The building was insured in the Patrons Mutual

J. H. Forsythe lost a barn 30x50 ft. besides 22 tons of hay, 130 chickens and nearly all of his implements. His property is insured in the Farmers' Mutual Only by hard work of the neighbors were they able to save the house, the back end being badly scorched,

Wm, Stewlow lost two barns, corn crib and hen house Besides these were burned 125 chickens, 20 tons of hay, 6½ acres of wheat, 15 acres of oats and barley, 100 bushels of corn, 2 sets of harness and 2 single harness The buildings were all newly equipped with lightning rods. No stock burned. Mr, Stewlow carried $900.00 insurance but considers his loss much more.

The barns of Peter McMann and Thos. Macham were completely wiped out but we were unable to learn the amount of loss.

THE GARDEN PARTY

A YEARLY SOCIETY FUNCTION HELD ON R. S. MOORE'S LAWN

Given by Baptist Ladies. Large crowd. Well Pleased.

The sixth annual Garden Party given on the lawn at R. S. Moore's residence was held Tuesday evening and certainly the Baptist ladies with Mrs Moore have reason to be proud of their success, as over 400 people responded to their invitation.

The decorations of flowers, greenery and lanterns made the lawn and garden a bower of beauty and the very excellent program was hugely enjoyed the audience showing their appreciation by frequent encores.

It was such a splendid program it is difficult to pick favorite performers. The program was given verbatim as in the Herald not a single performer disapointing the hostess and yet all were from out of town except Miss Mingay whose readings as usual met with high favor.

Miss Mayme Harrison of Jackson gave piano and saxophone solos charmingly. Mr. Howell Taylor of Adrian gave musical recitations which won hearty applause. The many friends of Supt. and Mrs. D. P. McAlpine of South Haven were very pleased to greet them and as always were highly pleased with their musical selections.

Miss Lambie was greeted with an ovation by her Tecumseh friends who were more than pleased to hear her sing again.

Miss Myrtle Grayson of San Antonio Texas won high favor with her beautiful voice and was encored repeatedly as also was Mrs. J. S. Gray of Adrian who with her "Child Songs" appealed to every one. The soprano solo by Mrs Herbert Watts of Adrian made a fitting close to their excellent list of good things The accompanists were Mrs. Williams of Adrian and Mrs. F. B. Wood.

During the intermissions the young ladies of the church served ices, sandwiches, cake and coffee to the guests at the tables in the garden. In the receiving line were Mesdames R. S. Moore, W. W. Whiting and Leslie Bower. The chairman of the refreshment committee was Mrs. John Heesen and to the president of the Society Mrs. George Kay belongs much of the credit for the success of the venture. The ladies took in $81 00,

Beside those from out of town who took part others were: Mr, and Mrs. Clarence Hurry of Buffalo. Mrs, Sam'l McClure of Erie Pa , Miss Marguerite Reid of Lansing; Miss Esther Bell of Jackson; Mrs. Ed. Baird, Mrs. Jesse Blocker and son of Dayton: Mrs. Halleck Wilson and daughter of Detroit: Mrs. E. PROSPECTS GOOD FOR ELECTRIC ROAD.

Mr. Fisher, the promoter of the T., A. A. and J, Railway, stopped in town Tuesday on his return trip from looking over the proposed new route for the road. In conversation with some business men he was most enthusiastic over the prospects. Especially do our chain of lakes please him. If Sand and Wamplers lakes are so popular now, how much more so would an electric line make them.

This does not mean that there will be an electric line built to Tecumseh at once by any means, but infers that such a line is feasible and that capitalists may be interested in building such a line through to the lake region and Jackson.

This would be a great business advantage to Tecumseh as it strikes no other large town between Toledo and Jackson.

FOREIGN SHIPS TO FLY AMERICAN FLAG

Underwood Bill Admits Them to American Registry.

WASHINGTON — By an unanimous vote the house passed the Underwood bill prepared by administration officials providing for the admission to American registry of foreign-built ships. The bill is designed to relieve as far as possible the tie-up in American commerce by the complications in Europe.

The Underwood bill was passed despite the assertions of Republican speakers that its enactment into law might involve the United States in trouble with one or the other of the belligerant powers of Europe. The argument was made that the Underwood bill might be looked upon abroad as a subterfuge on the part of the United States to enlist the vessels of belligerents into its merchant marine.

The bill was supported by Congressman Mann.

ALL INSANE FUGITIVES BUT ONE RECAPTURED

Theft of Cap by One Leads to Apprehension of Seven.

IONIA, MICH. — Deputy Sheriff Mark Hoppough of Smyrna is the hero of the day in the capture of Walter Kuhlman, Detroit slayer, and four others of the eight Ionia state asylum fugitives at Kiddville Junction of the Pere Marquette, between Greenville, Ionia and Belding.

Conklin, the Ingham county murderer, was also with these five, and it was due to his desire to get a hat to wear that the capture was effected.

Conklin stopped at Farmer Rhoades' at Chadwicks and asked for a cap, which he got, but stole another at the same time. Mrs. Rhoades notified Deputy Sheriff Hoppough of the theft, and this led to the capture.

Chester Rowe was caught at Sunfield and Morrell at Lowell, and they were also returned.

Freeman Fisher, the 1916 man, is the only one still at large. The four Belding and Smyrna officers get $150 of the reward money. Officer George Taylor, of Lowell, and S. H. Weaver, of Sunfield, each get $25.

JUMPS INTO LAKE; DROWNS

One Boy Loses Life; Other Is Saved by Sweetheart.

LAKELAND, MICH. — Chester C. Erswell, seventeen years old, of Toledo, was drowned, and R. Benis, nineteen, of Toledo, was rescued by his sweetheart, Miss Ionia Erswell, after young Erswell and Benis had jumped from their canoe to avoid being blown from Zukey lake into the deep waters of Devil's bason, near here.

Erswell and Benis had been playing with the canoe near shore and in water about shoulder-deep. Both jumped out when the wind came up, thinking they were within their depth. Erswell, who could not swim, clutched Benis around the neck, and both sank. By the time Benis had freed himself he was so weak he could not hold Erswell and sank within a boat's length of shore. He was exhausted when rescued by Miss Erswell, who with her mother and the rest of the family of six had seen the tragedy from the porch of their cottage.

The Matterhorn.

The Matterhorn, in the Swiss canton of Valais and Piedmont, rises to the altitude of 14,705 feet. In July of 1865 the highest peak was first scaled by a party of Englishmen, consisting of Lord Francis Douglas, the Rev. C. Hudson, Hadow and Whymper, with three guides, when the three first named and one of the guides were the first victims to fall into the icy precipice of the beautiful Matterhorn.

The Phantom Ship

Another Version of This Common Sea Yarn

By MAY C. ETHEREDGE

One visiting the National Hospital for Seamen at Greenwich, England, any clear day will see a lot of old seadogs sunning themselves in the grounds. They resemble the vessels they sailed in—old hulks laid up in some shipyard waiting for the scrap heap.

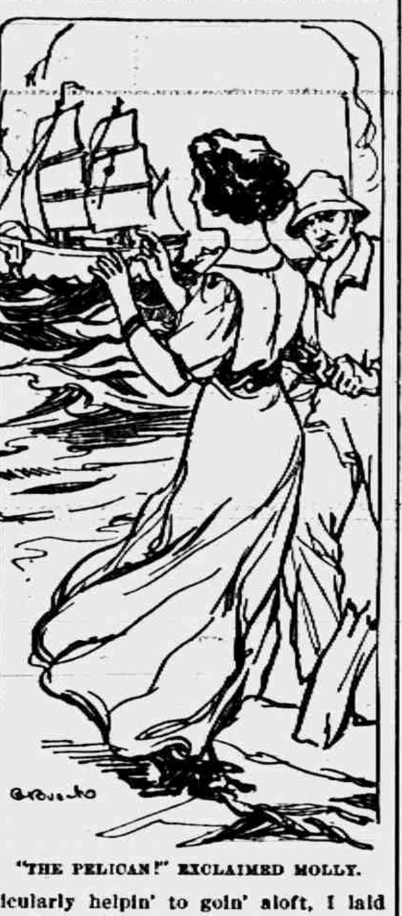
One day a group of these old salts were sitting together, keeping each other from despondency by reminiscences.

"Did any of ye ever fall in with a ghost ship?" asked one, taking his pipe out of his mouth and scanning each countenance of the group in turn. There was no affirmative reply, but one of the party declared that he had heard there was such a craft, and her name was the Flying Dutchman, but he knew nothing about the legend that has been a favorite theme both in song and story.

"Like enough you've fallen in with a craft o' that description yourself," said one of the party.

"Well, I wouldn't say as I 'ave, and I wouldn't say as I 'aven't," replied the old fellow seriously. He was a somber looking old chap, and it seemed that if any of the party had had such an experience it was he. "I 'ad a 'sperience wot looked like wot I'm talkin' about, but ghosts are not in the 'abit o' 'splainin'. Howsomever, a ship can't talk, and 'ow can she tell whether she's a ghost or real wood and iron?

"But if I'm goin' to spin the yarn I must go back to port, get up anchor and clear the 'arbor. No ship ever begun a voyage out in the middle o' the ocean, and no more can I. When I was in the midwatch, bein' fifty years old, I'd saved some money, and, comin' down with rheumatiz, which isn't particularly helpin' to goin' aloft, I laid up for awhile in a small town nigh on to the mouth of the Thames.



"THE PELICAN!" EXCLAIMED MOLLY.

"I boarded with a lady wot kep' a sailors' boardin' 'ouse, and she 'ad a darter, a youngish craft wot was allus dancin' about like a ship's boat on a choppy sea. Molly was her name, and it seemed to fit her well enough, though mebbe another might 'a' done as well. When she was doin' nothin' she used to come to me and wish me to tell her sea yarns. She was such a lively little thing that she braced me up when the wind was east with me and I was lookin' for dirty weather. She was the only pusson I ever felt like tyin' up to, for I never sailed on the catamaran o' matrimony and never 'ad any children o' my own.

"Not that Molly was a child, for she was seventeen years old, and in them days girls went into commission as wives earlier than they does today. And that was wot Molly begun to think about when I was boardin' with her mother on the bank o' this yere river, for a young sailor boy come in from a voyage that 'ad been a playmate of Molly's when they was children. Wot was playin' together when he left was somepin werry different when he got back. I met 'em walkin' together on the shore one day, and Molly unfurled a flag in 'er cheek, and it wasn't no skull and crossbones rag neither. If ever there was a signal o' true love it was the one Molly run up on that occasion.

"Arter awhile the sailor boy—his name was Jim—went off on another voyage. Molly wasn't the same arter that; she didn't seem to take an interest in anything, though she got closer to me than before and kep' me spinnin' sea yarns to her till my yarn locker got empty and I 'ad to spin 'em all back ag'in. She didn't care about the yarns except they was a kind o' framin' for her thinkin' about Jim. But when I got into rough waters and weather and shipwreck and all that she put her hand on my mouth, and I was obleeged to go about and take the other tack. You see, it made her worry about Jim.

"I stayed where I was till my rheumatiz was givin' out and I wasn't quite so stiff as I 'ad been, and I begun to think o' gittin' the barnacles offen me, holystonin' my decks, overhaulin' my riggin' and my sails and goin' into commission ag'in. I found a chance to ship on a vessel sailin' for South American ports, and I signed.

"I found it hard to part with Molly, but she didn't find it hard to part with me. You see, Jim was cruisin' som'ers around Cape Horn, and it made 'er feel good to think I was goin' into them waters. She asked me if I was likely to meet Jim's ship down there and, if I did, could I signal him a message from her? I told her that if I met him I'd send her message sure and asked her what I should say to 'im. She said I'd better tell 'im that she loved 'im more 'n hever and she 'ad a million kisses for 'im ag'in he come back. I promised to send it all jist as she said it, and she believed I would. I didn't say anything about 'ow the cap'n would larf if I asked 'im to signal such a message. 'Ow could [illegible]

"When I got back from the voyage I wasn't fit for sea work on account of the rheumatiz comin' back on to me, and I laid up in the same snug 'arbor ag'in, with Molly to coddle me. I tole her I'd fell in with Jim's ship off Rio and sent 'im 'er message. She wanted to know 'ow I done it, and I tole 'er it was by runnin' up little flags. Somehow I couldn't find it in my heart to tell 'er the truth.

"Jim come ag'in one day while I was layin' up for repairs this second time, and I was mighty pleased to see 'im. Even if 'e 'ad other sweethearts in other ports his 'eart was true to Molly, for 'e 'adn't been back long when the two of 'em went off and got spliced. After that I felt easier about Molly's comfort, for, to tell the truth, mates, I ain't got any faith in sailormen confinin' themselves to one sweetheart when they've got a string of 'em all the way round the world. Molly asked Jim if 'e'd got the message I signaled 'im at Rio, and when she tole 'im what it was he grinned like a shark. When Molly scolded me for lyin' I tole her I'd sent the message, but there was a fog and Jim 'adn't seen it.

"Howsomever, that's not the fog I'm comin' to.

"Jim stayed in port a month this time, then sailed away ag'in, leavin' his young wife for a year's voyage. He tole me to look out for 'er and if it was necessary to tell 'er that 'e 'ad tooken the ship and put the cap'n in irons so's to come to 'er. I was to say it or any other lie that was needed to make 'er feel comfortable about 'im. I promised to do as much inventin' as my knowledge locker would stand.

"This time Jim went east'ard through the Mediterranean and the Suez canal on 'is way to India. 'E was gone six months when 'e wrote to 'is wife that 'e was goin' to sail for 'ome, and 'is vessel would come straight through with only a few stops.

"Howsomever, Jim made a tol'able quick voyage and wrote from Naples, givin' the time about which he expected to get 'ome. I took Molly down to the mouth of the river a couple of days before 'e was expected, so's we might not miss 'im from 'is makin' port ahead o' time. I reckoned 'is vessel would go right up to Lunnon and we wouldn't see Jim nohow till the next day. But Molly could see the ship go by and get back 'ome in a couple o' hours after she'd passed.

"We went down to a p'int where we could look out on the channel and the ocean beyond, reachin' there about noon. We didn't expect Jim's ship for several days because we 'ad 'eard of bad weather in the Mediterranean. But the day was bright where we was, and we walked down on the sands.

"While we was walkin' along I saw a fog bank comin' up from the southeast. It seemed to throw a chill over Molly, and I confess I didn't like the looks of it myself. We sailors don't like fogs, anyway. The bank kept comin' up till it covered the sun. Then when we begun to get the dampness it parted out on the water, and there was a ship with all her sails set comin' right toward the mouth of the river.

"'The Pelican!' exclaimed Molly, clapping her hands. The Pelican was Jim's ship.

"Molly, not bein' a sailor, didn't notice, as I did, that there wasn't much wind and the ship was sailin' dead agin what there was. Furthermore, there seemed to be a commotion on her decks, as if somep'n had happened. We didn't git more'n a glimpse of her before the fog closed in on her again, and we lost her.

"Molly turned and ran in the opposite direction to see her when she went into the river. But I couldn't keep up with her. I felt oneasy. I didn't like the idee of a ship sailin' plumb agin the wind with her canvas set to sail before it. Bimeby Molly stopped for want o' breath, and I caught up with her. Then the fog lifted agin, and we looked toward where the ship ought to be.

"No ship was there, and there wasn't any ship in sight.

"Molly turned white as a sheet.

"We stayed there till the next afternoon, when news came that the Pelican had struck a rock on the African coast and gone down with all on board."

The speaker paused and relighted his pipe, which had gone out. There was a solemn stillness among his listeners for awhile. Then the recital seemed to have reminded others of the party of phantom ships they had seen or heard of, and other yarns on the same subject were reeled out.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FOOTPRINTS OF FAMOUS PEOPLE

Dr. Cole Will Bring Back Some of Prehistoric Races For Local Inspection.

Dr. George Lamont Cole, traveler and explorer, is known in America's educational world as an authoritative archaeologist. His knowledge is not second hand; neither are his pictures picked from postcards. For years he has made annual visits to the haunts of primitive man in New Mexico and Arizona and with the aid of pick and shovel and camera has brought to the surface nuggets of truth and rare treasures long buried beneath the debris of centuries. He has studied the cliff dwellers of the present day, the country in which they live, their terraced houses, their forms of social life and government, their weird rites and ceremonies, and thus brings to the people of the east fascinating stories of the strangest and most interesting people in the world. Dr. Cole will appear on the Lincoln Chautauqua program to be given in this city soon.

'Corwine gives us nothing but clean fun.' Those [illegible] Get Corwine. He will make you laugh without being ashamed of yourself. BARNES' CIRCUS

Monday August 17th.

Depending entirely on trained animals to give the entertainment the Al. G. Barnes Big 3-ring Wild Animal Circus stands forth as the circus distinctively different from all others. It's a big, three-ring circus however, with acres of tents parade glories, bands, clowns, sawdust rings and general circus festivities, yet it has none but new features on its program.

Inside of a big-steel-barred arena in the center of the show's mammoth tent are presented some of the most amazing, thrilling wild animal spectacles ever witnessed. Men and women trainers vie with one another for the plaudits of the people, by presenting death-defying acts with wild animals. Mlle. Florine offers a group of Persian leopards and jaguars; Miss Mable Stark presents Royal Bengal and Siberian tigers; Mayor Thornton performs Polar, Grizzly and other ferocious bears.

In the rings at either side of the arena, are shown the domestic and less ferocious animals. A large herd of elephants, trained to do many amazing things are presented in these rings. Camels, Zebras, Kangaroos, dogs, goats and monkeys are continually busy in the saw dust circles.

Other features of especial interest are [illegible] horse-riding sea lions. Sampson, the aviation lion, and the Barnes troupe of beautiful horses and ponies. There are 550 of them and they are absolutely unrivalled as to beauty, breeding and education among the World's horses.

The comedy part of the show's program is provided by fifty comedy elephants, mules, ponies, dogs, monkeys, and bears.

A big new-feature parade is presented at 10:30. Performances will be given in Tecumseh at 2 and 8 p. m. on Monday Aug. 17th.

THE MEDIATION CONFERENCE

The chief value of the conference at Niagara lay in its influence upon public opinion. It stood for modern civilization and progress. Tacitly admitting the relative triviality of the so-called Tampico incident that was made the pretext for the naval movement that led to our seizing of Vera Cruz,—and that gave opportunity for the three South American countries to offer mediation,—the conference concerned itself in reality with the permanent welfare of Mexico. The people of the United States were well represented at Niagara Falls by men of large ability and excellent sense. Huerta sent a delegation composed of legalists of dignity and culture. The mediators, consisting of the diplomatic representatives at Washington of Brazil, Argentina, and Chile, are urbane and able diplomatists. The very fact of the conference made a good impression in South America, and served to temper the harsh views entertained of the United States by the South American Press. The conference also helped to promote patience and to allay a certain war sentiment that seemed to be growing in this country. That the conference had any specific business in view, or that it succeeded in doing any, cannot well be demonstrated. That it had a highly beneficent influence, however, is plain beyond a question. —"The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for August.

WRONG IMPRESSION.

In our last issue of the Herald we printed an account of the Wm. Stewlow fire. Two barns struck by lightning and burned to the ground. These barns had only recently been equipped with lightning rods.

To correct the rumors which seem to be current about the county we wish to state that these barns were not rodded by the Hicks Lightning Co. of Tecumseh. The Hicks Co. use only a twisted galvanized steel rod, while the rods used on these buildings were copper cable rods.

Along with this it might be interesting to our readers to know that Mr. Hicks has been in this business for 60 years and during [illegible] time no building using his rods in Lenawee or Monroe counties has ever been destroyed by lightning.

Mr. Hicks has rodded 75 per cent of the buildings in this county and has installed lightning rods on 220 farm buildings since the 20th. of last April and does an extensive business throughout lower Michigan.

On the forenoon of the 17th of last July Mr. Hicks rodded the property of August Schmidt across the road from the Stewlow place and on the afternoon of the same day, the Stewlow property was rodded.

Mr. Hicks is past 80 years old and is hale and hearty and it looks as if he would get every barn in the county before he gets through with it.

Holloway, Mich.
Aug. 8, 1914.

To whom it may concern:

This is to correct the statement concerning rods on my barn at the time of the fire. I would say there was not nor never had been rods on my barn.

Respectively,
J. C. McINTYRE

Deerfield, Mich.
Aug. 8, 1914.

This is to correct a false statement that has gone forth that my barn that was struck and burned by lightning August 7th, was equipped with lightning rods, put up by the Hicks Lightning Rod Co. of Tecumseh. There were no rods on the barn nor never had been.

I think now that when I build my barn I shall rod them. If I do so I shall certainly have Mr. Hicks do the work.

THE ACCIDENT

At Saturday Matinee When

WILL MURPHY GETS HURT

At the race track on Saturday an accident happened which looked for a few minutes like a terrible one. In warming up their horses before the races Will T. Murphy and Oscar Gilbert collided. Both were thrown out and their sulkeys demolished Mr. Gilbert came out of the fracas with but a few bruises but Mr. Murphy was not so fortunate He was picked up unconscious and after Dr. Jones, who was called, worked over him for some time but could not bring him to his senses, Service's ambulance was called and Mr. Murphy accompanied by Dr. Jones was taken to his farm home north east of town. Here he revived and was soon able to sit up and eat supper. He is getting along finely and hopes to drive his horse Acetelyn in the next matinee.

TWO HURT IN GRAVEL PIT

Saturday afternoon, George Sanford met with a serious accident. The men have been gravelling the roads north east of town and Mr. Sanford was also working. He drove into Chas Benedict's pit for more gravel and in loosening it the bank caved in on him. He was extricated from under his wagon and taken home, Dr. Hardy was called and found both bones broken above one ankle and the other ankle badly bruised and swollen. The patient is getting along nicely.

Later in the afternoon there was another cave-in at the same pit when Jas. Johnston was caught under the gravel and badly injured but no bones broken. He has been laid up since as the result.

TRAPPING ELEPHANTS.

In India Tame Animals Aid in Capturing the Wild Ones.

In view of the vast strength possessed by full grown elephants, it seems at first sight almost incredible that they can be captured in herds and quickly subdued to the will of their masters.

At the present time, in Mysore, the regular method of capturing wild elephants is for a large number of natives to go into the jungle, some mounted on tamed elephants and many on foot, and to make a great noise and hullabaloo, which results in driving herds of the wild elephants into stockades, or often into ponds of water, which have previously been surrounded on all sides, except at the approaches, by immensely strong palisades. As soon as the herd is cornered the passages that had been left open are securely closed, and then the trained elephants are brought into play to cajole and subdue the perplexed prisoners.

In India elephants are no longer captured, as they still are in Africa, by means of huge pitfalls in the ground. In these traps they are often seriously injured or killed. The Indian elephant is somewhat smaller than the African and differs from it in other ways—as, for instance, in the fact that tusks are possessed only by the males, while both sexes are provided with them in Africa. In general, also, the tusks of African elephants are nearly twice as large as those of their Indian relatives, a single pair sometimes weighing as much as 250 or 300 pounds.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Mrs C Stevenson Wyandotte and E. Someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, procuring my supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, the pains and aches left and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering no longer troubled me, in fact, I felt like a different person. DIED FOR Heroism That Led to Napoleon of "The Little Corporal."

It is related that Napoleon was once badly defeated at Coblentz by the Cossacks. After the battle he was surrounded by enemies and would have lost his life had he not been saved by the presence of mind of one of his soldiers, Corporal Spohn.

Realizing that Napoleon's only chance for life was in getting off the battle field unrecognized, the corporal begged the emperor to change hats and horses with him. The change was made ere the smoke of battle had cleared away and Napoleon, with his corporal's hat and mounted on a poor steed, rode away unnoticed, the Cossacks crowding around the corporal. Taking him prisoner, they led him in triumph to the Russian general. There the mistake was soon discovered, and the corporal's brave act cost him his life.

According to the Coblentz legend, Napoleon, in remembrance of Spohn's self sacrifice, always after this preferred a corporal's uniform to any other and wore it so often that his men came to speak of him familiarly as "Le Petit Caporal."—From "The Rhine," Translated by G. C. T. Bartley.

The French Academy.

The French academy is one of the five academies and the most eminent constituting the Institute of France. It was founded in 1635 by Cardinal Richelieu and reorganized in 1816. It is composed of forty members, the new member elected by the remaining thirty-nine members for life after personal application and the submission of the nomination to the head of the state. It meets twice weekly and is "the highest authority on everything pertaining to the niceties of the French language—to grammar, rhetoric and poetry and the publication of the French classics." The chief officer is the secretary, who has a life tenure of his position. A chair in the academy is the highest ambition of most literary Frenchmen.

The Land of Long Words.

Humboldt once said that nothing in Mexico strikes Europeans more forcibly than the excessive length of the words. This length, moreover, does not always depend on their being compounded, as in the Greek, the German or the Sanskrit. Thus the Mexican word for that simple thing, a kiss, is tetennamiquiliztli.

But that is nothing, says Mr. Charles W. Domville-Fife in his book on Guatemala, to what the Central American can do. His best efforts eclipse even Shakespeare's often quoted "honorificabilitudinitatibus," in "Love's Labour's Lost," for if you wish to call the boy who carries newspapers, you have but to murmur "amatlacuilolitquitcatlaxahuilite," and he may possibly come.

Easily Answered.

"I'm a little short and will propound to you a question in mental arithmetic."

"All right, go ahead."

"Well, suppose you had $10 in your pocket and I should ask you for $5, how much would remain?"

A Lesson to Learn.

Perhaps the most valuable result of all education is the ability to make yourself do the thing you have to do when it ought to be done, whether you like it or not.—Huxley.

Ends of the Earth.

If you stand at the north pole you can look in only one direction—south. No matter how you may twist around on your heels, it is always toward the south that your eyes are directed. North as a terrestrial direction has vanished. You have arrived at the end of north. You are "where it lives." Or else we may say that north has suddenly sprung into the sky and is now at an unattainable distance directly over your head. A moment before your foot touched the pole north was straight ahead of you, and you had all the four cardinal points to choose from—east, west, north and south. Now three of them have vanished and south alone remains. The reverse is true at the south pole, where all directions on the earth's surface are alike north. In view of these facts we may speak of the north and south poles as the "ends of the earth." They are the two turning points, arrived at either one of which there is no choice left but to start toward the other.—New York Journal.

Odd Death Certificates.

Certificates of death are not documents where one usually seeks for humor, but there is frequently to be found in them much of the unconscious variety. Here, for instance, is how the cause of death is stated in the case of a laborer:

The consideration shown for the feelings of the bull is a fine touch and suggests grave questions on the moral responsibility of the lower animals.

Again, a man is stated to have "died from the effects of injuries received after being run over by a railway train in motion owing to a misunderstanding between deceased and an engine driver." This description of a rather ordinary railway casualty is excellent.—London Express.

History as She Is Wrote.

A text book of history, written by one Ilajavski, for Russian schools, contains some extraordinary statements, among them these, which the London Star translates:

"Louis XVI. was a peaceable and gentle monarch, who, in the course of his long reign, showed himself particularly skillful in finding expert ministers of finance. Loved and honored by his people, the aged monarch died suddenly after a glorious reign as the result of a fit of apoplexy. He was succeeded by his son, Louis XVII., who was obliged to conduct several wars, wherein the captain of his hosts, the royal marshal, Napoleon Bonaparte, conquered a great part of Europe for his king. Napoleon, however, abused his power and made a public attempt to rebel against his liege lord and to compass his own ambitious ends. Under the leadership of Alexander I., king and autocrat of all the Russias, the general was deposed, deprived of all his honors and dignities and all claims to pension. He was banished to St. Helena."

First Omnibus.

"Omnibus" was an almost brand new word in its modern sense when Shillibeer took it from the French in 1829, and in France the name possessed a special significance for those who knew their history, for from 1672 to 1676 Paris had already seen a regular service of roomy public vehicles, "carosses a cinq sous." Only these predecessors of the modern bus were not "omnibus"—for all. The letters patent which instituted them for the benefit of middle class people laid down that they were not to be used by soldiers, lackeys or any other wearers of livery or artisans and laborers. These exclusive vehicles faded out of existence, and the new ones, which were started in Paris in 1828, were named "omnibus" expressly to signify their democratic character. — London Chronicle.

Crockett Wouldn't Have Maggie.

The first school the late S. R. Crockett attended was the Free Church school in the village of Laurieston, of that parish, distant three miles from his home. When he was a very wee chap "Sam" used to be accompanied to school by Maggie—a girl somewhat older than himself, who was supposed to look after him. Their daily appearance together led one of the villagers to say to him one day as the couple passed her door: "Man, Sam, I think ye'll be mairryin' Maggie some day; ye're aye thegither." "Mairry Maggie —," was the indignant boy's response. "She disna ken the names o' the kings o' Israel yet!" The lady whose suggestion to the future novelist was so contemptuously received often recalled the [illegible] with amusement. — Westmin[illegible]

A Nabob.

"Rich as a nabob," is an expression not infrequently heard, but why a "nabob" should thus be associated with wealth and who he was precisely is not so generally known. Under the great moguls the provinces of India were administered by deputies known by the designation of "nawab," who commonly amassed much money and lived in great splendor. The office and the title continued under British rule in the orient, but gradually the word became corrupted into "nabob" and was applied generally to all natives who had grown rich. More latterly it was bestowed—often in a derisive sense—upon Europeans who, having made large fortunes in India, returned home and spent their money in a luxurious and ostentatious way.—London [illegible]

A Terrible Dilemma

Ordeal Through Which a Brave Man Passed.

By PERLEY POORE SHEEHAN.

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Pink Mead hadn't been living in Brooklyn very long, and he wasn't quite sure that he was at the right street as he signaled the conductor and worked his way off the crowded car.

It was one of those foggy, mysterious nights of early spring when every bare twig drips moisture.

As the car bowled heavily away Pink found himself in unrecognizable surroundings. Then he thought he saw a fence he recognized and started gayly down the street toward his new boarding house, half a block away.

He hadn't taken a dozen steps, however, before he had a queer, pervading certainty that he was wrong. The fog was getting thicker every second.

He paused, then started forward again and paused again. Just then a girl's voice hailed him.

"Oh, Mr. Mead! Is that you?" it asked.

It was a thrillingly sweet voice—a voice that would have appealed to Pink under any circumstances and one that no man was apt to forget.

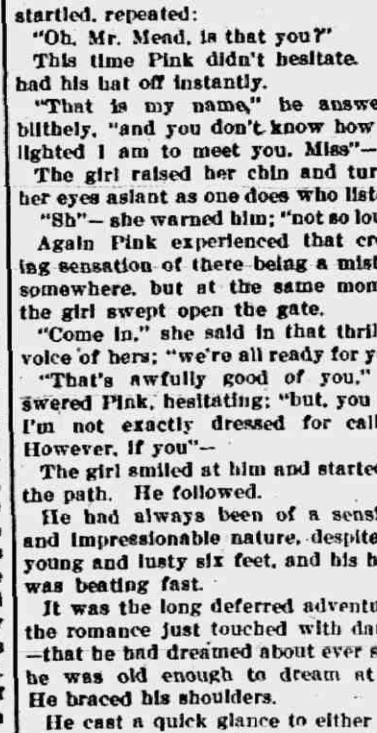
Yet Pink was sure that this was the first time that he had ever heard it, and how had its owner known his name?

He stopped abruptly, with his hand on the fence.

Through a shallow depth of shrubbery and lawn he caught the dim outlines of a strange porch.

It was not the boarding house porch; of that he was sure, for the posts of the boarding house porch were set two by two. Nor was it the boarding house front yard.

There was a scurry of gravel, and almost before Pink had had time to affirm his identity he was looking down into the eyes of a girl who he instantly decided was a queen.



"BE AS SILENT AS YOU CAN."

She was small and lithe and dark, with eyes that were all the larger because of the night and the fog. She looked up into his eyes with a half smile for a second, then, suddenly startled, repeated:

"Oh, Mr. Mead, is that you?"

This time Pink didn't hesitate. He had his hat off instantly.

"That is my name," he answered blithely, "and you don't know how delighted I am to meet you. Miss"—

The girl raised her chin and turned her eyes aslant as one does who listens.

"Sh"—she warned him; "not so loud!"

Again Pink experienced that creeping sensation of there being a mistake somewhere, but at the same moment the girl swept open the gate.

"Come in," she said in that thrilling voice of hers; "we're all ready for you."

"That's awfully good of you," answered Pink, hesitating; "but, you see, I'm not exactly dressed for calling. However, if you"—

The girl smiled at him and started up the path. He followed.

He had always been of a sensitive and impressionable nature, despite his young and lusty six feet, and his heart was beating fast.

It was the long deferred adventure—the romance just touched with danger—that he had dreamed about ever since he was old enough to dream at all. He braced his shoulders.

He cast a quick glance to either side and sniffed the cool fragrance of the dripping shrubbery.

"This is almost dramatic," he said as he caught up with the girl on the porch steps.

"They didn't tell me you'd be so late," she thrilled softly.

"They?" he asked, with a little laugh. "Who are these mysterious they?"

The girl looked at him with a mingling of surprise and annoyance, then slowly smiled.

"You joke," she whispered; "for them it's tragedy."

The last word caught Pink fairly.

For the fraction of a second it wilted him, and he felt an odd, trembling twitch at the base of his skull.

When he recovered himself the girl had tiptoed across the porch and opened a broad front door. He had scarcely reached her side before she switched on a dim light in the hall and left the porch in darkness.

Pink groped for words, but the girl turned with her finger on her lips. She looked so altogether frail and elfin as she stood there that the young man felt a momentary impulse to gather her into his arms for protection. He could put up a pretty fight on her behalf, he told himself.

In spite of the strangeness of the hour and his reception, there was nothing in the appearance of the hall itself to suggest the setting of a drama.

Apart from the dim red light that glowed overhead, the place had all the appearance of the ordinary comfortable home.

To the right was a hatrack, on which hung curiously a rather too generous supply of hats and coats. There was nothing about this raiment to indicate that their owners differed widely from Pink himself—velvet alpines, derbies and one silk hat hanging arrogantly on the highest hook.

To the left, where he felt must be the parlor, a couple of sliding doors which were not quite closed disclosed a strip of impenetrable blackness.

In spite of himself, he stared at this fringe of mystery with a twinge of hypnotic interest, then started visibly as he caught an almost inaudible sound of movement.

It was a very little sound!

It was something as though bare feet had been shifted on carpet or garments had been displaced by an involuntary movement of the body.

He looked quickly at the girl. She seemed more beautiful than ever—dressed simply in some veil-like stuff, her long black hair crowning her small face and falling in two heavy braids to her waist.

He saw now how intent her large eyes were, and the blood rushed to his cheeks as he saw the trace of a mocking smile on her lips.

"You look as though you were frightened," she whispered so softly that he could hardly hear her. And then:

"You're perfectly free, Mr. Mead, to go or remain."

"Count on me," whispered Pink seriously. And once more there seemed to be mockery in the girl's smile.

For a moment they stood looking at each other steadily, as young people of opposite sexes are apt to do when the hour is late and hall lights are dim. Then the girl said:

"And since you are so brave, Mr. Mead, you will go upstairs and take the first room to the right. Be as silent as you can." She reflected a moment while she looked at Mead curiously and added as if by afterthought:

"Of course you'll defend yourself if—if— Good night!"

She suddenly turned and glided between the sliding doors to the left.

Scarcely pausing, he began to mount the stairs.

The first room to the right, which the girl had indicated, was apparently a small bedroom. This much he gathered as he groped about it in the darkness. He felt a chair, a bed, a dresser. He had no matches, and he passed his hand over the wall in search of the electric light switch.

He found it seemingly at last and gave it a quick pressure. Instead of the flood of light he expected, he heard a strident ring in a distant part of the house, and he desisted. Moreover, he wasn't so sure now that he wanted light.

If he was to be a target for unknown peril he didn't see why he should illuminate himself.

A shuffling step approached the door, and he caught the faint brushing sound of a hand groping for the knob.

The hand rested on the knob, there was a muttered exclamation, and the footfalls shuffled rapidly away. Pink slid over to the door and listened.

A little farther down the hall another door was opened and closed.

There followed an interval of heavy silence, then something that again set Mead's blood to leaping, but this time with a sense of outrage and shame. It was a low, chuckling laugh.

• • • • • • •

When Pink Mead awoke next morning, still fully dressed and highly uncomfortable from having passed the night in a chair, he first sensed the familiar aroma of coffee and sausages. He looked about him.

The chamber where he found himself, if small, was conventional and immaculate. Glittering sunlight was streaming through the window, and as he came into full mastery of his sight he looked out upon a familiar landscape.

Thus fear and mystery had fled with the night—such things could never lurk in a room so clean and bright. Still, where was he, and how, and why? And who was the girl?

He met her in the lower hall, where he had left her the night before. She was looking more charming than ever.

"We were all so frightened yesterday," she said, "when the boarding house caught fire—and right next door!"

"My boarding house?" gasped Mead.

"And I hope you won't be too uncomfortable here," the girl went on, "while they're getting things into shape again. They said that they'd telephoned you. But, really, last night you acted like a man in a trance. Come in and meet my aunt, who was asleep last night when you came."

There was a chuckling laugh on the stairs behind them, and Mead turned to see a mild, thin man whom he had often encountered in the street cars. "And Mr. Johnson," the girl added, "a fellow boarder."

PRIDE OF THE UGLY CLUB.

He Was the Prize Member of an Old New York Organization.

In the New York Evening Post of May 11, 1814, appeared the following notice:

UGLY CLUB.

Ugly brothers, hither fly,
With you bring the varying eye—
Bring here cock eyes and eyes askance
That cannot pass one tender glance.
Bring goggle eyes and piercers, too;
Eyes green, white, red, black and blue.
Bring with you the eagle's sight
To see your heart and keep it right.
But bring shortsighted eyes to spy
The mote that's in your brother's eye.

The members of the Ugly club are directed to attend a special meeting at Ugly hall, 4 Wall street, on Thursday evening, the 12th inst., at 7 o'clock, to take into consideration the propriety of bestowing some suitable mark of distinction on a member who lately while viewing himself in the secretary's ugly mirror was so much pleased with his own ugly phiz that he involuntarily let fall the glass, which was dashed to pieces, and exclaimed, "I shall yet be president of the club!" The astonishing fortitude of this ugly member, in the frequent and public acknowledgment of his natural deformities, deserves the highest commendation.

The members are requested to be punctual in their attendance, as the new members elected at the last meeting and six of the ugly beauties are expected to appear.

The propriety of admitting ladies into the club will be discussed.

By order of His Ugliness.

Lure of the Country Grips Young Farmer

Hears Passenger In Suburban Train and Then Spends Day In Chicago—Farm Lassie and Home For Him.

A farmer boy from Dekalb, Ill., was en route to Chicago the other morning when a group of suburban passengers entered the car in which he was riding. These suburbanites began talking about their gardens, and the farmer boy heard what they said. Of course they were more or less anaemic, but they were the remnants of live boys, and on this fine spring morning the old call of the open, the field, the song bird and the living tree, was in every mind. The farmer boy overheard their talk about patches "six by eight feet," "three by nine feet," etc., their poor little back yards. It appealed to him, and he felt sorry for them.

And then, like Moses, Socrates and Walt Whitman, he began to say to himself: "This thing that I am about to do is unworthy of me. Here are these men whose lives are blighted. They live in the city under the arc lights and in the dust of the streets and the heat of them. They are pale faced, nervous men. They all peer through glasses and wear their clothes like the models in the stores. These are not men. These are the shadows of men. I wonder what would happen if these men were to wander down the long lane and out into the field where the birds are mating and the fishworms wriggling as the plow slips through the soil, instead of breathing the dust and smoke of the suburban train and hiding away some place in a skyscraper and calling that work."

So this young man went on to the city and wended his way through turmoil and rush and hurry and was hustled and pushed about in the ill manners of the street. When the day was over and he walked through the dusk toward his farm home he had decided that the "Lure of the Country, with its perspective and its prospect and its assurance of plenty and its wonderful girlhood and its open roads," was far more worth his while than is this thing which he has read about, called the "Lure of the City." The Lure of the Country is deep, genuine and rich to this boy. The Lure of the City is artificial, unnatural and disappointing. The city smells are those of mixed breath—the heated odors of a thousand unkempt basements and alleys. Its noises are the noises of waste and killing speed; its shadows shut out the sunlight and protect the rat and cockroach.

But one thing lingers in the mind of this young man, and that is the entertainment of the city. It is the music of the theater, the action, the suggestion, the interpretation, the delight of hearing gifted people of the earth gathered in the entertainment centers of the city. If he could but satisfy his desire for sweeping music, stimulating drama, public speech extraordinary and some fine social occasions, there would be no Lure of the City in the mind of this typical countryman. And he must be provided for at home. That is why the Lincoln Chautauquas are appearing this summer, with their wonderful aggregation of entertainers, lecturers and musicians, in this city under the local management of the leading business men. The Lure of the Country is made complete by this event.

FRANCE AND AUSTRIA IN WAR CLASH

Declaration Is Formally Made.

FRENCH GET SETBACK

British Capture German Liner With $5,000,000.

BATTLE CONTINUES AT LIEGE

Britain Hints It Rules Seas—Austrians Shoot Diet Members—German Soldiers, Concentrating Near Russian Border—Serbs Invade Austria—German Spies Shot by Belgians—Austrians Withdraw From Belgrade.

NEW YORK — The Cunarder Lusitania, which left here last Wednesday for a dash across the Atlantic, reached Fastnet, about 300 miles from Liverpool.

SOFIA — A state of war has been proclaimed throughout Bulgaria in order to enable the government to prepare to guard the frontier against violations.

LONDON — A dispatch to the Standard from St. Petersburg says a small German airship was riddled with shot and brought to the ground near Czenstochowa, Russia Poland. Its occupants, four German officers, were killed.

LONDON — A Central News dispatch from Berlin says the Russian funds seized by the German government in Berlin banks are said to total $25,000,000.

LONDON — The war office press bureau confirmed the report that the Russian invasion of Austria is in progress. It says a Russian army of 350,000 is advancing through the Styr River Valley toward Lemburg.

LONDON — Dispatches to the Times from The Hague and to the Telegraph from Maastricht agree that the struggle for possession of the forts at Liege is going on continuously and giving rise to terrible scenes of bloodshed and of heroism. The Germans are making fierce efforts to silence the forts nearest the city proper and the defenders are gallantly holding out against almost constant bombardment.

LONDON, ENG.—A news dispatch from Brussels says it is officially announced there that the German loss in Belgium in the recent fighting was 2,000 dead, 20,000 wounded and 9,700 prisoners.

LONDON — The Hamburg-American line steamship Cap Ortegal, with $5,000,000 in specie aboard, has been captured by the British, according to the Daily Mail. The liner departed from Buenos Aires on July 16 for Southampton.

LONDON — The English admiralty announces permission may now be obtained for shipment of coal from England to Norway and Italy. This is taken to indicate there is no danger from foreign warships.

PARIS — Leading Serbo-Croatian members of the Vienna parliament and diet at Seapa have been shot by Austrian military authorities

ST. PETERSBURG — Germany's troops are concentrating near the border in brigades. German aeroplanes are flying toward Kovno.

NISH — Montenegrin troops have occupied Spizza, Pachtrovitz and Budva, on the Dalmatian coast. They carried Netalka, and Slenokos, surrounding heights, by assault.

BARI — Austrian cruisers that bombarded Antivari, Montenegro's sole port, shelled also crowds of Montenegrins who had taken refuge in adjacent hills. The port was severely damaged.

PARIS — France has formally declared war on Austria. The declaration followed the failure of the Austrian government to make satisfactory explanations of the movements of Austrian troops from the Austrian Tyrol through Switzerland to the Alsatian border.

The declaration of war had been expected for the last three days, but France was determined that it would not act until something definite had taken place on which a declaration could be based. This was in order to prevent Italy being forced into the conflict as an ally of Austria.

When the announcement was received that Austrian troops, under the grand duke of Tuscany, had crossed Lake Constance and were at Basel, on the Swiss border, prepared to attack the French forces operating in Alsace, a peremptory demand that Austria declare her position was made. The Austrian ambassador was sent for and was given until Monday to get a definition of the Austrian position. This was not done, so the foreign office handed the ambassador his passports and war was immediately declared.

At the same instant the French ambassador at Vienna applied to the Austrian foreign office for his passports.

French Reverse Believed.

LONDON — Coincident with the receipt here of the report that a great battle was on in the valley of the Rhine near Neu Breisach between the French and the Austrian-German forces, and that the French had been swept back with heavy losses, came a dispatch from Paris declaring that the French war office had forbidden the publication of casualty lists.

The French engaged are the army which is invading Germany from Belfort, and which already has swept the Germans before it in victories at Altkirch and Muelhausen.

It is believed that the French advance, which so far had been unimpeded, has suffered a serious check here.

Germans Cease Their Advance.

BRUSSELS (via Paris) — Information from the front confirms the report that German troops have ceased their advance by the valley of the Ourthe. They are said to have retired on their reserves and to be throwing up defensive works.

Another German Invading Force.

PARIS — A big force of Germans is invading France through Esch.

Servian Army Invades Austria.

NISH, SERVIA — The Servian army has invaded Austria near Priboj and Visegard. The Montenegrin forces occupied Spizza, Pachtrovitz and Budua on the Dalmatian coast and carried by assault Netalka and Slenokos.

North Sea Again Closed.

LONDON — The North Sea has again been closed to the fishing fleets. The admiralty instructed masters of vessels not to go out until further notice.

Two Austrian Steamers Seized.

ANTWERP. — Two Austrian steamers were seized in port here.

One Hundred German Spies Shot.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (via Paris) Belgium has been completely covered with a network of German spies. Six hundred already have been arrested and 100 have been shot. Some of those captured were wearing uniforms of gendarmes, civic guards, soldiers and officers of the Belgian army. Many of the spies were armed with bombs and revolvers and were riding in automobiles bearing false numbers. They also had in their possession telegrams and letters with counterfeit indorsements.

Says Austrians Withdraw.

LONDON — The Servian legation makes an official announcement to the effect that the Austrians, who have been attacking Belgrade, have withdrawn after making seven unsuccessful efforts to cross the Danube and the Save and invade Servian territory.

Germans Held as Hostages.

PARIS, VIA LONDON. — It is reported from Belfort that, in view of the execution of French subjects by Germans, seven prominent residents of the German town of Montreux Vieux, just over the frontier, have been taken by the French as hostages.

ITALY TAKES WARLIKE TONE

Demands Account for Bombarding of Antivari by Austrians.

RELATIONS MORE STRAINED

Economic Effects of War Are Severely Felt in Italy—Japanese Premier Asserts His Nation and U. S. Will Remain Friendly—Japan's Attitude Depends on Result of British Campaign

LONDON — According to the correspondent at Rome of the Morning Post the diplomatic relations between Italy and Austria are becoming more strained. Italy has demanded an explanation of the bombardment of the establishment of the Puglia company at Antivari, Montenegro, over which the Italian flag floats and in which there were Italians.

The economic effects of the war already are severely felt in Italy. Train service has been reduced to save coal of necessity. There is a scarcity of the smaller denominations of money everywhere. The mayor of Rome has issued a list of maximum prices that may be charged for food.

Japan Friends of U. S.

TOKYO, JAPAN — Count Okuma, the premier, in an address to the newspaper men in Japan urged them to refrain from sensational rumors and inflammatory articles in such critical times, saying they were calculated unduly to excite the public and injure Japan's relations with friendly countries. The premier instanced what he termed a false assertion that the United States was sending a fleet to Japan.

"America," concluded the premier "has made no demand on Japan and remains Japan's great friend."

Waiting on British Campaign.

LONDON — The Pekin correspondent of the Times telegraphs as follows:

"Replying to China's request of the United States and Japan to use their influence to protect China from warlike activities of other nations Japan has stated that her attitude depended on the result of the British campaigns The time was not ripe to consider China's proposal, it was said.

"The United States avoided committing herself."

CARPENTER UNTIL 50, BIG LAWYER IS DYING

Remarkable Career of Nathan P. Allen Is Closing.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Stricken with an illness which threatens to become his last, Attorney Nathan P. Allen, aged eighty-eight, the oldest practicing attorney in Michigan, and a national figure in criminal practice, lies in his apartments in the Houseman building battling for his life.

A carpenter until he passed the half century mark, the panic of 1873 drove him from the practice of his trade into the law offices of Gray, Cutts & Hyde of Grand Rapids.

Within two years he fitted himself for the bar examination and passed it. He immediately opened a law office in Grand Rapids, and participated in the famous "Star route" cases in Washington.

After spending a year in Washington he went to Chicago. In his first Chicago murder case he acquitted three men.

He recalls with a grim smile how he made a jury composed of Armour, Leiter and other big business men acquit two burglars after the judge had discharged a jury of "low brows" because he feared the burglars would get off too easily.

JAGS JAM THE JAIL AT FLINT

Forty-one Prisoners, Mostly Drunks Await Arraignment.

At police headquarters the liquor secured in raids on "blind pigs" and from bootleggers has assumed such proportions that a compartment is being built especially for the storage of goods that are contraband in a local option town.

MAKES HIT WITH GUARDSMEN

Governor Makes Speech at Encampment of Michigan Militia.

GRAYLING, MICH. — Governor Ferris was called on to speak at the moving picture show at Camp Ferris when the Michigan National guard films were shown, and he made a big hit with the soldiers and residents of Grayling. He eulogized the citizen soldier as one not only capable and efficient in uniform, but who must also make good as a citizen in the paths of peace.

The governor stayed in camp and enjoyed a refreshing night's rest though the temperature was high in town. He participated in a cruise on the yacht of R. Hanson, donor of the reservation, during the morning, and reviewing the troops in camp in the afternoon.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Summer Constipation Dangerous.

Constipation in Summer time is more dangerous than in the fall, winter or spring. The food you eat is often contaminated and is more likely to ferment in your stomach. LAWN PARTY GIVEN FOR MISS SATTERTHWAITE

Miss Jane Harris entertained about thirty young ladies Wednesday in honor of Miss Alice Satterthwaite. The time was pleasantly spent with sewing and cards.

While the guests were still lingering over the dainty refreshments, Miss Harris appeared carrying a large and very mysterious parcel which she placed before Miss Satterthwaite with the remark that there were some things necessary to the coming events. The other tables were immediately deserted and a crowd of interested girls peered over each other's shoulder eagerly watching as layer after layer of tissue paper were removed and rice began to escape. Finally the suspense was over and there came to view a bona fide, though Lilliputian, suitcase, very much labelled in typical newlywed fashion. Attached to the handle was an exquisite bridal bouquet, which was promptly transferred to the lady of the hour. Inside the suit case was a ticket suitable to the length and nature of the journey. The various stations from "Goo Goo Junction" to "Woodvide" occasioned much merriment. Chief among the contents of this marvelous bit of luggage were the Parisian wedding gown and the thoughtful provision of candy hearts for future meals, "during the honey moon, when cooking will be such a bore". Each revelation brought more laughter and the guests left in the best of spirit feeling that Miss Harris' orginality had made an exceptionally happy ending to a most delightful party.

OLD BLANCHARD PLACE

The pleasure of an inspection of the old Blanchard property was ours the other day. The present owner H. W. Stevens has more than cleaned up the premises and with a cement porch and new paper throughout, the property makes a very desirable residence. What tales the old house could tell of the smiles and tears of the past generations. Old residents tell us that this residence was at one time one of the show places of the town when occupied by Judge Blanchard and family. One reminder of its former magnificence is the hand carved casing of the front door. In scraping off the paint of the past decade Mr. Stevens found "1832" etched by some lad's knife of long ago. The dwelling passed from the Blanchard heirs to Mrs. Augusta Patterson Lee, then to Jas Snell and recently from Byron Snell to Mr. Stevens.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Mize and Mr. and Mrs J. J. Orr returned last evening from their auto trip to New York.

AL. G. BARNES

Famous as a trainer and exhibitor of wild animals and his favorite $15,000 pony "Romeo" the horse that talks, laughs and does arithmatic with the Barnes circus, here Monday August 17.

BARNES CIRCUS AMAZINGLY GREAT.

Over 600 animal-actors are comprised in the Barnes troupe, the animals do everything that the human circus performer has been doing. Juggling, balancing, high jumping and diving, acrobatics, posing, dances, drills, ball playing, bare backing riding, tumbling, etc., are a part of the things they do. Their proficiency is a remarkable sight to witness.

Unusual indeed are the big wild animal acts. Tom, Jerry and Brutus, horse riding African lions are a very remarkable example of wild animal training Sampson, the aviation lion, rides to the top of the tent surrounded by shooting sky rockets. A large groupe of seals and sea lions do marvelous feats of juggling and bare back riding. Mlle. Florine, a spritely young woman presents a groupe of ferocious leopards, jaguars and pumas. Miss Mable Stark appears with a troupe of man-eating Royal Bengal and Siberian tigers. Big Bill, the wrestling Grizzly is another sensation also the large groupe of performing bears.

The twenty-four, jungle-bred, full grown African lions shown in one act by Herr Louie Roth, comprise the greatest and most thrilling wild animal spectacle ever shown. Herr Roth enters the arena alone with these great beasts and makes each one perform.

The Barnes challenge horses and and ponies—550 of them—beautiful, all educated to perform, present in their work one of the very great sights of modern time entertainment. Elephants, camels, zebras, hyenas, dogs, goats, monkeys, etc., are prominently shown.

There are many laughing spots throughout the program, provided by fifty comedy mules, monkeys, bears, ponies, dogs and a large herd of elephants.

The new glittering, mile-long, four band street parade is presented to the public at 10:30. Two performances will be given here Monday Aug. 17th.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Ridgeway M E church will be held Tuesday forenoon at 10 o'clock. Dr. Ramsdell will be present. A full attendance is desired. Important business.

As the glorious rain fell in plenty yesterday afternoon the Presbyterian Sunday school held their picnic in the church parlors. A good crowd came laden with good things and everybody had a happy time The rain stopped in time for the little people to enjoy the races and other sports on the church lawn but the silence contest between the two classes of ladies was delared off as impossible.

A big crowd of Tipton K. of Ps. and their families and many from the local lodge attended the Tipton-Tecumseh picnic at Sand Lake yesterday. An excellent program was given which included a speech by James P. Hughes of Marshall, the grand outer guard. After dinner the Tecumseh and Tipton boys were to play ball and have other stunts but these had to be called off on account of the rain. Nevertheless every one had a happy day.

Ex-Governor Chase S. Osborn. In his tour about the state looking after his political fences, struck Tecumseh yesterday noon. Mr. J. Q. Look introduced him to a good sized crowd of voters and some who can't vote but hope to Mr Osborn gave a pleasing address telling the voters how he had brought the state finances out of a big hole when he was governor and petitioning for the same job with its attendant worries and financial difficulties.

There were nearly 100 in attendance at the Bradley family picnic held at Wamplers lake Tuesday. Dinner and supper were served and a short musical program enjoyed which consisted of piano solos by Miss Margaret Osborn, a piano duet by Misses Alice Bradley and Miss Osborn and vocal solos by Mrs George Witherell. At the business session preceeding the program officers were elected for the next reunion which will be held at Belle Isle the 2nd Thursday in August.

Miss Emma Keeney of Saginaw, who is spending the summer with her brother, J. R Keeney and family, entertained a party of ladies yesterday afternoon at the Keeney home. The ladies were schoolmates in the Grub school in Franklin when children and greatly enjoyed their "Don't-you-remembers?" Those present were Mrs Thos. Perry of Chicago, Mrs. S. W. Demuth of Clinton, Mrs. Chas. Kemp, Mrs Andrew Wilson, Mrs. Mary Camburn and Miss Addie Butrick.

FOOD STUFFS ADVANCE IN PRICES.

President Wilson Acts.

President Wilson is after all people who are responsible for the sharp advance in the price of food stuffs all over the country. He proposes to send to jail all people who are responsible for boosting the prices. He does not consider the war in Europe as just reason for the sharp advance. If there is no law covering this question he proposes to have one made that will cover it. Most all large cities are taking up this question and appointing investigation committees.

Here are some of the advances which our local merchants are forced to make:

GET MILLIONS IN CURRENC

National Banks Take $137,000,000 to Meet Demands.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—John Skelton Williams, controller of the currency stated that $137,000,000 in currency has been placed with the banks of the country to meet the emergency demands incidental to the European war.

Mr. Williams said the demands made on the national banks in the central reserve and in the reserve cities by their country correspondents are being well met. There is no reason, according to the controller, why they should not be met promptly, and if he finds that any national bank refuses to honor the legitimate demands of its customers or correspondents, that bank will be promptly investigated and dealt with.

Mrs C Stevenson, Wyandotte and E. Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "The first symptoms of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain across the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. Someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, procuring my supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, the pains and aches left and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me. In fact, I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so. My former endorsement still holds good." Price 50c at all dealers. Height of Waves.

Among the most trustworthy scientific measurements of ocean waves are those of Lieutenant Paris of the French navy. The highest waves measured by him were in the Indian ocean between the Cape of Good Hope and the island of St. Paul. Thirty waves measured during a northwest gale there averaged twenty-nine and one-half feet in height, and six of them, following one another with beautiful regularity, were thirty-seven and one-half feet in height. Some still higher waves were seen, but not measured. In a moderate breeze the length of a wave was found to be about twenty-five times its height, but in a gale only eighteen times. — London Globe.

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, the heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is which contains no dangerous narcotics or alcohol.

It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing.

A CASE IN COURT

For Alienation of Affection

By F. A. MITCHEL

Herbert Harley and Margaret Bartholow were co-eds at —— university. There they formed an acquaintance which drifted into love. Unfortunately for their union Miss Bartholow had an aunt who was an active worker in the cause of equal rights for women with men. This lady, Miss Amelia Ascerbiton, was a member of the bar.

Margaret was graduated with high honors, and her aunt was bent on her preparing for the same profession as herself. There had been a long courtship between Harley and the young lady, during which she had agreed to marry him. Harley endeavored to hold her to her promise, but Miss Ascerbiton contended that marriage in the case of a woman was incompatible with a profession. She therefore endeavored to persuade her niece to break her engagement.

There was a strife between Harley and Miss Ascerbiton as to who should secure Margaret, the aunt for the law, the lover for a wife. The former won. Miss Bartholow broke her engagement and forthwith entered upon the study of the profession her aunt desired she should adopt.

Harley was greatly disappointed and angered, not at the girl he loved, but at her aunt, who had influenced her. For two years he kept nursing his wrath, which, instead of dying out, burned continually fiercer. Meanwhile he and his former fiancee had been leading their respective classes in schools of law and were admitted to practice in the courts. It was then that Harley decided to sue Miss Ascerbiton for the alienation of the affections of her niece.

Miss Ascerbiton sprang to the front like one who smelled the battle from afar. Being an attorney, she took charge of her own defense and persuaded her niece to assist her as associate counsel. Harley conducted his own case, without assistance from any one.

"HER BEAUTIFUL FACE WAS TURNED UP TOWARD MINE."

"Your honor," said Harley, making his plea, "this is a suit to recover damages of the defendant for alienating the affections of her niece from me, the plaintiff."

"I move, your honor," said Miss Ascerbiton, "that the case be thrown out of court from the fact that there was no such affection on the part of the said Margaret Bartholow for the plaintiff as described by him. There being no affection to alienate, this suits falls to the ground."

"I presume you intend to prove," said the judge, "by Miss Bartholow's own statement that she did not love the plaintiff. The court rules that this is a matter which must come up in the usual way,—the plaintiff having the right to introduce evidence to prove his case."

Harley proceeded:

"It is incumbent upon me as plaintiff in this case to show just what the defendant has endeavored to prevent my showing—that the said Margaret Bartholow did on the 24th of May"—

"I object, your honor!" cried the defendant's assistant, rising with blushing cheeks. "This is not a suit for breach of promise, but a suit for alienation of affection."

"The objection is not sustained," said the judge. "The plaintiff must prove that there was affection to be alienated or his suit fails."

"Then we admit that there was something like af"— Miss Bartholow was beginning.

"We admit nothing of the sort!" cried Miss Ascerbiton savagely.

"Your honor," interrupted Harley, "I desire to assure the defendant's assistant counsel that I shall respect her feelings so far as possible. I shall not read extracts from letters I have received from her as is usual in cases of breach of promise."

"Stop your pettifogging!" snarled Miss Ascerbiton.

"What do you mean?" asked Harley.

"You're trying to influence the jury to believe that you have evidence that does not exist."

"I do not need such evidence. I will make a simple statement of my own. It was the evening of the 24th of May, 190—, that I visited Miss Bartholow at a country place where she was at the time staying. She was dressed, becomingly in a light pink summer silk. It was evening, and the day was receding before the coming night, a half moon presiding over the two. I invited Miss Bartholow to walk with me in the garden. Many of the flowers were in bloom, and the roses were budding. They were beautiful, but the lady at my side was far more beautiful.

"She plucked a rose, the only one in bloom, and placed it on my coat for a boutonniere. Her hand accidentally came in contact with mine"—

"Accidentally?" snapped Miss Ascerbiton.

The jury looked daggers at the defendant, and the judge forbade her making any more such irrelevant interruptions. Harley proceeded.

"A current passed from her hand to my heart. Her beautiful face was turned up toward mine, and I was tempted to kiss her delicately curved coral lips. But I desisted. I had not yet such a right.

"We walked on over gravel paths lined with boxwood, the flowers beyond nodding to us as if to say: 'Hail, lovers! We were born for such as you. We delight you with our beauty. We influence you with our perfume to love. We shall die with the coming of frost, while you love on through the years. But with the opening of the next season we shall influence others to mate and through other seasons their children and their children's children to become lovers.'"

Miss Ascerbiton, seeing the effect this address was having on the jury and presuming that the speaker was intending to contrast it with the breaking up of this love which she was accused of bringing about, arose and said tartly:

"Your honor, I should like to know what this effusion has to do with the case on trial. Does the plaintiff suppose that these intelligent gentlemen of the jury can be influenced by such twaddle?"

"Shut up!" cried a juryman.

"Shoot the old girl!" cried another.

"Go on with the story!" cried a third.

The judge rapped on the desk before him and looked fiercely at everybody in court, awing them into silence. Then he signified to Harley to go on.

"Where was I?" said Harley meditatively.

"In a flower garden with a girl," suggested a juryman.

"In June!" said another.

"No, it wasn't; it was May," a third corrected.

The judge rapped more fiercely than before, then, after an ominous pause, said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, it is permitted you to ask for information bearing on the case, but not to make comments."

Quiet having been restored, Harley proceeded:

"There is a nook in that garden, a bower. In it is a seat overhung with wistaria. We sauntered on and sat down on the seat. The half moon was visible in the sky. A yellow streak marked the place of sunset. A balmy breeze laden with perfume fanned our cheeks."

Here the speaker paused.

"Gentlemen of the jury, out of respect to the feelings of the lady I loved and love today I must end my testimony with the simple words, 'I told her that I loved her, I asked her to be my wife, and she accepted me.'"

There was a look of disappointment on the faces of the jury and, indeed, of all present that the proposal had not been given in full, with a description of the attendant caresses. But out of respect to the feelings of Miss Bartholow, who was quietly weeping, no one insisted on a development of the story. Harley rested his case, but before the defendant arose to speak said:

"May it please the court, I move an adjournment of this case for half an hour. I intend to make an effort to settle the case out of court."

"The court is adjourned for thirty minutes."

Miss Ascerbiton arose, turned her back on her niece, the judge, the jury, and stalked out of the courtroom.

"Goodby, dearie!" said a juryman.

"Why don't you git a feller in a flower garden yourself?" said another.

"You'll have to come down with the dust."

Miss Bartholow said something in a low voice to Harley, who sat on the other side of a table between them. He nodded assent and, rising, said to the judge, who had not yet left the bench:

"Your honor, I am authorized to state by the assistant counsel that this case is settled. She has agreed to marry me on condition that I assent to her practicing her profession if and so long as she chooses to do so. I have no objection whatever to my wife entering any profession whatever, and I have accepted the condition."

There was a murmur of approbation by those present, and the plaintiff and assistant counsel for the defendant left the courtroom together.

Mrs. Harley on reflection chose to let her husband be the provider for the family and gave up practice. After the arrival of their first child she was the more confirmed in this decision.

WAR MAY POSTPONE PANAMA EXPOSITION

Railroad Officials Gather Estimates on Attendance.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Railroad officials in Chicago have received notice from representatives in San Francisco that there is a possibility that the opening of the Panama-Pacific Exposition may be postponed for a year owing to the European war. Several of the railroads were asked to co-operate in an investigation of the possibilities regarding attendance next year, and general agents in all sections of the country have been canvassing the situation. It is said that the result has been discouraging.

In order to get a line on the public attitude the roads have instructed agents to spread the report that the closing of Europe to tourist travel would so increase the attendance at San Francisco as to make it difficult for the roads to handle the business. This statement was the basis for solicitation that prospective tourists to the coast reserve accommodations now. It was believed that the response to such advertising would give a line upon what may be expected. "If so," said the passenger traffic man, "the exposition had better hold off for a while."

No Help For It.

At one of the New York restaurants a willowy cabaret young person was doing the latest steps. The room was crowded, and most of the patrons stood in order to get a better view. One old gentleman, a Kentuckian, remained in his chair, playing idly with his glass, though the other members of his party were on tiptoe with interest. Finally one of them, a young girl, caught the old gentleman's sleeve and pulled it impatiently.

"Oh, come on, major!" she said. "Be modern!"—New York Post.

French Sweeping Alsace.

Paris, Aug. 17.—Despite the severity of the censorship which has prevented Paris fom knowing in detail what is going on on the frontier, the city is more cheerful than it has been for the past fortnight. The news from the front is emphatic that the allies are slowly but surely destroying the labyrinth of works within works occupied by the Germans and Austrians, some 300 miles in breadth.

Blamont and Cirey, which have been strongly fortified by the Bavarians, were charged by the French who carried all before them. The whole Bavarian army corps fled, abandoning their wounded and thousands of cubic feet of war material.

In upper Alsace the French recaptured Thann, taking a German standard. At Thann again the fleeing Germans abandoned their wounded. Another German standard was captured at Sainte Blaize.

French aviators appeared over Metz and, ignoring a canonade from more than 200 heavy guns, pointed at an angle of 45 degrees, proceeded to the German aerostatic camp of Frascati where they destroyed a Zepplin shed. It is reported but not confirmed that the Zepplin airship within the shed also was destroyed by the bombs but this has not been confirmed. The French aeroplanes then returned to Verdun.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured,

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of ear There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrah) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THOUSAND CATTLE IN STATE FAIR'S STOCK EXHIBIT

Michigan's Rank as Dairy State Will Be Proved.

The cattle and dairy show at the Michigan State Fair this year will be truly representative of the place these allied activities occupy in the state's industrial life. From 700 to 1,000 cattle will be on exhibition, there being fully 600 of the distinctively dairy breeds. This is a greater showing by far than a Michigan Fair has ever seen.

In addition to the premiums which are given for each class and which are 25 per cent greater than last year, the State Fair management offers $100 prizes for each fifty head of cattle shown by Michigan cattle breeders' societies. The Holstein breeders have been especially active in their acceptance of the offer, and the Livingston County, Central Michigan, Western Michigan and Eastern Michigan associations have each announced their intention of exhibiting at least half a hundred head. Similar acceptances have been received from Jersey and Guernsey breeders' associations, while Shorthorn breeders declare they are not to be counted out.

Two other dairy features of importance are announced. The Detroit milk show will be held in conjunction with the Fair, and the September scoring contest of butter and cheese will be conducted by the state dairy and food department at the Fair grounds. J. Fred Smith of Howell, member in charge of the department, and E. C. Krehl, chief milk inspector of Detroit, made the milk show announcement. Three silver cups and a silk banner will be awarded. A cup will be given for the best specimen of market milk, another for the best specimen of market cream and a third for the best specimen of certified milk. The banner will go to the distributer having the highest score in the show.

A representative of the United States department of agriculture will score the exhibits, and competition will be open to milk distributers and dairymen throughout Michigan. The scoring will be upon the basis of bacteria, flavor and odor, visible dirt, butter fat, solids not fat, acidity and appearance of package.

"It may be said that only within the past fifteen years has dairying been recognized in Michigan as a specialized business," says George H. Brownell, superintendent of the dairy department. Michigan Agricultural college created a dairy department, whose duty it was to instruct the farmers of Michigan in the growing of crops for feeding dairy cattle, the handling of dairy herds for profitable production and the breeding of pure bred dairy cattle.

"Instead of teaching farmers to raise crops of wheat, rye, barley and corn to be sold to the elevator man in the neighboring village the dairy department officials at the college urged the farmers to grow such crops as could be fed to dairy cattle. Silage corn and alfalfa are the principal crops of this kind, and the result of feeding them to a herd of dairy cows is one that comes very close to realizing the inventor's dream—a perpetual motion machine. The fertility of the farm is increased instead of diminished, and the products of the dairy in the form of milk, butter fat and surplus stock always command a ready cash market at a profitable price.

"In the fall of 1912 the present dairy building was completed as a home and headquarters for dairymen who attend the Fair. This year it will be made more easily accessible by the construction of a wide cement walk from the rear of the cattle sheds to the door of the demonstration barn. Other improvements of material value also are being considered."

Disbrow Will Race at State Fair

LOUIS DISBROW, champion track driver of the world and recognized as one of the most daring racing pilots in America, is coming to the State Fair, Sept. 7-18. He will meet Bob Burman, Eddie Hearne and other speed marvels in what promises to be the greatest dirt track race that ever has been run. He is not a stranger to Michigan, having raced here several times, and it is seldom that he does not take down a good share of the money.

POULTRY SHOW GREATEST EVER

Fair Gives Impetus to Industry In State.

PREMIUMS ARE INCREASED.

Special Award Will Be Made to County Organization Which Shows Largest Array of Prize Winners at the Fair.

Special plans are being made for the poultry exhibit at the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 7-18. The Fair in past seasons has given impetus to this industry, and the coming exhibition will excel in its scope and attractiveness anything the organization so far has done. A contract recently was closed by George W. Dickinson, general manager of the Fair, for uniform cooping, in which the birds will be housed. This cooping is of wire, so as to permit a complete examination of the birds by the passerby. It is perfectly sanitary, and by being uniform no one entry has an advantage over another.

In addition to the premiums given for the various classes, the Fair management has announced that a special premium of $50 will be awarded the county organization which shows the greatest number of winning birds at the Fair.

Keeps Its Fascination.

Frank Coward of Bronson is the board member in charge of the poultry department: Daniel Thomas of Pontiac is superintendent and J. W. Mulinix of Toledo and Earl Hemenway of South Haven the judges.

"The fascination of poultry raising for both city and country dweller has not lost any of its force," says Dr. Dickinson. "In fact, we are looking at it as a matter of necessity. The city man finds that a flock of chickens helps him cut the cost of living, and the prices eggs and fowls are bringing make poultry raising pretty profitable for the farmer. The State Fair means to help in every way possible, and its exhibit this year has never been equaled in Michigan."

ADDS TWO NEW DEPARTMENTS

China and Fine Arts Exhibition Shown In Main Building.

In response to a demand which has been growing steadily for the past few years, the Michigan State Agricultural society has added materially to the scope of its needlework department for the sixty-fifth annual Fair, which will be held at Detroit Sept. 7-18. The department hereafter will be known as the needlework, china and fine arts exhibition and will be housed, as before, in the Michigan building. China painting has come to be an occupation in many Michigan homes, and hundreds of women are busying themselves in their spare moments with brush and palette.

Four classes in the department have been devoted to these subjects, as follows: China painting, amateur; china painting, professional; paintings, original productions, water and oil; paintings, student class, oil paintings and water colors. The premiums cover almost every specimen of china that is painted, including the conventional and naturalistic, and are so liberal that many displays will be attracted. In the fine arts section exceptional premiums have been listed for portraits, landscapes, easel subjects, studies in still life, animal subjects and marine studies.

These useful arts beautify and make happy the home, and the State Fair plans to give them unstinted encouragement.

TEN STAKE RACES AT STATE FAIR

Purses Reach $60,000; Early Closing Events Filled.

PROGRAM TWO WEEKS LONG.

Best Stables In Country Are Being Attracted—Speeders From Over the Border Will Face Wire—Finest Racing Events In Fair's History.

A speed program, the like of which has never been seen at a Michigan State Fair, has been arranged by the Michigan State Agricultural society for its sixty-fifth annual exhibition at Detroit, Sept. 7-18. Two solid weeks of racing have been carded, with the purses so liberal that large fields are insured for all. No less than ten stake events have been arranged with purses ranging from $5,000 to $1,500. The entries for these have all been closed, and the class of horses that will face the wire portends that turf history will be made. The stakes are scattered through the two weeks, one coming each day.

Notable among the stakes are the Michigan, for 2:12 trotters; the Aitken, for 2:14 trotters, and the Postal, for 2:11 pacers, purses of $5,000 being hung up for each of these. The first named will be trotted the first week, and the others the second. Another stake in the first week's list which has attracted attention is the 2:17 trot, the entrants being limited to those horses owned in Michigan April 1 of the present year. The other stake events are as follows: Detroit stake, 2:08 class, trotting, purse of $3,000; Windsor stake, 2:11 class, pacing, $3,000; Wayne stake, free for all pace, $3,000; Fifield stake, 2:08 class, trotting, $2,500; Newton stake, $2,500; Dickinson stake, 2:16 trot, $1,500.

Many Class Races.

In addition to the early closing events the following class races with uniform purses of $1,000 will be run each week: 2:23 pace, 2:18 pace, 2:15 pace, 2:13 pace, 2:09 pace, 2:07 pace, 2:05 pace, 2:24 trot, 2:20 trot, 2:14 trot, 2:10 trot, free for all trot and Conner's handicap.

A race program is as indispensable to a fair as a merry-go-round, and the management aims this season to present to the lovers of this sport in Michigan the best that is obtainable. The value of the purses is such that the best horses in the country are being attracted here, and that is a guarantee of the competition that will result. All the stables known up and down the big line will be represented, and there will be many speeders from over the border.

Fred Postal, Eugene Fifield and G. W. Dickinson are the members of the State Fair's board of directors who comprise the speed committee.

Break Ground For Hospital.

Ground has been broken for the Clara Barton hospital building, which will stand just north of the automobile building and to the west of the dairy building. The structure, two stories in height and in the comfortable colonial style, is being erected under the direction of Dr. E. B. Smith, brigadier general of the Michigan division of the National First Aid society. The building will contain fourteen beds and an operating room and will be equipped as completely as a modern hospital. A staff of physicians and nurses will be in constant attendance during the two weeks of the Fair.

Barnes Circus.

WILD ANIMALS THE ONLY PERFORMERS.

Did you attend the circus? and did you ever see such another?

It was a wonderful sight to see so many wild animals together, but when they were the sole performers it was more wonderful still.

36 African lions as tame as kittens appeared with only one trainer in attendance and took their part with the precision of old human actors and the other animals were not behind in their acting. The parade upon the street was certainly good, such a large aggregation of Shetland ponies and fine horses are seldom seen in one parade. The stately elephants, the ungainly camels and the beautiful zebras added to the interest of the parade. In the line of music, the Scotch Highlanders with their bagpipes were a most pleasing feature. Taking it all in all Barnes Wild Animal Circus was certainly a great success.

We hear that the young lady who was injured by the angry lion at Wyandotte is doing nicely. While here she was under the care of a local physician who said that the injury to her leg would be harder to cure than a broken limb. She is very brave under her affliction.

Geo. Leonard of Detroit came Friday to visit Percy Bowen. The young men went abroad together last summer arriving in New York City one year ago today. Mr. Leonard is Prof. of History in the Highland Park, High School of Detroit.

ROUND ABOUT US

Most of the onion fields in this vicinity are quite badly damaged and many of them will hardly pay the expense of harvesting. According to the reports from growers the drouth was one of the causes, but most of the damage has been done by an insect. Some of the fields are not so far gone but what the rain of Monday will materially help in maturing the crop. It is estimated that the yield will be less than half of the average crop.

GUARDIANS OF LIBERTY

Give Lawn Fete at Howard Goodsill's.

A good crowd—125 in number attended the lawn fete given Friday night at the home of Howard Goodsell by the Guardians of Liberty. The lawn was well lighted with electric lights and Japanese lanterns and flags were hung around. A red school house, the work of Mr Goodsell, the symbol of the order, was perched in a tree Placed about the lawn were flower decorated tables, upon which were served ice cream, cake and wafers.

Following the serving of refreshments, George Hoag gave a short talk which R. M. Molles illustrated with the stereoptican. Mr. Hoag told what the organization stood for what caused their organization and what they hoped to accomplish. Mr. Molles then invited the Revs. Hartzog, Whitney and Rex to address the company which they did very happily.

The Guardians of Liberty and their friends are indebted to Mr. and Mrs. Goodsell for a very pleasant evening for both had worked hard for the success of the affair.

ENTERTAINMENT FOR MISS SATTERTHWAITE.

Miss Elizabeth Widney, assisted by Mrs. Alfred James entertained twenty-four friends Saturday evening in honor of Miss Alice Satterthwaite. The early hours of the evening were pleasantly spent with cards.

At the serving of the refreshments a rare treat was given the guests in the playing of Miss Maude Hagberg, a pianist of unusual ability and is the head of the musical faculty of the Frances Scheimer School of Mt. Carroll, Ill., who is Miss Edyth Shull's guest. Miss Hagberg graciously played a number of encores in response to the enthusiastic applause of her auditors.

At the close of the evening Miss Satterthwaite was presented with a most attractive recipe book. The front cover was decorated with a picture of a cook in action, "looking properly anxious", cleverly designed and painted by the hostess. To the composition of the book each guest had a favorite recipe over her own signature and all were guaranteed to be "tried and true." The first recipe "How to Preserve a Husband" was unsigned and created much merriment when read aloud. An exquisite cluster of Jaquemenot rose buds with a long stemmed American Beauty was a second gift to Miss Satterthwaite from her hostess. The evening came to a close with a surprising swiftness and the guests left with happiest memories of a most unique and delightful entertainment.

Chautauqua in Tecumseh.

The tents for the Lincoln Chautauqua arrived Saturday about noon, and by night they were erected and ready for action.

The formal opening was made Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Rev. W. B. Hartzog in a few well chosen remarks introduced Mr. E. G. Borton, manager of the Chautauqua. Mr. Borton told something of the week's program, of the talent that was to appear, of the benefits to those who attended the Chautauqua and gave a hearty welcome to all who were in attendence.

Those who came from out of town were made welcome to remain in the tent during the intermission. Mr. Borton introduced the University Players. This orchestra is composed of several young men who are working their way through college They played a number of selections, and responded to several encores The soloists, a pianist and cornet player were especially good. They were followed by Thomas McClary who gave his lecture on "The Evolution of Spiritual Life." This lecture was very fine and he had a pleasing personality and kept his hearers in good humor. Throughout it was a scholarly lecture and he left much food for thought with his hearers

The evening program opened with a vesper service in charge of Rev. W. A. Rex of the Presbyterian church several hymns were sung, a prayer by Dr, Hartzog and responsive reading completed this service. At the close of this service the University Players gave a fine concert after which Thomas McClary gave his lecture on "The Mission of Mirth" which he presented under five heads Everyone who heard Mr. McClary in this lecture felt richly repaid. At the close he spoke of the opening of the Panama Canal on August 14, one of the greatest events in history Also of the peaceful entrance into the city of Mexico of the revolutionists. He spoke highly of the course pursued by President Wilson in saving this country from a war with Mexico, and asked all in the audience to rise and give the Chautauqua salute, the waving of the handkerchief in appreciation of our President. The response was unanimous.

MONDAY AFTERNOON

The program began promptly at at 2:30 and despite the fact that there was a circus in town and the heat so intense the tent was filled.

The concert by the Bunnell-Weller Co. was unique and most charmingly presented. Nell Bunnell-Smith the singer gave a number of selections, and it was hard to tell which was the sweetest. Clear and distinct every word could be heard in every part of the tent. Beatrice Weller with her magic crayon, expressed in rapid strokes the portrayol of her story. When Mrs. Bunnell-Smith sang the "Swannee River" tears filled the eyes of her listeners, and as Miss Weller drew the picture it was greeted with rounds of applause.

Tom Corwine the imitator, followed with his inimitable wit and drollery as an imitator he certainly excelled and his audience was kept laughing from the beginning to the end of his talk. The evening session was exceptionally good, Mrs Dunning-Smith giving a number of selections several of them being Irish songs Again Miss Weller distinguished herself with her crayon and as Mrs Bunnell-Smith sang of Killarney, with deft fingers she portrayed the scene most vividly.

Gov, Patterson of Tennessee made a most telling speech on Politics, Ambitions and Decisions, dealing mostly with the Temperance question in relation to the betterment of our country He cited many instances where good had been accomplished and predicted the downfall of the liquor traffic in the next ten years, and as the North freed the South of human slavery so the South would help the North from the slavery of intemperance; and should the time ever come when our country should be called to arms the south would stand ready to support the Flag

L. F. Rosacrans and wife who have been taking a large trip to Duluth the past ten days returned home Monday evening. They were Sunday guests of her parents in Detroit where little Ned had spent the time during their absence.

Fishskin Dresses.

Among the most curious as well as wonderful of garments are the fishskin dresses worn by wealthy women of the gold tribe along the Amur river in east Siberia. These women produce some extraordinary ornaments, designs and embroidery. The dresses mentioned are composed of several layers of fishskin, the undermost representing the skin of the garment proper, the uppermost showing the ornaments in their cutout forms. Between these two layers there is another layer that serves to throw out distinctly the beautiful qualities of the ornaments. The pieces of fishskin that form the ornaments are usually blue. The front and back of the dress are adorned with these cutout pieces of fishskin sewed with fishskin thread.

Only Jar of Its Kind.

Horace Walpole tells a lively story of an old porcelain vender who had an exceedingly rare and valuable jar on which he set an almost fabulous price. One hot summer a slight volcanic shock, such as the British isles occasionally experience, jogged his house about his ears and split the porcelain vase. To an ordinary mind the accident would have been calamitous, but the china seller rose superior to fortune. He doubled the price of the article immediately and advertised it as "the only jar in the world which had been cracked by an earthquake." Nothing very slow about that.

Cruelty to Animals.

The first legislation to be passed for the protection of dumb animals was the work of an Irishman, Richard Martin of the county of Galway. In 1822 Martin introduced a bill for the prevention of cruelty to animals in the British house of commons. Queen Victoria was one of the principal supporters of the Royal Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and it was she who gave the society its name.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies today that relieve but do not cure. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought lasting results to thousands. Here is Tecumseh evidence of their merit.

E. C. Brisbine, farmer, N. Democrat St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I began to suffer from kidney complaint twenty years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of the trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand. You may continue to use my name as a reference for the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I need a kidney medicine, I take this remedy and it acts promptly. Price 50c, at all dealers. Ruse of a Noble Scot.

William Carstairs was William III.'s chief counselor in ecclesiastical matters. What a noble man this sturdy Scot was! An Episcopalian curate who had been ousted from his parish and was a thorough irreconcilable called upon him one day by appointment. He was then principal of Edinburgh university. He found Carstairs in a rage. His tailor had sent in a misfitting suit. He threw the clothes about the room and then, looking at his visitor, thought that they would fit him. Would he not take them as a sort of atonement for the ill temper which he had shown? The next day the visitor came back to restore a ten pound note which he had found in the coat pocket. "No," said the principal. "When you took the coat you had a right to all that was in it." Carstairs had planned the whole affair.—From "The Scot of the Eighteenth Century," by John Watson, D. D.

A Famous Paris Street.

That wonderful street of shops in Paris known as the Rue de Rivoli was begun in 1802 and was named in honor of Napoleon's victory at Rivoli in 1797 during the Italian campaign. It was not finished, however, until 1865, during the reign of Napoleon III., to whom Paris is indebted for much of its grandeur.

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, the heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is which contains no dangerous narcotics or alcohol.

It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing.

BRAZIL'S FINE CAPITAL.

Rio de Janeiro Is a Beautiful City, With No Poor Quarter.

"There are some cities very beautiful from a distance, but noisome and shabby when once they are entered. Rio de Janeiro, on the contrary, is beautiful when seen from afar and is delightful on intimate acquaintance. The streets are clean. The main thoroughfares are broad, and no other city has so many miles of smooth asphalted streets. Automobiles swarm and trolleys abound. The public buildings are handsome, the private buildings very picturesque and in northern eyes," writes Theodore Roosevelt in the Outlook, "possess a most attractive foreign flavor. The water supply is ample and not only healthful, but delicious. The sanitation is excellent. For over half the year the climate is delightful, and during the remaining months there is close at hand a cool mountain retreat.

"Altogether it is difficult to write of this city of over a million people without expressing astonishment that both its beauty and its greatness are not more widely understood.

"The condition of the poorer people is, I am assured and as I thoroughly believe, far removed from the misery of the slum dwellers in the great cities of the northern hemisphere. There is no especial quarter for the poor, nothing in the nature of a slum district, and there is much effort of one kind and another to provide decent living conditions for the poorest."

MAJORITY TYRANNY.

Its Despotic Sway, For Instance, In the Matter of Dress.

The tyranny of majorities is not confined to politics. It invades all fields, demands obedience from all classes and brooks defiance of none.

Women tolerate a certain style of garment because they imagine a majority of womankind at the moment is demanding it. They obediently follow suit for fear of exciting attention or unfavorable comment.

Men and women are bound too much by others' opinions. Society, of course, is built on conventions. But conventions sometimes become tyrannical. One should know when to follow their dictates and when to ignore them. In the matter of dress, for instance, why should any one endure a style he detests merely because the majority at the moment is wearing it? Why should not a long necked man wear a tall collar, if he prefers, it, even though it does cause pain to the chins of all sympathetic observers?

Frankly the question is without an answer. Perhaps people tolerate majority tyranny in such matters merely because they are accustomed to it. A caged animal presumably knows nothing of freedom until he has tasted it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Just Like the Salad.

A young man named Smith boarded with an emaciated aunty of ample years, who seemed to take the view that most any old thing was good enough to hash up for fodder. One day chicken salad was served, but it was merely another demonstration that there is nothing in a name.

"By the way, Mr. Smith," severely remarked the landlady, as the meal progressed, "how do you like the chicken salad?"

"That reminds me," irrelevantly answered Smith, "I bought a book today and told them to send it around here. Did it come?"

"Yes," replied the landlady, with a puzzled expression, "but why should the chicken salad remind you of it?"

"Coincidence, Mrs. Slymm," was the mean rejoinder of Smith. "The book is half calf, you know."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

They Seldom Do.

A half witted fellow living in one of our country villages makes it his business to attend all funerals and comment on them for days afterward. Recently he received an invitation to the wedding of a relative. The next day after the wedding a neighbor asked, "And how did the wedding go off, Jim?"

"Oh, there was a pretty fair crowd turned out, considerin' the weather," Jim answered solemnly. "Mary, she looked right nice, but I didn't think Bob looked very natural."—Indianapolis News.

Imitating Mamma.

While playing with a pair of shears little Laura severed one of the prettiest of her golden curls.

"My dear child, why did you do that?" asked Aunt Mary, who came to call soon afterward.

"I wanted 'em so I could take 'em off and hang 'em on the bureau," explained the little girl, "just like mamma does."—New York Globe.

The Wild Part.

"Hello, old man? Have any luck shooting?"

"I should say I did! I shot seventeen ducks in one day."

"Were they wild?"

"Well—no—not exactly; but the farmer was."—New York Globe.

A Hacendado's Revenge

A Story of the Mexican Civil War

By JOHN Y. LARNED

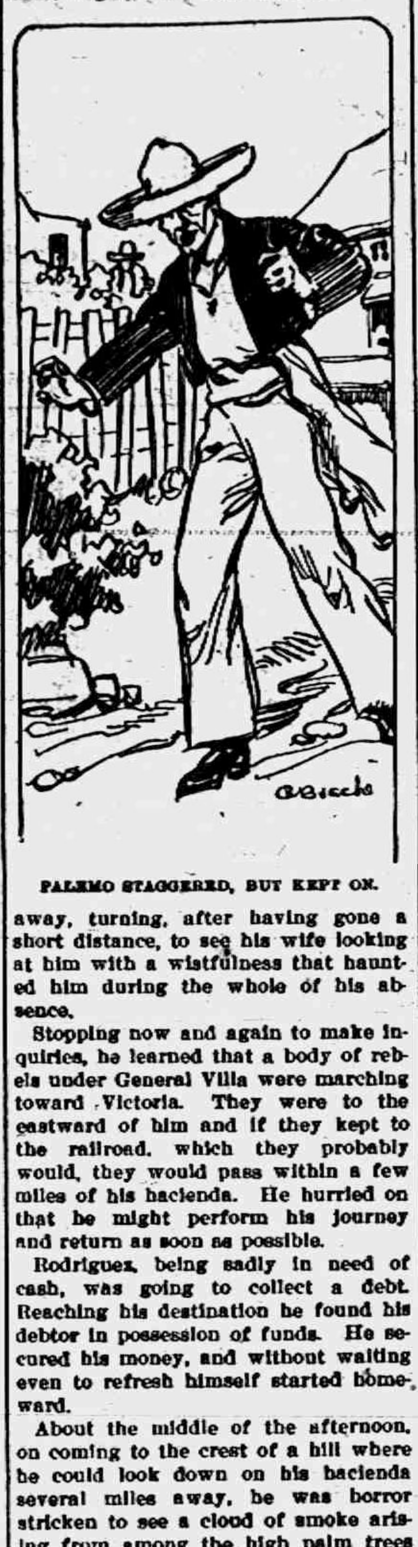
Manuel Rodrigues, a hacendado of the province of Nuevo de Leon, Mexico, one morning kissed his wife and children, mounted his horse and was about to ride away when his wife said to him:

"I am afraid to have you go. The rebels are advancing from the north, and I fear you may encounter some of them."

Signor Rodrigues sat in his saddle, thinking not of the danger to himself, but to his wife and children. There were lawless persons in the rebel army, some who had been brigands, and, as for looting conquered territory, their officers often permitted it. He did not wish to leave his family under such circumstances, but it was necessary that he should go.

"Never fear for me. I am well armed and can fight. Goodby, sweetheart. I'll surely be with you again before nightfall."

He bent down and kissed her again, then, urging his horse forward, rode away, turning, after having gone a short distance, to see his wife looking at him with a wistfulness that haunted him during the whole of his absence.



PALEMO STAGGERED, BUT KEPT ON.

Stopping now and again to make inquiries, he learned that a body of rebels under General Villa were marching toward Victoria. They were to the eastward of him and if they kept to the railroad, which they probably would, they would pass within a few miles of his hacienda. He hurried on that he might perform his journey and return as soon as possible.

Rodriguez, being sadly in need of cash, was going to collect a debt. Reaching his destination he found his debtor in possession of funds. He secured his money, and without waiting even to refresh himself started homeward.

About the middle of the afternoon, on coming to the crest of a hill where he could look down on his hacienda several miles away, he was horror stricken to see a cloud of smoke arising from among the high palm trees that inclosed his house. With a cry he spurred his horse down the declivity and had covered half the distance when he met a family of Indian peons coming from the opposite direction. Reining in his horse, he asked them for news of his family.

"They have all been murdered, senor," said the man. "The bandit Palemo, with some of his men, looted your house and burned it down with every one in it."

For a few moments Rodriguez sat paralyzed; then he dashed forward more rapidly than before.

Nearing another group of persons he reined in again to ask if Palemo and his men were still at the hacienda and was told that they had gone, taking a road leading in the direction of Victoria. Rodriguez, realizing that if he wished his revenge he must strike before the bandits rejoined the army, instead of going to the ruins of his home, struck into a path that would put him on the road the outlaws had taken. He was turning into it when he met a friend, Jose Penalez, who, having heard of the bandits' depredations, had hastily collected half a dozen of his neighbors and was going to the protection of the Rodriguez hacienda. They were all mounted and armed, and on being told of the news given by the peons joined the bereaved man, and the party, eight men in all, dashed on for vengeance.

Had the bandits ridden on without stopping for more plunder they would doubtless have joined Villa's army before being overtaken. But Rodriguez and his men passed house after house where the owners were bemoaning the loss of their valuables, and in some instances, where there had been resistance, there were smoking ruins. Now and again they stopped for a few moments to make inquiries.

What robbery might have failed to effect pulque achieved. On nearing a hamlet the pursuers asked a man on the road the whereabouts of the bandits and were told that they were drinking the national beverage in a saloon not half a mile beyond, one of seven houses that made up the town. Penales, who was naturally cooler than Rodrigues, asked how many bandits there were and was told that there were six. Rodrigues gave this information to his friend, to whom he looked for leadership.

Up to this moment Rodrigues had been so filled with fury that he had considered nothing but an attack on the destroyers of his house without taking into account their numbers or surroundings. A complete change now came over him. Turning a bend in the road, he saw ahead the pulque house which he had been told contained his enemies. A desire seized him to make the house a fire for roasting them alive. To do this he must corral them, and to corral them needed coolness to meet their efforts to escape. He reined in his horse and gave his orders.

The point of attack was about an eighth of a mile from any of the other houses in the hamlet. Rodrigues directed Penales to take half the men, break to the right through covering trees and, approaching the saloon, deploy and surround it on the west, while Rodrigues with the remaining force executed the same maneuver on the east. The house was on the road at the lowest point between two gently sloping declivities, with scattered trees 200 or 300 yards from its front and rear.

When the two wings of Rodriguez's little army got into their respective positions, each forming a semicircle about the pulque house, the bandits were still drinking within. The first knowledge they had of their danger was the collapse of one of their number, who was standing near a window raising a cup of pulque to his mouth. His fall was accompanied almost simultaneously by the crack of a rifle. Every man started to his feet.

The shot had been fired by Rodriguez, and during the ensuing fight whenever a bandit exposed himself to one of the attacking party the latter would call Rodriguez's attention to the fact and Rodriguez would pick him off. But Palemo, telling his men to keep from exposing themselves, through a crack reconnoitered the field and, though he could see no one, surmised that he was surrounded. But of the strength of those attacking him he was ignorant, for Rodriguez and his men were concealed behind trees or in bushes.

Rodriguez sent a man to one of the houses of the hamlet for kerosene and as much cotton bedclothing and other similar fabrics as he could collect. While his enemies were waiting for this man's return Palemo ordered his men to shoot in different directions, hoping to draw a fire which would enable him to locate the positions of his enemies and to form some estimate of their numbers. But Rodriguez gave orders that not a shot was to be returned. Then Palemo sent four men out by several different egresses, but they had scarcely exposed themselves when one fell dead and two were wounded. The fourth man succeeded in regaining cover.

The messenger who had been sent for inflammables returning, Rodriguez divided the stock between his own and Penalez's division of his force. Gathering oranges, which abounded, the men tied a bundle of cotton fabric saturated with kerosene to the fruit, inserted the end of a stick into the orange and, lighting the kerosene, swung the stick in a circle till the orange flew off and carried the burning mass against the thatched roof of the pulque house. It was not long before sufficient contact had been effected between the flames and the roof to set it afire.

The besieged now saw that they must either be burned alive or sally forth to meet an unknown force. There was no way of reaching the roof from within to put out the fire, and to attempt to do so from without would expose them to death from bullets. Palemo told his men that they would better die from lead than flames. But they were not of the kind to meet death heroically and preferred to wait for the flames rather than face the bullets. The bandit leader stepped forth alone and walked slowly forward. Rodriguez saw him and, directing the others not to fire, sent a bullet crashing into his shoulder. Palemo staggered, but kept on. Rodriguez sent another bullet into the other shoulder. Still the bandit advanced. Then Rodriguez pierced his enemy's brain, and he fell dead.

From that moment the hacendado seemed to lose desire for further revenge. Consenting that Penalez should spare the others if he chose, he mounted his horse and rode to the ruins of his hacienda.

Drawing rein among those who stood about the smoking ruins of his home, one of his friends approached him and said:

"Ah, Rodriguez, I am sorry for your loss! But you came near having a much greater one. Your wife and children are at my house. They fled on the approach"—

"My wife and children! Alive?"

"Yes. Come and satisfy them that you are safe. You have been gone so long that they fear you have fallen at the hands of the rebels."

With muttered thanks to heaven, Rodriguez dashed away, and in a few minutes he and his family were locked in one embrace.

Cut It Short.

While building the Panama canal Colonel Goethals knew exactly what he wanted done and would brook no arguments. One morning a rather fidgety subordinate came into the colonel's office.

"I got your letter, colonel," he began, "and I came to"—

He got no further, for the colonel, with uplifted eyebrows, cut in:

"Letter? Letter? There must be some mistake. I have written you no letter."

"Oh, yes, colonel," repeated the man. "I've got it here. It's about the work down at Miraflores. Now, you see"—

Again the colonel cut in:

"Oh, I see! But you misled me. You spoke of my letter. You meant, of course, my orders!"

The colonel's blue eyes stared coldly at the argumentative man, who, suddenly feeling that the conversation was at an end, "faded away."

Two Views of the Self Made Man.

A pathologist of standing inveighs against the "self made man" in terms that will be surprising to many. "The self made man," he says, "is often in the process of degeneration, and the first evidence of degeneracy in a family is the selfishness and meanness or the cunning, avarice and moral guile by which the self made man succeeds in amassing a fortune for his still more degenerate children to spend in gratifying their selfish desires."

There is another side to the matter, and Thoreau saw it when he said that the man who had acquired wealth would insist on having his sons educated, and thus he would become the real founder of a family.—Springfield Republican.

LONDON — The Daily Mail's Basel, Switzerland, correspondent says it is reported there that notices have been posted in the German frontier towns calling to the colors all men, trained or untrained between the ages of 39 to 45. Such men, the correspondent adds, number about 600,000.

GERMANY GIVEN NIPPONESE DEFI

Ultimatum Demands Kaiser Surrender Kia-Chow.

MUST COMPLY BY SUNDAY

Japan Insists Port Be Turned Over Pending Its Return to China Under 99 Year Lease Under Which It Came Into German Control in 1897—Gives U. S. Assurances.

TOKIO — The Japanese government has sent an ultimatum to Germany demanding that German warships in the far east be withdrawn or dismantled and that the German leased colony of Kiao-Chow be surrendered.

The ultimatum expires next Sunday, giving Germany just one week in which to send her reply to the Tokio government. If Germany within this week of grace does not accede to the Japanese demands, the Japanese government will take steps as it sees fit. The fact that the Japanese fleet left Japan some days ago for an unannounced point and that a considerable body of Japanese troops have been on transports awaiting an order to sail for similar length of time indicates that Japan is prepared to use such force as may be necessary to enforce her demands.

In its ultimatum, as the terms of that instrument are described by the usually well informed Jiji Shimpo, the Japanese government demands that Kiao-Chow be turned over to Japan pending its return to China under the terms of the 99 year lease under which it came into German control in 1897.

A German fleet seized Kiao-Chow bay in 1897, nominally to guarantee reparation for the murder of two German missionaries.

Negotiations were then entered into with the Chinese government and an agreement reached under which China leased to Germany for a term of 99 years the bay and an area of 117 square miles of land on both sides of the entrance to the bay. The lease provides that during its term Germany shall have all the rights of territorial sovereignty, including the right to erect fortifications. Germany declared Kiao-Chow a free port in 1899.

It was explained by Japanese that it was necessary for Japan to demand that Germany turn Kioa Chau over to her instead of to China because China in her present state is not strong enough to hold the territory leased to Germany against possible greedy nations. Japanese therefore intends to take it from Germany and hold it for China until such time as China has become strong enough and stable enough to be entrusted to hold what is rightfully hers.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Optimistic.

Among those who applauded the loudest and longest when the sweet girl graduated was a young man of twenty-two. He kept it up so long that an oldish man turned to him and said:

"You must be in love with that girl?"

"I am, sir."

"Going to marry her?"

"I am."

"On a salary of about $15 per week, I suppose?"

"No—only $12."

"And there will be times, young man"—

"Yes, there will be times when the flour barrel is empty."

"And you"—

"We will turn to that beautiful essay and have it served boiled, fried, roasted, hashed and warmed over and be filled up and content. Don't worry about us, Mr. Man!"—Providence Journal.

All the Bank's Fault.

Mrs. Barrows was worried. That fact was evident to her husband, although she endeavored to maintain a cheerful manner. Before the evening meal was over, however, he discovered the cause of her anxiety.

"Will," said she, "I am very much afraid that my bank is in a bad way."

"How foolish, Mabel! Don't let that cause you a moment's worry. Why, it's one of the strongest financial institutions in the state. Whatever got that idea into your head?"

"Well, it's very strange," replied Mrs. Barrows, still unconvinced. "They've just returned a check of mine for $40 marked 'No funds.'"—Harper's Magazine.

Question of Ownership.

Balie Peyton Waggener once loaned his grandson, Mark Waggener, enough money to purchase a motorcycle. The money was to be paid back by installment, the machine to remain the property of the grandfather until the last payment had been made. The other day while out riding Mark met Mr. Waggener and jumped off the motorcycle. "Say, grandfather," said the boy, "who does this machine belong to?"

"It belongs to me until you have made the last payment. That was the agreement, you know. But why do you ask?" questioned Mr. Waggener.

"Well, I just wanted to make sure," remarked Mark, with a grin. "Your motorcycle needs a new tire."—National Monthly.

Fooled Her.

Betty, a bright little five-year-old, was a born gossip. It was her custom as soon as she arrived at her grandmother's to say:

"Come into the kithen, g'ma. I've got a lot to tell you."

And she generally had, being blessed with three popular grownup sisters.

One day, however, she came in looking despondent.

"Any news, Betty?" inquired grandmother.

"Not much," said Betty soberly. "William (Sister Mabel's fiance) was over last night, but he and Mabel spelled most everything."—Judge.

False Hope.

Horace—I cannot help telling you again I love you. Can you not hold out any hope? Phoebe (wearily)—I did hold out one hope, but that's gone now. Horace—What was it? I"—Phoebe—I had hoped you wouldn't mention the subject again.—Manchester Guardian.

Geological Survey.

"You do not speak to him?"

"No," replied the scholarly girl. "When I passed him I gave him the geological survey."

"The geological survey!"

"Yes; what is commonly known as the stony stare."—Washington Star.

Chautauqua in Tecumseh.

Tuesday afternoon the Price Concert Co. composed of Mrs. Price and two daughters and Mr. Scott gave the musical prelude which was a most delightful entertainment. Miss Lucile Price as a reader gave several fine selections, and when she gave "That Old Sweetheart of Mine," she was accompanied by the others with the violin, piano and cornet, with most charming effect. As one expressed it Wm. Lloyd Davis who followed was a perfect cyclone of talk and his lecture-recital on Kipling with readings of several of his poems and prose selections was most interesting.

The evening entertainment was opened by the Price Concert Co. with several fine selections, the saxophone quartette and the cornet solo by Mr. Scott, deserve special mention. Miss Lucile Price gave a number of excellent readings Wm. Lloyd Davis then presented his views on Community Housekeeping. He had kept his eyes open while in Tecumseh, for he made many suggestions for improvements in our village, we blush to speak of some of them, and wonder why he should say such things about our Central High School building, calling it a Temple(?) of learning. He advocated its removal saying that if it was not removed it would be condemned by the State authorities within the next ten years. He even advocated $100,000 for a new school building, and dared to suggest that we needed a gymnasium and auditorium etc., and also some more land. However, he did not tell us anything we did not know about our local school conditions, and we believe the people appreciate the need of better school buildings and only need a love feast to bring them together to drop their various differences and settle on some united plan of action. In the main he spoke most complimentary of Tecumseh, but suggested some improvements along sanitary lines, the removal of old eyesores, the bills and placards from our buildings. More economy might be practiced in our town affairs, and those in authority should see to it that they receive full value for every dollar expended. Taking up the community housekeeping he suggested the extending of our boundery interests to the surrounding country making it one big community, he brought out many other important ideas, but space will not allow us to mention them. Mr. Davis gave us much food for thought, and his lecture has received much favorable comment.

Dr. Frank R. Brainard of California gave a most interesting illustrated lecture on the Panama Canal, and the coming exposition in California, the views were exceedingly fine, and gave one a most realistic idea of the canal and also of the exposition grounds.

WEDNESDAY.

Wednesday afternoon the Royal Black Hussar band gave an exceedingly good concert. Each member of the band proved himself an artist, and those in attendance were promised a great treat in the evening. A treat which was not on the program was given by Mrs. Bess Gearhart-Morrison, reader, who gave two excellent selections. the one a magazine story being exceptionally good, and we are sure that not one magazine was forgotten for she brought in the names of 67.

Owing to the illness of Sen. Wm E. Mason of Ill., who was to have given the address, Mr. Fredrick Dale Wood gave a very interesting talk on "The House of Desire," he emphisized the assertion that a man could be what he willed to be, and cited many instances of men who had attained to greatness by mere force of will. His arguments were very conclusive and were proven by facts.

Wednesday evening was one long to be remembered, as the Black Hussar Band gave a most wonderful entertainment A cornet solo by Mr. McDermott and an xylophone solo by Mr. Brown were cheered to the echo, they responded to several encores. Mrs. Bess Gearhart-Morrison gave several delightful recitations and the evening was a great success in every respect.

THURSDAY

Thursday afternoon the musical prelude was presented by the Hazel Folsom-Daggy Co. The pianist Miss Rimskinsky gave a most charming number and responded to an encore. Carl Lindegren followed with a banjo song and a sweet Irish melody, responding to an encore with "My little Woman" and delighted his audience with his fine voice. The violin solo by Miss Helen Dodge thrilled the heart of every lover of this most exquisite music, and she was heartily encored, her response was much appreciated.

The Flora Dance song by Mr. Lindegren and his encore were very pleasing The final number by the quartet, "The Rosary" was a most perfect climax to this musical treat.

Mrs. Hardy was then given the platform and in a most graceful and pleasing manner paid a fine tribute to Miss Kearney and presenting her with a bequet of flowers from the members of the Equal Suffrage Association, introduced her to the audience, Miss Kearney was received with cheers and from first to last was listened to with the closest attention. Her knowledge of conditions at home and, a[illegible] convincing testimony [illegible] favor of the enfranchisement of woman. A reception was tendered Miss Kearney and it was a pleasure to clasp hands with this gifted orator.

The evening entertainment was another proof of the excellence of this Chautauqua. The musical entertainment gave great pleasure to all. Each performer excelling in their various parts The lecture by Dr. George La Mont Cole, "Before You, What?" dealt with the Cliff Dwellers and was finely illustrated by stereoptican views. The subject was one of great interest and Mr. Cole carried his audience with him as he told the wonderful story of the long ago.

Today closes this grand Chautauqua which has been full of good things which will be long remembered by those who attended the meetings.

NO DULL MOMENTS AT THE BIG FAIR THIS YEAR.

Circus Attractions to Present Acts In Front of Grand Stand.

If there is a dull moment at the State Fair this year it will not be the management's fault. Never before has so much attention been given to amusement features as this season, and to cap the sheaf a program of free attractions will be given every afternoon and evening in front of the grand stand. These for the most part include spectacular acts which now are on tour with one or another of the great circuses. Briefly, they are as follows:

The Seven Arabian Genoas, whirlwind acrobats, who are making their first visit to this country; Shaw's one ring circus, a feature wherever it has been shown; the four Dekock brothers, French aerialists, now with the Hagenbeck & Wallace shows; the Five Flying Moores, a trapeze casting act, and the Casting Devals, aerialists. Edward R. Hutchins and his team of balloonists will make ascensions with four balloons, giving opportunity for four parachute leaps. The Fun Makers' Quartet will sing in the grand stand, and the Kilties' band will furnish a selected program each afternoon and evening, interspersing highland singing and dancing with the musical numbers.

A stage 50 by 40 feet will be erected directly in front of the grand stand, and upon this the acts will be presented.

The fireworks displays will be different each evening, the taking of Vera Cruz by the United States marines being one of the features.

The vaudeville acts will be sandwiched between the harness races during the afternoons and the different events of the horse show at night.

Rush Work on Hospital.

The illness of Dr. E. B. Smith, brigadier general of the National First Aid association, who was to be in charge of the erection of the Clara Barton hospital at the State Fair grounds, has prevented the work from being started ere this. General Manager Dickinson has taken the matter up, with Dr. Smith's aids, however, and the construction will go forward at once. The building will be completed in time for use during the Fair, the weeks of Sept. 7-18.

What the Robin Eats.

In the northern and southern parts of the west the robin is among the most cherished of native birds. It is an omnivorous feeder, and its food includes many orders of insects as well as earth worms, but 58 per cent of its food is derived from vegetable matter, the principal item being fruit. The general usefulness of the bird is such, however, that protecting orchards and fruit should be tried before the policy of killing them is determined on.

Oyster Divers.

Oysters are obtained in various ways. At Minorca, in the Mediterranean, the fisherman simply dives to a depth of seventy feet, with a weight in one hand to carry him down. With the other hand he picks up as many oysters as he can carry and brings them to the surface.—London Telegraph.

Radishes.

Radishes originated in China, where they have been cultivated for many centuries and sometimes grow as big as a man's head. In Germany the old fashioned country mothers cure hoarseness and cough with radish juice mixed with sugar candy.

Ford Motor Company Contracts For Immense Space In Automobile Building on Fair Grounds.

SIGHT A WONDERFUL ONE.

Parts Will Go Into Building Lifeless Pieces of Metal and Wood and Will Emerge Finished Motorcars Traveling Under Their Own Power.

The Ford Motor company will build automobiles as an attraction at the Michigan State Fair. Officials of the great concern met with General Manager Dickinson of the Fair a few days ago, and a contract was signed for one entire side of the Automobile building at the Fair grounds and for half the opposite side. These portions of the building in reality will be a branch of the immense plant, and here twenty-five cars will be produced each day of the Fair.

The space will be made over into a Ford assembling plant, such as the ones now in operation in San Francisco, Walkerville and other cities. All the machinery necessary in the final assembling of the car will be installed, and a sufficient number of employees will man the branch to keep it up to top production every day. These actual operations will be supplemented by the Ford company's motion picture machine, which will depict the many activities that enter into the manufacture of Ford cars. A theater will be improvised in the building, and in this the pictures will be shown.

Nothing Like It Anywhere.

Great interest attaches to the announcement because the exhibit will be the most novel and upon the most extensive scale of any display at any such exposition in this country. Processes of manufacture of different articles have been demonstrated many times, but never before has anything of this magnitude been attempted.

The miniature plant will be so arranged that the parts—lifeless pieces of steel, wire, leather and wood—enter at one end of the building and are so joined together that they emerge at the other end finished automobiles, ready to go into useful service at any moment. The cars will be complete when they leave the building and will be driven from the Fair grounds to the shipping platform.

Gets Exhibit That's Worthy.

"We have sought for a long time to get an automobile exhibit that was worthy of Michigan, the greatest automobile producing state in the Union, and I am pleased to announce that at last we have it," said General Manager Dickinson of the Fair. "The matter was presented to Mr. Ford and his associates, and they saw it in the same light we did.

"I never heard of any exhibit of this magnitude before, and the people who come to the Fair this year will be able to say they saw an automobile built there. It will be something to remember."

accompanied by pain here or there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—may be faint spells—or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering from that change into middle life which leaves so many wrecks of women. I have never had an occasion to consult a physician since—am in excellent health."

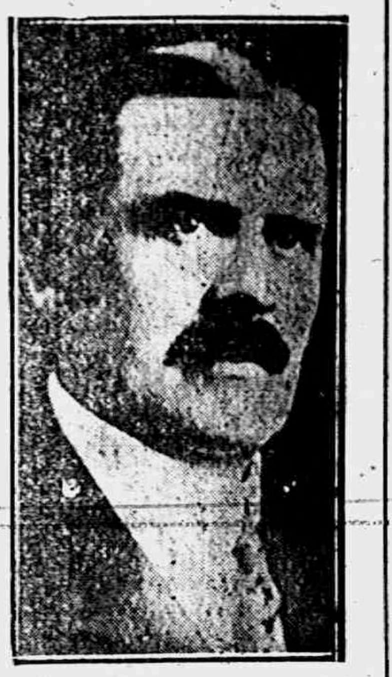
WANTS WIDER USE OF THE FAIR GROUNDS.

General Manager Dickinson Thinks Public Should Have Benefit Every Day.

The Michigan State Fair grounds, now in use by the people of the state for not to exceed a month during the year, will be placed at the disposal of the people every day in the year if George W. Dickinson, secretary and manager of the State Fair, has anything to say about it. The present season with the two weeks' Fair, the blue ribbon races, the cycle car races and exposition and the automobile and aeroplane races shows a wider use of the splendid property than ever before.



GEORGE W. DICKINSON, SECRETARY AND GENERAL MANAGER.

And Mr. Dickinson wishes to evolve some plan whereby it may be utilized far more generally than at present.

"The people of the state of Michigan, through their state agricultural society, have tied up many hundreds of thousands of dollars in the enterprise, and they should constantly be getting the worth of the investment," says Mr. Dickinson. "The buildings and the grounds are there in all their attractiveness, whether there is a fair or not. Communities are building schoolhouses today, not solely for use by the children during the school year, but by the people as social centers during the evenings and the long summer holiday. The community feels it should derive a daily benefit. The same is true of the State Fair.

"It has occurred to me that a coliseum could be erected on the grounds where great popular gatherings could be held. That does not seem like just the right idea, but it's a starter. I'd like to have suggestions on it. We will give the people good interest on their money when they attend the Fair this year, Sept. 7-18. It will be the best Fair we have ever held, but we do not care to stop there."

Great Midway at the Fair.

The Midway, that riot of noise and amusement which makes a fair beloved of old and young, will be more attractive than ever at the Michigan State Fair, which will be held at Detroit, Sept. 7-18. The shows which will be presented along the sawdust walk this year are of the highest grade obtainable, and General Manager Dickinson promises a number of rare surprises for Fair patrons.

TO SHOW PERSIAN FUR SHEEP

Only Specimens of Breed In United States Come to State Fair.

Through the efforts of George W. Dickinson, general manager, the Michigan State Fair, which holds its sixty-fifth annual exhibition on Sept. 7-18, has secured one of the most novel and interesting features that ever have been shown in Michigan. It is a flock of Persian fur sheep, imported by F. E. Dawley, Fayetteville, N. Y., and the only specimens of this breed in North America. The exhibit is of moment because the sheep are such a rarity and also because the United States government is contemplating the development of this breed in this country.

The Persian fur sheep are the producers of the Persian fur, for which there is such an enormous demand today. It is so great, in fact, that the value of each one of the sheep in this flock is $1,000 or more. The long, silky fleeces and peculiar texture of the wool or fur, as it is called, make the animals beautiful creatures to look upon.

Since the Persian fur came into such favor the United States department of agriculture investigated as to whether this breed of sheep can be raised in the United States. The result has been encouraging, and it is expected an official demonstration will be made by the department of agriculture. The flock that Mr. Dawley will bring to Michigan consists of bucks, ewes and lambs. They will be shown at the New York State Fair at Syracuse, will come to the Michigan State Fair for two weeks and then go to the Kentucky State Fair.

Ladies First.

Here is a little story of the late Admiral Fremantle, told by Dr. Ernest Young in his book of travel sketches entitled "From Russia to Siam."

When the steamer anchored off Canton the guides, as is their custom, boarded her at once. The admiral and his friends chose their guide and prepared to follow him. The admiral was about to descend the ladder and get into a native sampan when the guide pushed him back, saying:

"Ladies first."

"Oh, that doesn't matter," said the admiral. "I'm an old man."

"Ole man!" quickly responded the Chinaman. "Ole man all more ought to know muchee better."

"BETTER BABIES!" FAIR'S SLOGAN

NOTED WOMAN AT THE HEAD

Instruction Given to Mothers In Care of Children—Child Welfare Exhibit to Be on Display—Babies From All Over Michigan In Health Contest.

If the men and women of the Michigan of tomorrow are to be the happy, healthy, normal persons that make the best of citizens they must be happy, healthy and normal babies, and they must have the best of care and training through the perilous days of childhood. The management of the State Fair believes that while thousands of dollars have been spent—and well, too—in instruction to enable farmers to improve their flocks and herds, far less attention has been given the babies than is their due.

MRS. GEORGE G. CARON.

It has been only within the past two years that the United States government has realized the necessity of such instruction and has sought to provide it. The federal children's bureau has been established and is doing splendid work. The fair management has decided to supplement this each year with an effort of its own, and a better babies' department has been added to its activities. This fall, at the fair which will be held Sept. 7-18, instruction will be given to mothers in the care and training of their children, and a child welfare exhibit will be on display. In addition babies will be entered in a health contest, children from one to three years being eligible. Mrs. George C. Caron, president of the Detroit board of the Michigan Children's Home society and a recognized authority on child welfare, will be superintendent, and Dr. Mary Thompson Stevens of Detroit, judge.

DR. MARY THOMPSON STEVENS.

Mrs. Caron is the wife of a physician and for many years has been a recognized authority on child welfare. She is a mother, and she brings to her work an experience rich in understanding and in knowledge of child life.

All children between one and three years of age are eligible to entry, there being three classes. Babies from rural districts and towns of 1,000 population or less will be in Class A, those from cities and towns between 1,000 and 15,000 population in Class B, and those from cities of over 10,000 population in Class C. In addition, the Fair management offers special prizes for triplets six months and under twenty-four months old. The entries must be in Saturday, Sept. 5; the examinations will begin Wednesday, Sept. 9, and continue through to Sept. 16, the award of premiums being made Thursday, Sept. 17, at 11 a. m. The contest and the welfare exhibit will be held in the new Clara Barton hospital.

"The contest will be entirely educational," says Mrs. Caron. "It will be our effort to bring to the attention of the mothers of Michigan the importance of caring for their babies properly, of giving them the right kind of food and of dressing them in the clothing best suited to the seasons and to their needs. When babies are well started in life, when they get safely past those first few years, half the battle has been won. Boys and girls are of just as much account as cattle and horses, if they are not more so, and we owe it to our state to do the best we can for them."

RECOGNIZE STATE'S PROGRESS

Six National Hog Breeders' Associations Offer Premiums at Fair.

An idea of the merit of the swine exhibit at the Michigan State Fair, Sept. 7-18, may be gained from the fact that no less than six national organizations have offered premiums and trophies for the various breeds. While Michigan has not been one of the most prolific hog producing states in the Union, it has taken rapid strides in the past five years, and the announcement of the national trophies is evidence that its progress is being recognized.

The American Berkshire association offers a solid silver trophy valued at $50 to the owner of the best herd of Berkshires consisting of a boar and three sows under one year. The animals must be bred and shown by a Michigan exhibitor, and the entries must be made with the secretary of the American Berkshire association, as well as with the secretary of the Fair. In addition, the Michigan Berkshire association offers a silver trophy valued at $25 to the owner of the best four Berkshire pigs, either sex, under six months old.

The American Hampshire Record association offers a special silver trophy for the best four pigs of either sex under six months old shown by a Michigan exhibitor.

The National O. I. C. Chester White Record association will give cash premiums for the best boar and best gilt over six and under twelve months, the best boar and best gilt under six months and grand champion boar and grand champion sow.

The American Yorkshire club will award a special cash premium for the best young herd—boar and three sows under one year—bred by the exhibitor, who shall be a member of the American Yorkshire club.

The National Duroc-Jersey Record association offers three cash prizes for the best boar and three sows owned by the exhibitor, a silver trophy for the best young herd under one year old consisting of a boar and three sows, three cash premiums for the best barrow under one year, and three cash premiums for the three best pens of barrows.

The American Duroc-Jersey Swine Breeders' association offers five special premiums for the best Duroc-Jersey herd under one year old.

These special premiums are in addition to the many premiums offered by the Fair management for the winners in the various classes in the swine department.

M. A. C. OWES FOUNDING TO MICHIGAN STATE FAIR.

General Manager Dickinson Tells Interesting History of Institutions.

The Michigan Agricultural college, the foremost institution of its kind in the United States, owes its existence largely to the Michigan State Fair. It was founded five years after the first State Fair, in 1849, and after successive exhibitions of the state's agricultural products and of its possibilities had pointed the need.

"What a splendid thing this Fair is; how it encourages men to raise better and larger crops and women to make their homes more pleasant to live in," said these pioneers. "But look at the acres there are left to drain, to cultivate and to bring to their fullest fruition. These are tasks for trained men, and in order to reach them we must have a school. The Fair, then, will not only be an exhibition place for the state's products; it will be a means of showing to the people the scientific methods that are proving so valuable in what they are accomplishing."

And the action was suited to the word. Under the administration of Governor Ranson, the first president of the State Fair, and the directors of the State Agricultural society, passed an act creating the school. That the Fair might carry out its demonstration program it was decreed that it should be held in cities in different portions of the state.

"And year after year the Fair trotted about much as did the circuit riders when the state was young," says G. W. Dickinson, general manager. "There wasn't much of a Fair to move on the start, and this part of the plan worked pretty well. Along about 1900, however, it began to present many difficulties.

"The directors found it too much of a job to put a $250,000 plant on wheels and send it from place to place, especially as it was growing bigger all the time. The improvement of transportation facilities made it far easier for the people to go to the mountain than for the reverse to be the case, and the permanent location at Detroit was chosen.

"The wisdom of the step soon became apparent. Buildings especially designed to house the stock and the other displays could be erected, the grounds could become beautiful and the Fair might become what its directors hoped it might be—a fitting exhibition of the state's progress."

OLD SOLDIERS AGAIN TO BE GUESTS OF STATE FAIR.

Tuesday, Sept. 8, Is Day G. A. R. Button Is Admission Badge.

Tuesday, Sept. 8, will be Old Soldiers' day at the Michigan State Fair. The invitation issued last year by the Fair management to the old soldiers in the state was accepted with such hearty spirit and the veterans had such a splendid time that they are asked to come again.

In his letter to the old soldiers General Manager Dickinson says:

"The management of the Michigan State Fair, desiring to recognize the old soldiers of Michigan, extends to them an invitation to spend Tuesday, Sept. 8, at the State Fair. We have thought it best to set aside a special day for this occasion that we may make every arrangement for your entertainment. The only requirement for admission will be the wearing of the regulation Grand Army button. A special tent will be provided, where the members can get together and talk over reminiscences. We trust that all members will come to enjoy a day's recreation and witness the great display of Michigan's agricultural and industrial exhibits."

Famous Driver Is Pinned Under Capsized Car.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 24.—The Elgin national road race, won by De Palma, developed into a tragedy, Spencer Wishart, the wealthy young Philadelphia driver and bridegroom of only two months, meeting death. His mechanician, John C. Jenter, a New Jersey boy, probably was fatally injured.

Wishart was leading the race, closely pressed by Burman. He was driving with his accustomed indifference to danger at an estimated rate of eighty miles an hour. In trying to pass a machine ahead of him on the thirteenth lap the hubs of the two machines came together.

Wishart's machine crashed into a fence and turned over, pinning him beneath it. His right leg was broken his skull fractured and his chest crushed. He was hurried to St. Joseph's hospital, where he died in the presence of his bride, who, until two months ago, was Miss Louise McGowan of the wealthy Indianapolis family of that name.

FRESHET FERTILIZES THIS FARMER'S FIELD

Peat Masses Disintegrate, Land Again Productive.

Mason, Mich., Aug. 24.—William Keller of Delhi is the recipient of enough fertilizer to cover a ten-acre lot, and a peculiar freak of nature placed it on the field in bulk.

The field, part of a heavily timbered section bought from the government in 1836, had been in a high state of cultivation for forty years, but during the heavy floods three years ago water stood there several weeks. During that time three huge masses, resembling whales, were seen floating in the field, with about half their bulk above the water. It was thought they were tree trunks heavily crusted with mud, but when the waters subsided it was found they were composed of a substance resembling peat. The land had never been drained, a strata of sand under the surface carrying off all superfluous water.

After this flood the soil became unproductive until Mr. Keller saw this spring that by exposure to the elements the peat masses had disintegrated into a rich compost and utilized it as fertilizer.

ITALY AND AUSTRIA NEAR WAR

One of Great Conflicts of War Has Been Raging From Ghent to Walcourt Thirty Hours—Will Be Days Before Result Is Known—Russian Army Has Advanced Thirty Miles Into Germany—Theophile Delcasse and Count Witte Urging Italians to Join In Movement on Allies.

Following a declaration of war against Germany, Japan ordered her war ships to attack Kiao-Chow at once.

At Charleroi in Belgium, about 200 miles from the French border, the great battle between the kaiser's forces and the allies rages on. The French forced the attack after twenty-four hours of fighting, and succeeded in putting in jeopardy the German line of communication and menaced the enemy's position on the River Meuse. The battle, which may last for days, is raging on a line from a point south of Ghent, southeastward to Hal, southeast to Charleroi and thence southwest to Aimcourt, with the main shock of conflict at Chaleroi.

Belgium will be rewarded for her support of Great Britain and France with an advance of $100,000,000 to meet the necessities of the war. France and Great Britain will each supply half of the sum.

Russian troops are pushing forward toward Koenigsberg, the most important city in eastern Germany, following their victory at Gumbinnen. The Russians have occupied Insterburg, thirty miles inside the German frontier. Three army corps arrived at Insterburg today to reinforce the czar's troops in their invasion. The Russians captured eight German cannon and many prisoners. On the Galician front the Austrians have suffered heavy losses. In engagements at Gorodak and Krasnik the Russians captured six officers and 250 German soldiers.

Relations between Italy and Austria are almost at the breaking point. Italy's army probably will be completely mobilized by Aug. 27. Austria is declared to be exerting all possible pressure to force Italy to enter the war on the side of the now disrupted triple alliance. France and Russia have sent, respectively, Theophile Delcasse and Count Witte, their most distinguished diplomatists, to counteract the Austrian solicitations.

Austria is reported to have lost several warships in a naval engagement in the Adriatic sea.

Greece is reported to be sending troops into Servia to fight the Austrians.

London, Aug. 24.—The great battle between the Germans and the allies in Belgium has now been in progress for over thirty hours, according to a dispatch received here. At the conclusion of a day of fighting, during which the Germans had been the aggressors, the French, according to the reports, took the offensive in the vicinity of Charleroi in an attempt to crush the center of the enemy's right wing. No indication as to the result of this movement has yet been received here.

The battle line now extends from a point south of Ghent, southeast to Hal, continues in the same direction to Charleroi and then turns to the southwest to Walcourt.

The British government gave orders for the establishment of auxiliary hospitals for the wounded of the allies.

It is not expected that this great battle, of greater magnitude than any of the famous battles of history, will reach a decisive stage for some days

JAPAN AT WAR WITH GERMANY

World Notified of Formal Declaration by Nippon.

ARMY AND NAVY ARE ON WAY

Orders Issued to Capture Kiao-Chow Immediately—50,000 Troops Are Being Transported to Base of Action—Chinese Government Accepts the Promises of Japan at Face Value.

Tokio, Aug. 24.—Japan formally declared war on Germany at 6 p. m. Sunday, Tokio time.

Germany failed to reply to the Japanese ultimatum that she withdraw from Kiao-Chow and the far east.

The declaration of war was issued as an "imperial rescript."

Immediately after the issuing of the "imperial rescript" the Japanese military and navy forces were ordered to move against Kiao-Chow at once.

Count Von Rex, the German ambassador to Japan, received his passports and will leave for America, either on the Minnesota on Aug. 27, or on the Manchuria on Aug. 29. Germany's interests in Japan will be looked after by the American ambassador.

While there is not the same enthusiasm in Japan over the war with Germany that there was over the Russo-Japanese war, the action of the Japanese government meets with the approval of the nation and crowds gathered in front of the foreign office and war and naval offices and cheered the officials. Lantern processions in the streets followed the issuing of the formal declaration of war.

Austrian Cruiser to Disarm.

The Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Elizabeth is reported to have left Tsing-Tao and it is reported that she will take refuge in a neutral port and disarm in order that Austria may not become involved in the war in the far east. The statement is made at the foreign office that Japan will remain friendly to Austria unless the latter adopts an offensive attitude toward Japan.

Reports have been received here to the effect that Germany is trying to transfer the Shan Tung railroad, which has its eastern terminus at Tsing-Tao, to American interests. It is believed here, however, that pursuing its policy of neutrality the United States will not take over this or other German interests here.

Saburo Shimado, a member of the parliamentary opposition, in a speech in parliament, said that he believed that Japan did not desire to keep Kiao-Chow and that it was her policy to prevent any disturbance in China.

China Satisfied With Japan.

London, Aug. 24.—Reuter's correspondent at Pekin telegraphs that the German minister at Pekin had completed negotiations with the Chinese foreign office regarding the disposition of Tsing-Tao and the articles were about to be signed when Japan's ultimatum was announced and the Chinese foreign office decided not to proceed further with the matter.

It is reported in Chinese dispatches that President Yuan-Shi-Kai is satisfied with the position and pledges of Japan.

Japan Announces War to U. S.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Announcement of the war by Japan against Germany was made at the Japanese embassy here following the receipt of an official dispatch from Tokio.

Immediately upon receipt of this dispatch Ambassador Chinda proceeded to the state department and handed to Counselor Lansing a copy of the declaration issued by the Japanese government. Mr. Lansing communicated the news to the White House and to Mr. Bryan, who is out of the city over Sunday.

According to the information received from Tokio, the government waited six hours after the expiration of the week given Germany in which to reply to the Japanese ultimatum. The declaration was dated Sunday, 6 p. m., Tokio time, but asserted that a state of war had existed since noon of Sunday, when the period set by Japan for Germany to make reply expired.

It is understood that the German ambassador at Tokio was handed a copy of the declaration of war and his passports given him

Officers Say War Is Keeping Many Ships From Using Waterway.

Panama, Aug. 24.—During the first week of business the Panama canal earned approximately $55,000, not including the amount collected for large service and payments made in advance for ships on their way to use the canal. These amounts would bring the total receipts up to almost $150,000.

Traffic, while considered good, was not up to the expectations of canal officers, who say that the war is keeping many ships from using the waterway.

CITY'S CIVIC LEAGUE RAIDS 'BLIND TIGERS'

More Than 200 Cases of Beer Fill Jail Yard.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 24.—Seventy-five members of Muncie Civic league, sworn in as deputy sheriffs and armed with search warrants, conducted a general blind tiger raid which resulted in more than 200 cases of beer being confiscated. No arrests were made at any of the places visited; the special officers merely conducted a search and took charge of the goods on hand.

Since the saloons were voted out of Muncie blind tigers have been flourishing on every hand and the "drys" claim the city authorities have made no effort to drive them out.

A secret meeting was held in the High Street M. E. church when between seventy and eighty prominent men were sworn in as deputy sheriffs. At 8 o'clock the jail yard was full of cases and barrels of beer and whisky and wagons were still on their way to the jail with more "evidence." Ward Marshall, prominent "dry" leader, was seriously hurt when he was hit over the head with a beer bottle.

One of the places raided is said to be owned by a member of the board of police commissioners.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Reversal

A Love Story of Wealth and Poverty

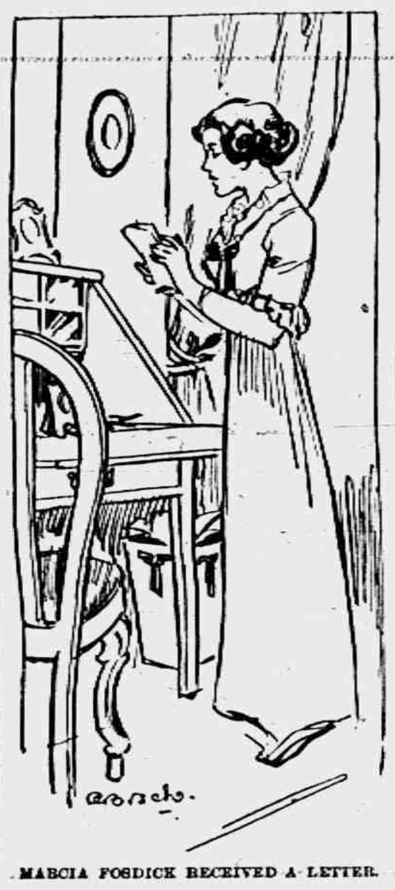
By F. A. MITCHEL

Edward Ferguson was a very good fellow, but all good fellows have their faults, and Ned has his. His father was at the head of the firm of Ferguson & Co. and understood to be rich. At any rate, he and his family lived in fine style. Ned was to take his father's place at the head of the firm and was looked upon as an excellent catch by all the young girls of his acquaintance. He could have married any one of several with a fortune in her own right.

This he would have liked to do, for he was ambitious to take a high position in the world—that is, such a position as great wealth brings—but unfortunately he fell in love with a girl who could not aid him in this respect. Marcia Fosdick was the daughter of a man who was a born experimenter. He had tried so many experiments and failed so many times that whenever he launched a new scheme it was dubbed another of Fosdick's follies.

Ned must either relinquish the plan of adding to his prospective fortune by marriage or suffer and cause Marcia to suffer, for the affair between them was mutual. I have said that he was a good fellow. He showed it by giving up so much of his ambition as pertained to an addition to his fortune by marriage. I have said that he had his faults. The way he showed one of them was this:

He wished Marcia to appreciate the sacrifice he was making in marrying a girl who could not aid him in his desire for that power which wealth is capable of giving. But how could he transmit a statement of the fact to her? It was a very delicate matter for him to handle. He was a much better writer than talker. In a letter he could say just what he wanted to say and no more; in speech he did not express himself well and was apt to say too much. It occurred to him to make his formal declaration to Marcia in a note. Under cover of this greatest compliment a man can pay a woman he might impart the fact that he had resigned one of several fortunes for her. This, instead of making him appear to honor her by marrying her, would show that he loved her better than worldly goods.



MARCIA FOSDICK RECEIVED A LETTER.

He wrote a number of notes, trying his best to give this impression, but do what he would an appearance of condescension on his part would crop out among his most carefully chosen words. He laid the letters aside and in a few days read them over, choosing the one that he considered smacked the least of honoring the girl he was asking to be his wife. But to another it would certainly not have been an ideal proposal, for every one knows that a lover must be nothing more than a beggar.

Ferguson laid the letter on his writing desk in his room, intending to post it the next morning when he went to business. But before leaving in the morning he read it over and concluded not to send it till his return in the evening. He put it in an unaddressed envelope and locked it up. During the day he had a good deal of business correspondence with parties in San Francisco about a matter that occupied his whole attention. On returning to his home in the evening he took out the letter with the intention of reading it again, but, being ashamed of his vacillation, refrained, addressed it, sealed it and after dinner took it out and put it in the letter box.

When several days had passed and he received no reply to his proposal he began to worry. Could it be that, after all, the letter had appeared to Marcia as if he considered himself altogether too good for her? Every day after that added to his terror, and when a week had passed and he received no answer he was completely demoralized. Then followed periods of sensitive fear, calmness, shame and pride. Why could he not have gone to see Marcia and said simply, "I love you—be my wife?"

Instead of taking a train and going a dozen miles to the suburban town where Marcia lived and having it out with her he undertook to analyze her feelings on receiving his note. He could see her lip curl on reading his so called delicate reference to what he had given up for her. Then he fancied her indignantly tearing the note into little bits and tossing them into the wastebasket.

Instead of going to Marcia and throwing himself on her mercy he listened to the dictates of pride. A man, he argued, conscious of right, of superiority, defers to a woman. She receives his deference and appreciates it as homage. But let him beg forgiveness for a wrong he has done her and he will only add to her contempt for him.

This reasoning decided him to stand on his dignity. He would await some word from Marcia if it killed him. It certainly wore on him dreadfully. He had been used to calling on her at least once or twice during each month. They seldom met except when he called upon her, for she seldom came to the city, and when she did there was a very slight probability of their passing each other. However, a couple of months after Ned had written his proposal they did meet in a crowded street. Marcia passed him with a constrained bow.

One day Ned's father fell and was picked up unconscious. He never spoke again and died within two days. Ned now became the head of Ferguson & Co. and began his administration of its affairs by making a thorough investigation as to its finances. One reason for his overhauling its accounts was that he had noticed shortly before his father's death that he had appeared worried, and it was suspected that the cause had brought on the stroke that had resulted in his death. What was Edward Ferguson's surprise to find that his father had been engaged in speculations that had caused an enormous gap in the firm's finances. Had he lived he would have been obliged to face a failure within a very short time.

There was nothing to do but for Ned to wind up the affairs of the concern. Fortunately he was not a member of the firm and was not loaded with its debts. But now, instead of thirsting for the power that wealth gives, his only ambition was to pay the debts left by his father.

While Ned was awakening from a dream of wealth, Marcia Fosdick was awakening from a dream of poverty. Her father had at last struck a scheme that paid him very largely. He had invented an attachment for an automobile which sooner or later all such machines must have. He was selling the right to use it to all manufacturers, and his royalties were already considerable.

Ned Ferguson saw in the newspapers an account of the invention and the change it made in Marcia's affairs. When he had written that condescending letter he was rich and she was poor. Now the conditions were reversed. He had lost his fortune and the girl he loved. He did not expect a continuance of the favors he had received from any of the wealthy girls he might have married. They were quite sympathetic, but none of them gave him any further encouragement.

One morning Marcia Fosdick received a letter postmarked San Francisco. Withdrawing it from the envelope, she found two letters. One was from a lady whom she had met several times socially, who said: "The inclosed has been going the rounds of this state for a long while and has finally come under my notice. I think it must be intended for you. At any rate, I send it to you."

The moment Marcia saw the address on the inclosure, covered with stamped finger pointers, "try this" and "try that place," she recognized Ned Ferguson's handwriting.

Ferguson came home one evening with a heavy heart. He had placed the affairs of Ferguson & Co. in liquidation and had offered the family home for sale. He found a letter in the hall awaiting him and, taking it up, saw at once that it was from Marcia. He opened it and read it:

> Your lovely letter was only received this morning after having traveled all over the state of California. I regret that it did not come to me in time to show you how deeply I have felt for you from the moment I heard of your affliction and misfortune. I give you all the consolation I can—my own unworthy self.

Ferguson stood dazed. In an instant the fabric he had built up about his relations with Marcia Fosdick had collapsed. He had nothing to fear from her on account of his condescension in offering to marry her. But the fact that he had so considered it came down upon him with sledgehammer force. Singular it is that, while he had then considered her poverty a barrier between them, he now considered her affluence in the same light.

However, Marcia Fosdick had no desire for anything more than the comfort and comparative independence that wealth can give. She loved Ned Ferguson with her whole heart, and she would accept no withdrawal of his proposal.

Ferguson often thinks of the day that he wrote his proposal and was corresponding with parties in California at the same time. He blesses the fact that the two fell together and an interval elapsed between the writing of the note and its reply. What occurred during that interval doubtless gave him an acceptance instead of a refusal.

COUNTY NORMAL OPENS SEPTEMBER 7.

The Lenawee County Normal opens for another years work on Monday Sept 7

How many of those who aspire to become teachers have thought of the Normal Training Class at Blissfield, of its work, and of the opportunity it offers you for advancement as a teacher?

For the benefit of those who are thinking of this line of work, we take the liberty of offering the following information.

Applicants for the County Normal must have completed work through the eleventh grade of some High School, and all graduates are given a certificate to teach in the Schools of the County for a period of three years.

This certificate may be transferred to another county if approved by the County Commissioner and Board of Examiners of said county. Graduates are not required to pass state examinations.

Work done at the Normal can be applied on a life certificate at any of the State Normals or on courses at the University of Michigan. After taking this course you can get your life certificate from the State Normal in one year and a summer semester.

At the Normal you take up the study of teachers' work under the guidance of expert instructors in the training room, and when you have done the work, you are ready to go in to a schoolroom and make good.

The tuition is free, most text books are furnished you; rooms to work in are pleasant and social conditions the best.

Room and board can be secured at the private homes and Supt. J. S. Page already has a list of those who offer to room and board Normal Students for next year. He will gladly furnish you with names upon request. If at Blissfield call upon Sec't R. H. Ellis for this list of names.

The Normal can accommodate twenty-five students and those in charge want to complete the list as soon as possible.

Write Supt. Page or County Commissioner Tripp for information or or enrolled, plans can be made for accomodating you.

Make this year's Normal the best ever.

Blazing the way for the Wisconsin Annual Automobiles Reliability Tour in a 1915 Mitchell Special Six.

The tour on Sept. 2, 3 and 4 will be an Economy-Reliability run conducted under grade one rules of the AAA and the route is approximately 500 miles. Four trophies as follows are the reward for the winners:

Sentinel trophy for best average in both reliability and fuel contest.

Free Press trophy for car with best record. Penalizations for road repairs etc., figuring in reward.

Wisconsin Motorist Trophy awarded for most economical fuel consumption record. Heavy cars will have an equal chance with light cars for the reason that weight will be considered.

RESEARCH CIRCLE

The Research Circle will hold its midmummer meeting at the home of Mrs. Andrew Wilson on Friday afternoon Aug. 28th. All those desiring to become members are invited to be present at this meeting.

"THE CALLING OF DAN MATTHEWS."

The first road attraction booked for the coming season at the Bradley Opera House is Gaskill and MacVitty's production of Harold Bell Wright's famous novel, "The Calling of Dan Matthews." The play is dramatized from Mr. Wright's book and may be called a sequel to "The Shepherd of the Hills" which this same management presented here last season, as it follows the life and efforts of "Young Dan" the son of "Matt and Sammy" the leading characters in "The Shepherd of the Hills."

"The Calling of Dan Matthews" is a modern play of today, and strikes straight from the shoulder. It deals with the fight of a big warm hearted man, who's honest in his convictions strong in his desire to do right for rights sake, and with contempt for narrow minded prejudice. The piece is entirely out of the common order of plays, vigorously treated, powerful in characterization and abounding in human sympathy. It is a play worth the while of every one seeing, not only as a delightful evening's amusement, but as a lesson well taught.

"The Calling of Dan Matthews" will be presented at the Bradley Opera House, Friday, September 4th with an exceptionally strong company and a wealth of special scenery. Gaskill & MacVitty, who are presenting this attraction, are the same producers who gave us "Rosaline of Red Gate" two years ago and "The Shepherd of the Hills" last year, so their offering this season can be looked forward, too, as one of the reliable bookings of the seasons.

Personal Items

A noticeable fact of Sunday afternoon was at one time we had rain, hail and sunshine and a rainbow together, and several have reported that the rainbow was beautifully reflected on the ground.

Up to two o'clock the number of votes cast at the primaries was 149. 55 in the first precint and 94 in the second. The usual full vote runs about 700 very little interest is being shown.

One of the most active business men on the street is E. M. Dewey of Macon who motors in for supplies for his store in that town. For carrying his freight goods, he has lately attached a trailer to his car, and can carry quite a stock of goods in this manner.

Chautauqua in Tecumseh.

The closing sessions of the Chautauqua were surely a fitting climax to the wonderful week of pleasure and profit, enjoyed by the citizens of Tecumseh.

The National Grand Opera Co. opened the afternoon meeting with the finest concert selections from "Martha" and "Il Trovatore." The tenor singer sang the "Beduin Love Song" and responded to an encore, his voice was exceptionally fine. The singing of "His Lullaby" by the contralto singer, and the duet by the baritone and contralto voices in "The Music Master" gave unbound pleasure.

Congressman F. S Jackson of Kansas, in his lecture on "You, I and Uncle Sam" carried his audience with him with his wonderful gift of oratory. He gave a half hour talk in the evening, taking for his theme "What Makes Kansas?" and again made his audience glad that they were permitted to hear such a gifted speaker

The National Grand Opera company was one of the richest treats of Chautauqua. Mr. James Hamilton was one of the finest tenor singers ever heard in Tecumseh, while Mr. Mossberg with his splendid baritone voice charmed his hearers, Miss Pierce and Miss Giles were not to be excelled, and in the various solos, duets and chorus, with Miss Rolla Andrews as accompanist the effect was perfect, Miss Andrews also gave two delightful readings The costumes worn in the rendering of the 'Bohemian Girl' added much to the interest of the music

HONORING MISS ALICE SATTETHWAITE

The many friends of Miss Alice Satterthwaite, whose marriage to Bertram Wood of Sacremento, Cal., will be solemnized next month, are bestowing upon her a host of pleasant memories which will serve to wile away many an hour in her new home in the land of sunshine and of flowers.

"Allie" has made many friends as librarian, by her pleasing personality and kind treatment of her many customers, especially with the children who will miss her at the round table in their reading room.

We extend our best wishes for a happy future with the man she has chosen for her companion through life.

An unique reception was that given by Miss Anna Satterthwaite, for her cousin Alice last Tuesday when twelve cousins gathered at her pleasant home on West Chicago St.

A most enjoyable time was spent in social good cheer. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess. Miss Laura Comfort from the hospital at Philadelphia and Miss Beth Satterthwaite from the hospital in Baltimore both training as nurses were the out of town guests.

Exquisite in its appointments wss the luncheon given by Mrs. J. M. Mulvaney and Miss Mulvaney at 1 o'clock on Thursday to honor Miss Alice Satterthwaite,

The color scheme of yellow and white adorned the attractive rooms of the Mulvaney home Massed in the dining room were large bunches of golden glow and this flower formed the large center piece on the luncheon table. Surrounding the central boquet was a wreath of cut blossoms tied to streamers of yellow ribbon which extended to the guests' plates. The place cards, cleverly designed and painted by Mrs. Mulvaney, were tiny golden winged Cupids, poised for flight on the tumbers at each place and holding cards bearing the names of the guests.

As the party left the dining room Miss Satterwaite was presented with a large package containing gifts of various sorts from each of her friends who was present. The opening of the package and examination of its contents caused much merriment. Cards and music followed until the late hours of the afternoon, when the guests left with heartiest appreciations of the charming hospitality of their hostesses,

Last Thursday afternoon Mrs. B J. Pulver and Miss Josephine Hayden entertained a company of twenty young ladies in honor of Miss Alice Satterthwaite at the home of Miss Hayden. A red and white color scheme was carried out. On the tables red shades for the candles and strings of red hearts, bows of white tulle decorated the candelabra.

At the close of the dinner the company were called to the porch, where they were requested to follow Alice who was guided by cords which were strung over the lawn, through the driveways and the back yards and finally into the living room of Mrs. Pulver's home. A hugh white parasol was suspended in the archway with streamers of white tulle decorated with red hearts, Alice drew each one from the parasol with a package attached, enclosing a gift from each one of those present. After a short visit they again marched to the Hayded home when cards furnished the further amusement of the evening.

Tactfulness of Old Sam.

The stout lady struggled with difficulty into the railway carriage.

"Ah," she gasped, "that door might ha' been made by Old Sam."

She paused for breath, and then, says the Manchester Guardian, proceeded to explain herself.

"You see, Old Sam was one of them chaps 'oo'd getten on. Went from a three an' six cottage to a big 'ouse. But 'is missis wasn't used to a big 'ouse and spent all 'er time in kitchen wi' t' servants. Old Sam didn't like this, but 'e never argued wi' wimmen. Now, she was stout, like me. So he takes her away to Blackpool, and while they was away he'd the kitchen door built up narrer, so 't' servants could get in and out, but not t' misses. That did 'er, that did."

"'E'd what I call tac'," said a man opposite.

Longevity of Birds.

In ancient days it was the general belief that ravens lived longer than any species of birds, and it was said that their age frequently exceeded a century. Recent studies of the subject indicate that no authentic instance of a raven surpassing seventy years of age is on record. But parrots have been known to live one hundred years. There is also a record of a golden eagle which died at Schonbrunn at the age of 118; another was kept in the Tower of London for ninety years, while a third died at Vienna aged 104 years. Geese and swans are tenacious of life, and extraordinary accounts exist of the great age to which they have attained. Buffon and other naturalists have credited them with eighty and one hundred years of life.

Eyes That Shine at Night.

The gleam of a cat's eyes when a light catches them in the darkness appears to be due to reflection from a layer behind the retina called the "choroid tapetum." This layer includes numerous flat cells packed with crystalloid bodies, which act like a mirror. In some beetles and moths the eyes shine like rubies when they are obliquely illumined at night. Professor Ennalon has recently studied the eyes of one of the hawk moths and finds that the retina is very thick and infiltrated with a rose colored pigment, "erythropsin." Part of the retina forms a tapetum, and the reflection is due to a network of silvery air tubes, or tracheae, helped to some extent by movement of the retinal pigment.

Often, after stooping a sharp twinge darted through my loins, obliging me to lie down. I was laid in bed for several days and I believe that the trouble was caused by excessive stooping. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Wright & Sons Drug store and a few boxes restored me to good health. Since then, whenever I have felt in need of a kidney medicine, I have taken Doan's Kidneys Pills and the results have been very pleasing. Egypt's Flood Time.

June 15 is in Egypt an anxious time, for then it is that there comes the first indication of the annual flood. The amount of the rise has been accurately recorded every year from 3600 B. C. to the present time, for there is only a foot or two between starvation and plenty, and between plenty and devastation. The rise is recorded by the nilometer constructed by the Caliph Mutawakhul more than ten centuries ago, on the island of Rhoda, opposite Cairo. A square well, from the water of which rises a marble column, is connected with the river by a canal. As the water rises more of the pillar is hidden. When the "eighteen cubits" mark is passed the starvation specter vanishes, the "nineteen cubits" mark awash stops the grumblers, and twenty-two cubits completely satisfies the optimist. But if the twenty-four cubit mark goes under devastation is at hand. But the Assuan dam has mitigated the anxiety of 5,000 years.—London Chronicle.

Our Abused Feet.

There have been many railing accusations brought against civilization, but may they not all be summed and typified in the prevalent custom of abusing feet?

We inclose them in leather air tight coverings, and may this not be why our souls are so hidebound? When we wish to be particularly civil we paint this leather with an impervious polish that the ten poor prisoners in the two black holes of Calcutta may be exquisitely punished.

When I think of the abuse heaped upon our feet, how the toes are misshapen by irrational compression, how the arches are broken by high heels, and how corns, bunions and abrasions afflict alike the darling of fashion in her too narrow boots and the laborer in his hard brogans, and how humanity climbs on utterly without initiative to break the bonds of habit, I do not wonder at the other things they do.—Chicago News.

An Absentminded Amateur.

They were talking about their husbands over the tea things. Husbands and the weather supply the same vacuum between the gales of gossip.

"Theophilus, you know, is very absentminded and so wrapped up in his new study of photography that that's all he thinks of. You can't imagine the time I have with him."

She paused a moment to imagine it herself, while her listener found an idle interest in creasing the lace ends with her fingers.

"Oh, this is what I was going to tell you! Theophilus came out of the dark room the other evening just as dinner was set. I says to him, 'Theophilus, what are you standing up there rolling that plate of soup around like that for?' 'Just a minute,' he says to me, 'just a minute. It's developing nicely. See that high light coming up?' 'High light nothing!' I says. 'That's cracker. Sit down!'"—Kansas City Star.

Workers Without Wages.

Birds live to eat. It is lucky for men they do. Some years ago a French scientist told the world that if all the birds should suddenly die man would have only a year's life left to him and proved his point to the satisfaction of other scientists.

How much does a bird eat? Take a robin as an example. It eats at certain seasons of the year about double its weight in insects and worms every day.

The bird's dinner hour begins at sunrise and ends an hour after sunset. Any legislation looking to the shortening of its hours of labor, which are coincident with its hours of eating, would bring famine. All the song birds and all the silent birds give their service to man, and they ask no pay for it except to be let alone.—Our Dumb Animals.

Golf Balls.

The first golf balls were made of untanned bull's hide, two rounds forming the ends, another the middle. These pieces were softened, shaped and firmly sewed together, a small hole being left through which feathers could later be stuffed—a difficult process accomplished with the aid of a steel rod.

Windsor Castle Kitchens.

The kitchens at Windsor castle are perfect in all their arrangements. The chief kitchen is a fine lofty room lined with white tiles. It contains a marvelous collection of copper saucepans that vary in size from the dimensions of a tub down to that of a tiny breakfast cup. Another feature is the huge steel table used for serving. It is brilliantly polished and has hollow legs through which steam passes upward, heating the whole table. Another apartment is called the "green room," and is set apart for fruit used at dessert, and there is also a room assigned to the "table deckers," whose sole duty it is to attend to the floral decorations of the royal dinner table.—London Express.

Where Dr. Johnson Worked.

Dr. Johnson's house in Gough square, London, is a noble old piece of Queen Anne architecture, and in stripping the walls of their surfeit of paper and canvas and stuff the restorers came across several quaint old cupboards, and these have all been preserved with their original handles and mountings and add enormously to the domestic verisimilitude of the place. At the top may be seen the spacious garret, where the doctor kept his six clerks slaving away at the dictionary which first brought him fame; and alongside the house and the caretaker's lodge is the tiny garden which Carlyle in his essay on Johnson describes as rather larger than a bedquilt.

Saint Simon's Poverty.

St. Simon, the celebrated French author who wrote "The Reorganization of European Society," was twice driven by want to attempt his own life, and, although he died a natural death in the end, it was among the most lamentable surroundings. "For fifteen days," he says, writing to a friend just before the end came, "I have lived upon bread and water, without a fire. I have even sold my clothes."

Feminine Courage.

"Don't you think women are naturally more courageous than men?" challenged the champion of her sex.

"Of course," said the horrid cynic. "No man would ever dare to get off a car the way the average woman does."—New York Globe.

Otters as Fishers.

In some parts of India otters are used by the natives to catch fish for them. So rapid is the speed of the otter under water that no fish can escape them. When not working the otters are tied to stakes, like chained dogs.

Genius and Insanity.

Dr. R. Armstrong-Jones, chief medical officer at Claybury asylum, Woodford, England, in a lecture on the relation of genius to insanity, recently stated that he knew a man who could recite the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" from cover to cover, yet his mind continued to be of the nursery type, and he did not understand what he dramatically recited.

THE CLOWN'S CODE

How It Was Overcome by a Woman

By THOMAS L. MASSON

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

It was dusk when the old clown came in from his walk and slowly mounted the long stairs, which creaked mournfully with his weight. The fire in the wood stove had almost gone out. He put on another stick, turned on the draft and sat for some moments in silence, rubbing his attenuated hands.

Aided by long years of constant makeup, time had done its deadly work upon his face. The result was a network of involved lines—lines that crossed and recrossed and ran into one another, presenting a sort of curious facial puzzle. At a short distance these lines seemed to resolve themselves into a picture, in which, like a composite photograph, all the scenes of the man's life had left their traces.

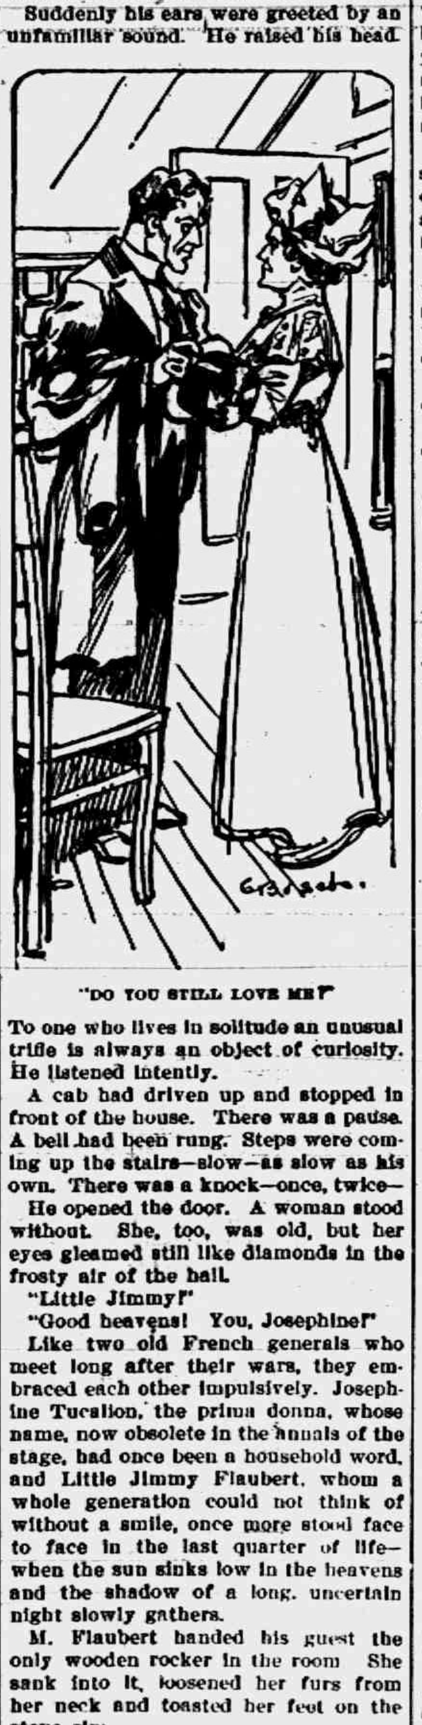
He went over to a battered leather trunk in the corner, opened it, took out a huge scrap book and began reading from its yellow pages. It contained the history of his many triumphs. It told in clippings—varying from a single sentence to pages with his picture in the center—the story of his stage career. These were some of the headlines:

"Flaubert Outdoes Himself."
"Flaubert, the Prince of Clowns."
"Flaubert Funnier Than Ever."
"The Inimitable Flaubert."
"Little Jimmie at His Best."

How many times had Flaubert read all this! Now, in the long obscurity of age that had come upon him, it was his only consolation. Once more he lived in the arena or on the immense stage of some hippodrome and performed his delightful antics, while blue eyed children clapped their hands in glee and childlike grownups forgot their dignity and renewed their youth.

The old man, absorbed in his occupation, read on and on, at times stopping to brush his cheek or blow his nose with a tattered silk handkerchief.

Suddenly his ears were greeted by an unfamiliar sound. He raised his head.



"DO YOU STILL LOVE ME?"

To one who lives in solitude an unusual trifle is always an object of curiosity. He listened intently.

A cab had driven up and stopped in front of the house. There was a pause. A bell had been rung. Steps were coming up the stairs—slow—as slow as his own. There was a knock—once, twice—

He opened the door. A woman stood without. She, too, was old, but her eyes gleamed still like diamonds in the frosty air of the hall.

"Little Jimmy!"

"Good heavens! You, Josephine!"

Like two old French generals who meet long after their wars, they embraced each other impulsively. Josephine Tucalion, the prima donna, whose name, now obsolete in the annals of the stage, had once been a household word, and Little Jimmy Flaubert, whom a whole generation could not think of without a smile, once more stood face to face in the last quarter of life—when the sun sinks low in the heavens and the shadow of a long, uncertain night slowly gathers.

M. Flaubert handed his guest the only wooden rocker in the room. She sank into it, loosened her furs from her neck and toasted her feet on the stove rim.

"Ah, my dear, what a search I have had for you! I went to Halbert, the son of your old manager. He did not know your address. He sent me to an agency. They had a record of the place you had lived in a year ago. From there I came here. Let me see. It must be twenty years since I have seen you."

For a time, like two voluble children, they disputed about dates. Then he said gently:

"But tell me of yourself, Josephine."

"Do you remember the night the emperor, carried away by his enthusiasm, invited me to his palace? And now it is all gone. A younger generation has come up, and those I lived with have all passed away. But you, Little Jimmy—you were foolish. Why did you not save your money? I lost much of mine. Still I have enough to live upon."

The clown smiled gayly.

"I am quite comfortable. It does not matter."

"Tut! You can't deceive an old friend. I suspected something. I"—

He betrayed an air of alarm.

"You did not come," he said, "for that, I hope—to—to"—

"Nonsense! I see you are the same as ever, as proud and vain as a peacock!" She rose suddenly. "Come, Little Jimmy; let us go out to dinner!"

He rose with her. There was anxiety in his voice.

"Oh, no, thank you," he said. "Really, Josephine, I cannot. I have another engagement this evening."

"Nonsense!" she repeated. "Come, Jimmy! You must!"

"I cannot. I"—

She put her hand up to his cheek and turned his face toward hers.

"See here, Little Jimmy," she said. "Do you still love me?"

"I have always loved you!"

"Of course; you cannot help it. That is why I came. We are two old people left alone in the world. Our triumphs are past. Our work is done. Our friends are dead. Why should we sit apart and mope? Come now! Be a good boy!"

"I cannot. I"—

Then, with a change as swift as lightning, the artist in her—all the combined impulsiveness and dramatic force of her nature—came over her.

"How dare you say that?" she said. "Who are you, pray, to refuse an invitation to dinner? Have I not often dined with you? Well, now you are to dine with me. You understand. Come. Where is your coat?"

She sprang to the tumbledown wardrobe, pulled out an old ulster and pressed it over him. Then, with an imperious gesture, she waved him out of the room into the hall, holding his faded silk hat in her hand.

He obeyed her without a word. Only in the cab he said:

"Dear me, Josephine, the years have not changed you, have they? I ought not to be doing this! Why, my dear, I have never dined as the guest of a woman in my life. It has always been a part of my code not to do so."

"Nonsense! You are too old now to have any code. Young sports like us no longer need a code. It is high time that some one took you in hand. Besides, I am not doing it for you. Don't you know that I have always been selfish? You are a good companion. There is none better, I am sure. And am I not all alone and lonesome? It is I, therefore, that you must blame. I need you!"

The lights in the restaurant, the laughter, the sudden return to a long vanished existence, acted upon Flaubert like a tonic. His face grew ten years younger. They sat in a far corner, remote from the music. No one knew them—two artists who once had ruled their world.

Her old habit came back upon her swiftly. She ordered the dinner without looking at the card—a thin soup, a small duck, a salad, a bottle of wine from the sunny vineyards of the Rhone.

It was wonderful, under the spell of their surroundings, to see them both relax. Story after story came from him. His observations of life, like old wine, had a flavor all their own.

At last she lifted the glass, half empty, to her lips.

"Come," she said; "let us drink to ourselves!"

"I drink, mademoiselle, to your wit, to your beauty, to your genius, for these are to me as fresh as ever."

"And I drink to the artist Flaubert, than whom there is none greater; also I drink to"— She looked at him steadily, fixedly, with that wonderful light in her eyes which yet remained undimmed at nearly threescore and ten. "Little Jimmy," she said, "I drink to us two. Let us never part again on earth!"

He lowered his glass.

"You know, my dear," he said, "I am quite poor."

"I have enough for both."

He laughed.

"Really, mademoiselle, I could hardly pay the clergyman."

"Dear me! I know one who will be pleased to do the slight service for nothing."

"You are in earnest?"

"Surely. And you consent?"

She put forth her hand.

"Josephine, I have always loved you. But"—

"Your hand."

He gave it under the spell of her eyes. They arose from the table. They threaded their way out of the restaurant. The attendant helped him on with his shabby ulster. The door was opened for them. They stood for an instant alone in the vestibule.

He bent over her.

"Josephine," he said, "promise me one thing. I know I am weak. I guess I'm growing old. But promise me that you'll never hold it up against me!"

"Don't you see that if I should it is you who could hold it up against me, for am I not the temptress? Tut, tut, my dear, it is just as it should be. It was my fault in the beginning. It was I who delayed matters."

Then he stooped and kissed her.

As he put her into the carriage with all the ease and grace of the Flaubert of old he turned to the coachman.

"Home," he said proudly.

INTEREST IN HORSE IS UNABATED DESPITE AUTOS

Evening Equine Show at State Fair Attracts Much Attention.

That the advent of the automobile in nowise has caused an abating of interest in the saddle and in the harness horse is evident from the attention the evening horse show at the Michigan State Fair attracts each year. A love for beautiful horses seems inherent in Americans, and no matter what new methods of locomotion are discovered or invented the horse still will have its place. An exceptional interest is being taken in the horse show at the Fair, Sept. 7-18 this year, and as a further stimulation the management makes known that additional awards are offered for these classes.

"Although the automobile gets one out in the open air, it does not furnish one with the exercise needed," said George W. Dickinson, general manager of the State Fair. "The canter in the park and along the boulevards which sets the blood a-dancing in one's veins is missed, and it is not long before the man who is cooped up with his business all day leaves his car in the garage and has his saddler brought round to him each morning. He is aware that exercise is needed to keep the human machinery working smoothly, and he knows of no more enjoyable way to get it than astride a mettled horse. This is one assurance that the horse has not lost its place."

KAISER ENTERS FRANCE

Three French Towns and Many Guns Captured.

BERLIN REPORTS BIG VICTORY

Three French Armies Are Moving Rapidly to Meet Attacks of Germans—Allies Said to Have Been Driven Back to Main Line of Defenses—Germans Capture City of Namur and Five of Its Forts—Allied Fleet Destroys Cattaro Fortifications—Reported Russian Army of 4,000,000 Crossing the Border.

LATEST WAR BULLETINS.

The Central News circulates a dispatch from Paris saying that an official communication given out in that city declares that German cavalrymen belonging to an independent division are operating on the extreme right and on the extreme left of the position of the allies.

A dispatch to the Excelsior from Courtrai says the kaiser's nephew, Count von Schwerin, has been taken prisoner. He was in command of a detachment of uhlans who reached Harlebeke. French chasseurs, informed of the presence of the Germans, arrived on the scene. They killed one of the Germans, wounded five and made the others prisoners.

A news dispatch from Cattaro says all the fortifications there have been destroyed by the allied fleet. The Austrians did not have time before the attack to strew the Gulf of Cattaro with mines.

An official announcement made public in Berlin says that the City of Namur and five of its forts have been captured by the Germans. The bombardment of the four other forts continues and their fall seems imminent.

A dispatch to the London Times from Ostend says 30,000 Germans are attacking Malines, thirteen miles southeast of Antwerp.

A dispatch to the London Times from Rome says the Italian premier, signor Salandra, assured a committee of deputies that no mobilization was imminent in Italy, and that if it did occur later it would not mean any abandonment of Italian neutrality.

A dispatch from The Hague to Paris Says the German press is beginning a campaign for the retention of Liege by Germany after the conclusion of peace.

An official announcement was made in Paris that Luneville, Amance and Dieulouard, in the department of Meurthe-et-Moselle, have been occupied by the Germans.

Japanese, British, Russian and French war ships have combined in a blockade of the port of Tsing-Tau, a German possession, simultaneously with the bombardment of the port by three Japanese squadrons. A Japanese expeditionary army of 45,000 men will be landed to seive the territory of Kiao Chow, owned by Germany.

In a dispatch from Paris the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company says the Excelsior publishes a message from Nish, Servia, saying that an Austrian monitor struck a mine in the Adriatic and was destroyed. The crew of the monitor perished. The location of the accident is given as between Orchava and Bazlach.

According to the St. Petersburg correspondent of Messagero the first line of the Russian army, now moving in force against the entire German Austrian frontier, numbers 4,000,000 men. He declares that a second army, almost as great, will move behind the first to reinforce it when needed. The correspondent adds that the czar is now at the front with the general staff.

A tramp steamer, believed to be an Austrian, was held up by a British cruiser just outside New York harbor.

Kaiser Victorious in Belgium.

LONDON — Armies of the allies defeated and in retreat in Belgium. France invaded by three huge German armies, one being commanded by the crown prince of the empire, three French towns in the hands of the enemy and German cannon thundering at the first line of France's ring of forts—this is the sum of the results of the effort of the French and British to halt the kaiser at Mons, Belgium.

Austrian Troops Move on Italy.

ROME — The Secolo says that notwithstanding the denials of the Austrian government, certain Austrian troops are massing on the Italian frontier. The movements were discreet at first, but orders from Vienna in the last forty-eight hours compelled precipitate action, the effects of which were visible at Trent, where there is an incessant movement of troops. The paper adds that there are also 80,000 Austrian troops at Innsbruck.

Berlin Reports Great Victory.

Berlin reports a great victory over five French army corps which were assailed near Luneville by Germans in huge force, commanded by the crown prince of Germany, Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria and Duke Albrecht of Wurtemberg. It is asserted that the French are in precipitate retreat from Longwy, under pursuit by the German crown prince.

GOING TO THE FRONT

Times Says Battle Continues.

LONDON — In its summary of the war situation the London Times states:

"Namur has fallen. This, in the words of the official communication, necessitates the withdrawal of a portion of the allied troops from the line of Sambre to their original defensive position on the French frontier.

"The French ministry of war, in an official statement, reminds the nation that the huge extent of front along which the armies are engaged and the enormous number of troops upon that front make it impossible to estimate the losses.

"The battle now raging from Mons to Cere will last several days, and it will be necessary to await a definite result before a sound conclusion can be reached as to the full effect of this first great engagement."

France Issues Announcement.

PARIS — The French wra office issued the following announcement:

"The French and English, the plan of attack having failed owing to unforeseen difficulties, have retired on the covering positions.

"West of the Meuse the English army on our left was attacked by the Germans, but behaved admirably, holding its ground with traditional steadiness.

"The French assumed the offensive with two army corps. An African brigade in the front line, carried away by their eagerness, were received by a murderous fire.

"They did not give an inch, but counter attacked by the Prussian guard, they were obliged to retire, only, however, after inflicting enormous losses. The Prussian guard especially suffered heavily.

"East of the Meuse our troops advanced across a difficult country and made a vigorous attack when they emerged from the woods, but were obliged to fall back after a stiff fight south of the River Semois.

"On order of General Joffre our troops and the British troops withdrew to the covering positions.

"Our troops are intact; our cavalry has in no way suffered, and our artillery has affirmed its superiority. Our officers and soldiers are in the best condition, morally and physically.

"As a result of the orders which have been [illegible] the aspect of the struggle will change for a few days.

"The French army will remain for a time on the defensive, but at the right moment, to be decided upon by the commander in chief, it will resume a vigorous offensive.

"Our losses are heavy. It would be premature to enumerate them. It would be equally so to enumerate those of the Germans, who suffered so heavily that they were obliged to abandon their counter attacks and establish themselves in fresh position in Lorraine."

PARIS — Three hundred locomotives from the railroads of Belgium were brought to Paris to prevent them being used by the Germans.

JAPAN'S WAR ON GERMANY OPENS

Fleets Sent to Tsingtau to Capture Fort.

SPEEDY CAPTURE EXPECTED

Mikado Sends Squadrons to Reduce German Forts in Klauchau—All news Is Withheld—Spirits of Imperial Ancestors Informed of War—Good Omen Seen.

TOKIO — Japan is directing three squadrons against the German province of Kiauchau and the German war ships in eastern waters. Vice Admiral Tomosaburo Kato has been appointed commander in chief of the first squadron, which will carry out the main offensive movement against Germany. Vice Admiral Sadakichi Kato will command the second squadron and Rear Admiral Tsuchiya the third.

The first and second squadrons will operate against Kiauchau, while the third will be used to patrol the Chinese coast and to watch for any German cruisers that may elude the blockading fleet.

All News Withheld.

News of the progress of the Kiauchau expedition is withheld. Whether an attack has already been [illegible] is known only to the government, which promises an official [illegible] "when there is news to communicate." But it is considered certain that reduction of the fortifications has already begun.

Unanimous approval of the war, which is calmly and dispassionately discussed, summarizes public opinion. The newspapers express regret over the necessity of hostilities with Germany, and urge the public to refrain from exhibiting resentment toward the Germans in Japan.

They print messages of cheer to the army and navy, who, they hope, will be quickly victorious. An imperial messenger went to the Shrines of Ise to inform the spirits of the imperial ancestors of Japan's declaration of war. It is announced that a flock of white doves descended on the roof of the imperial sanctuary at the moment of the expiration of the ultimatum to Germany, and this is accepted as an omen of speedy victory.

POLES WIN INDEPENDENCE

Granted Freedom by Czar For Loyalty in Present Crisis.

CHICAGO, ILL. — Information has been received by the Polish Daily Zgoda from Poles in Europe that Czar Nicholas has granted complete independence to Russian Poland, withdrawing all Russian civil and military authorities and permitting the establishment of a Polish government.

"Our information is that a Polish government has been established at Warsaw," said Louis Lesnicki, editor of the Zgoda. "The czar promised that if the Russian Poles stood by the empire in the war with Germany Austria independence will be granted."

NEW YORK — Count Johann von Bernstorff, German ambassador to the United States, announced upon his arrival here from Rotterdam that his government had been informed that Russian civil and military authorities had withdrawn from Poland and that the Poles had set up an independent government with Warsaw as its capital.

U. S. Demands War Law Respect.

PARIS — A dispatch to the Havas agency from Ypres, Belgium, near Bruges, affirms that Brand Whitlock, the American minister to Belgium, who accompanied the burgomaster to meet the Germans, who were entering Brussels, informed the commander of the German forces that the United States had charged him to take Brussels under his protection and insure the observance of the laws of war.

Passes Marine Risk Bill.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The senate passed the emergency war risk marine insurance bill, after two hours' debate. The measure appropriates $5,000,000 to insure American vessels and cargoes against the hazards of war. During its passage it was amended so as to prevent the government from continuing in the marine insurance business at the close of the European hostilities.

MANDAMUS SUIT TOO LATE

State Department Denies Refusal to Furnish Supervisor List.

LANSING, MICH. — The state department does not seem to be worried over the mandamus proceedings in the Saginaw courts, said to have been brought by the Saginaw county committee to compel the department to furnish a list of the supervisors of the state.

Deputy D. H. Mills, who was in charge of the office when the demand was made for the list, says the applicant was informed that the list could not be gotten ready for several days. This did not seem satisfactory and the applicant, a young lady, left the office.

If the mandamus is issued it cannot be served until too late for the list to be any good.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FRESHET FERTILIZES THIS FARMER'S FIELD

Peat Masses Disintegrate, Land Again Productive.

MASON, MICH. — William C. Keller of Delhi is the recipient of enough fertilizer to cover a ten-acre lot, and a peculiar freak of nature placed it on the field in bulk.

The field, part of a heavily timbered section bought from the government in 1836, had been in a high state of cultivation for forty years, but during the heavy floods three years ago water stood there several weeks. During that time three huge masses, resembling whales, were seen floating in the field, with about half their bulk above the water. It was thought they were tree trunks heavily crusted with mud, but when the waters subsided it was found they were composed of a substance resembling peat. The land had never been drained, a strata of sand under the surface carrying off all superfluous water.

After this flood the soil became unproductive until Mr. Keller saw this spring that by exposure to the elements the peat masses had disintegrated into a rich compost and utilized it as fertilizer.

GNATS GIVE FIREMEN RUN

Gilded Cross of Church Spire Attracts Millions of Insects.

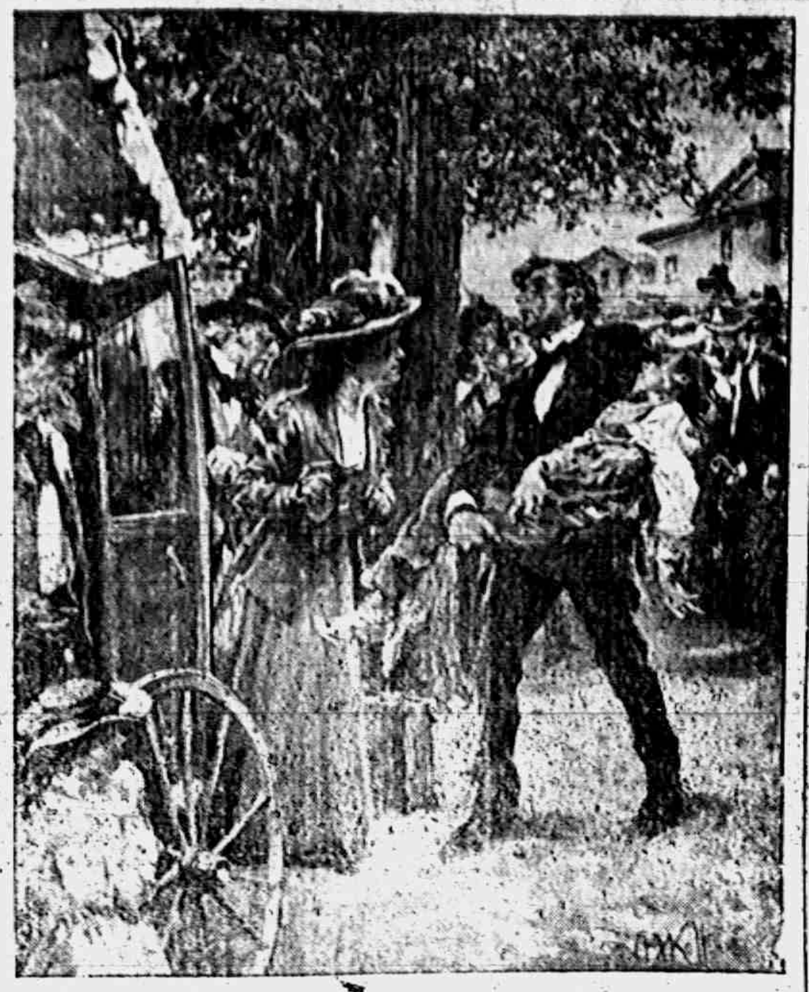
ESCANABA, MICH. — Citizens passing the church of St. Joseph noted what seemed to be smoke emerging from the tip of the gilded cross at the top of the spire. Believing that the building was afire and the smoke was finding its way out the steeple, the fire department was notified.

After a close investigation which failed to reveal a trace of flame, the phenomenon was studied out. With a pair of field glasses the apparent smoke was found to be a mass of tiny gnats hovering around the cross. With every movement of the air they would sway back and forth, imitating smoke wreaths perfectly. The same phenomenon was noted at the spires of several other city churches.

Fiction and Fact.

In the novels the husband strolls into the conservatory for a little smoke before dinner.

In real life he strolls into the kitchen and raises blue blazes with the light of his life because dinner isn't ready.



"THE CALLING OF DAN MATHEWS" AT THE BARDLEY OPERA HOUSE, FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 4

THE CALLING OF DAN MATTHEWS.

The dramatization of "The Calling of Dan Matthews," which comes to the Bradley Opera House on Friday Sept. 4 is so well know as a book that it is utterly unnecessary to give a detailed description of the plot, as every reader of Harold Bell Wright's stories and their name is legion, has read "The Calling of Dan Matthews."

In it, we find the familiar and well loved scenes, faces and names we met with in the "Shepherd of the Hills." The play belongs to the twentieth century and like all of Mr. Wright's stories, when put into playing form makes an intensely interesting and powerful acting drama. Mr. Wright's characters when produced behind the footlight are always true to life, as the author himself is a magnificent delineator of character and never fails to imbue his men and women with a realism seldom equalled by the modern playwright. The play is in four acts, each one growing more interesting, as the drama draws to a close, and while serious in theme, it has a powerful vein of comedy that lightens it and acts as a base of relief to the stronger and more intense scenes of the drama. "The Calling of Dan Matthews" has been dramatized by Mr. Wright and Elsbery W. Reynolds, and is produced by the well-known firm of theatrical managers, Messrs. Gaskill and MacVitty, who have already given us "The Shepherd of the Hills" and "That Printer of Udell's," and have established for themselves an enviable reputation for sincerity of detail, and a desire to furnish for their various productions actors of merit ability, and scenic equipment far above the ordinary.

Both in its company of players and scenic production "The Calling of Dan Matthews" bids fair to outshine any previous attempt by these popular producers; and to those theatre goers who take pleasure in a splendid play, mounted with care and cast with a company far above the average. "The Calling of Dan Matthews" will make a very powerful appeal.

ADRIAN TO ENTERTAIN STATE FEDERATION OF CLUBS.

The Week of October 20.

The Federation of Woman Clubs will be held in Adrian in October. This is quite an honor for Adrian as it is the smallest city that has ever entertained the Federation.

The Adrian ladies are already busy with preparations for the event. A noticeable feature is that the ladies have raised sufficient money during the last year to finance this meeting without calling on the business men for assistance.

DINNER PARTY

Miss Edyth Shull was hostess to twenty young ladies at a dinner party Thursday evening. The house was prettily decorated with pink cosmos. Miss Emma Bailey of Mississippi a talented violinist accompanied on the piano by Miss Shull favored the company with several selections.

During the dinner hour music was rendered by the Victrola. Cards furnished the amusement of the evening. Misses Zella Mills and Minnie Mulyaney being the prize winners.

35 YEARS AGO.

August 28, 1879.

Wm. Cupples, Jr. left home yesterday for Galeburg, Mich., where he has been engaged to take charge of the public schools for the ensuing year. He filled the place last year to good acceptance and retains the same position another year.

H. W. Stevens stared for Cincinnati this morning for another lot of the Emerson & Fisher buggies.

Richard Caldwell shipped to Ireland yesterday an invalids chair which he had just finished. It is made with wheels on each side, and a step for the feet so that the occupant can propel himself. He is sending it to an invalid brother. Such a chair in Dublin would cost $50 and the cost of this chair and transportation will not exceed half that sum. So it pays our Irish neighbors to send to Michigan for their chairs as well as for their flour and hog wringers.

Miss Dena Heesen and Cora Kilburn are rusticating at Dundee this week.

We called on John F. Murry yesterday, and inspected his new type writer. As it is the first machine brought into Tecumseh, it naturally excites considerable curiosity. His is a No 4 perfected type writer, and has some improvements making it much better than the old style.

Co. C left for camp at Adrian yesterday afternoon, about sixty strong. The boys looked fine and departed feeling well. Col. Fitzsimmons has so far recovered his health as to be able to attend the encampment, and he went out with Co. C yesterday afternoon.

Wm. Hayden, last Tuesday evening was standing by Ford's meat market, when a shot from the target gun on Railroad St. hit him on the leg and piercing the cloth of his pants, striking a pocketbook throwing it off. These shooting this gun should be more careful, or its use should be prohibited.

THE MILL TAX

By a change in the school law, made last winter, the two mill tax as heretofore assessed, has been reduced to one mill. The tax law was also amended, making it obligatory upon supervisors to assess all property at its full cash value.

UPDIKE REUNION

Another pleasant memory added to our list, was the Updike family reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Keyser three and one-half miles northwest of Tecumseh on Saturday, Aug 22.

Relatives from at home and away to the number of 45 gathered early in the day and a bounteous dinner and supper were served under awnings erected for the occasion.

A perfect day, an unusally jolly crowd and an afternoon of sports and visiting made the day one long to be remembered.

The same occasion in 1915 will be held at the home of James Hause in Clinton.

Fountain Pens Old.

If fountain pens have not attained perfection in the present day it is not because their youth warrants their indiscretions, for, according to a writer in the Pall Mall Gazette (London), this form of combined ink reservoir and pen has been in use for over 300 years. E. S. Bates in his "Touring In 1600" shows, he says, that travelers wrote with them at that time. In the following century they appear to have been in common use, a dictionary published in 1754 defining "fountain pen" as "a pen made of silver, brass, etc., contrived to contain a considerable quantity of ink and let it flow out by degrees. To use the pen the cover must be taken off and the pen a little shaken to make the ink run more freely." British patents were obtained for fountain pens in 1809, one being granted to Joseph Bramah of Rock fame and another to F. H. Foelsch for a stylographic as well as a fountain pen.

Tactful Dam Builder.

In speaking of the river regulations of the ancients Sir William Willcocks, the noted English engineer, said: "Cyrus the Great controlled the Gyndes, a tributary of the Tigris, in a truly original manner. Babylonia was already peopled, and lands were needed for his Persian troops. The Gyndes discharges 40,000 section feet and runs thirty feet deep in a sandy and mobile bed. He could build no regulator, so he dug thirty canals, divided the waters of the river among them, closed the river by an earthen dam and completely controlled it. As he could never have induced his wild soldiers to dig these canals for any useful purpose, he took advantage of the fact that his favorite horse had been drowned in the flood and urged his soldiers to dig the canals and dissipate the waters of the river in such a fashion that it could never again drown a horse."—Detroit Free Press.

W. C. Witherell, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I had acute pains across the small of my back and in my hips. Often, after stooping a sharp twinge darted through my loins, obliging me to lie down. I was laid in bed for several days and I believe that the trouble was caused by excessive stooping. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills I got a supply at Wright & Sons Drug store and a few boxes restored me to good health. Since then, whenever I have felt in need of a kidney medicine, I have taken Doan's Kidneys Pills and the results have been very pleasing. I have had no reason to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills which I expressed some years ago." Price 50c at all dealers. What Saved the Home.

In the American Magazine a man who has had twenty-five years' matrimonial experience says that he and his wife were growing farther apart and constantly quarreling. The family would have been wrecked had it not been for two things, which he describes as follows:

"First was the baby—a healthy, charming child—to whom we were intensely devoted. For months the baby was about the only subject we could agree upon. The other safeguard was our sense of humor. I have since thought that no two persons should marry unless one or the other has a sense of humor. With us the sense of humor usually came to the rescue at the most trying times. One or the other of us would be struck with the ludicrous feature of our quarrel and laugh, and pretty soon we made up."

A Mannish Lady.

An eccentric lady who was a source of great amusement to the then Prince of Wales in those earlier years was Lady Sophia Macnamara, who is described in "On the Track of the Great."

She was the most independent woman I have ever met—robust and breezy, wont to wear a hat of the kind we christened the "hard boiled egg"—an uncompromising looking plain straw hat, such as men wear, without any decoration whatsoever. Of an evening she used to sit next the heir to the British throne, listening to the music, wearing her "hard boiled egg" and smoking a big cigar, and when that was finished she would light and smoke a second. One couldn't help admiring a woman who was so absolutely indifferent to conventionalism.

A Necktie For Fish Bait.

Cigarette papers trailed in the manner of a "spinner" seem a queer bait for mackerel, but navy men have used cigarette papers with deadly effect in Dover bay. You can, in fact, catch mackerel with anything bright when they are on the run. Perhaps the best of all baits for them is a strip of skin cut from one of their captured brethren.

A piece of tin or lead foil is effective, and I once knew a man who came back from mackerel fishing without a vividly colored necktie that he rather fancied. It had made an excellent lure for the fish. Is it that the mackerel is conscious of his own brilliant coloring and therefore will take any bait with a gleam about it?—London Standard.

Simplicity In Higher Life.

The higher we rise the simpler we become. There is a childhood into which we have to grow, just as there is a childhood which we must leave behind; a childlikeness which is the highest gain of humanity and a childishness from which but few of those who are counted the wisest among men have freed themselves in their imagined progress toward the reality of things.—George Macdonald.

Fooled Her.

Boarder—I found something in my bedroom last night, madam, and—

Landlady (indignantly) — There's no such thing in the house. You must have brought it in with you. Boarder—Ah, perhaps I did—it was a five dollar bill.

Russian Children.

A Russian is not of age until he is twenty-six years old. Until that time at least four-fifths of his earnings must go to his parents.

Didn't Lack Humor.

"You never laugh, Myrtle. You seem to have no sense of humor."

"My dear, it's not my humor; it's my teeth."—Smart Set.

Usefulness is greatness; there is none other.—Rev. Charles R. Brown.

That Weak Back

accompanied by pain here or there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—may be faint spells—or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering from that change into middle life which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases of women.

DR. PIERCE'S

has successfully treated more cases in past forty years than any other known remedy. It can now be had in sugar-coated, tablet form as well as in the liquid. Sold by medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps.

Miss Elizabeth Lordahl of Berkeley, Cal., in a recent letter to Dr. Pierce said: "I was completely broken down in health, I was aching and had pains all over my body and was so nervous that I could scream if anyone talked to me, but I had the good fortune to meet a nurse who had been cured by Dr. Pierce's Prescription. I have never had an occasion to consult a physician since—am in excellent health."
